BOBBY ARMSTRONG SENDS GREETINGS TO LOCAL HOCKEY FANS

Yesterday the Examiner stated that Bobby Armstrong, the star of the 247th hockey team last year, was overseas, instead of being with the Royal Flying Corps at the Mohawk Camp as a number of newspapers had claimed. To-day a member of the Examiner staff received a letter from the crack centre man. He is with B Company, 7th Canadian Reserve Battalion, Seaford, Sussex, England. In his letter he sends his respects to the Peterborough hockey fans, as follows:

"Best of luck to Peterborough hockey, also to all the fans. Hope your junior team pulls out with the flag. Wish I was there to see them go, although I have hopes of being back some time in the 'distant' future."

Bob says that his bunch are getting plenty of drill, but adds: "It is a whole lot better over here than what one is given to understand in Canada, and I am more than satisfied."

In his letter he speaks of having had a chance to visit his sister, who is a nurse in one of the Canadian Hospitals in London.

Two Well Matched Teams Are Lindsay And Peterborough Juniors

Hockey fans are looking forward with a great deal of interest to the junior battle on Friday night, when the Lindsay and Peterborough junior O.H.A. outfits will clash in the last of four games for the district title. Two such evenly matched teams have not come together in this district for a long time, as the figures of the games already played show that although the Petes managed to win two out of the three, yet the two teams played each other to a draw as far as the number of goals scored is concerned.

Friday's game will settle the argument and decide which team is to go into the second round and meet the Oshawa team or the winners of the Kingston-Belleville group.

Both outfits are confident. The Lindsay aggregation expect to follow the example set by the Petes last Friday night and win the honours on their opponent's ice. However, if the red, white and blue lads get working together and improve in their methods around the nets, they should be able to put the Midgets into the discard until next year.

Any way you look at it, however, the game will be a royal battle, and Cap. Simpson, Pete Spratt, Moose Carew and many other Lindsay enthusiasts will be here to root for their pets.

The Peterborough line-up will undoubtedly be the same as in the last two games. The team will practise to-night at 7 o'clock and every regular is asked to be out.

Lindsay Won Group District Cup Honours By Score of 34-33

By the score 34 to 33, Lindsay's District Cup rinks defeated Peterborough this morning in a hard, close game that was anybody's until the last stone had come to rest.

The teams were as follows:

PETERBORO	LINDSAY.
J. McCabe	D. Adams
P. D. Fitzgerald	C. Williams
J. W. McDermid	J. Anderson
R. P. Best	W. Carley
Skip—16	Skip—16

Archibald — x1x1xx0x132x3x1xx3—17
Beal— 21x321x1xxx1x1x51x—18

The final result hinged on the last stones in the Best-Carley game. Both rinks got away at 8 a.m. and Lindsay opened up a nice lead that was all but closed up by Best's four-end, and Archibald's double three. But Lindsay pulled together and closed as strongly as they opened. It was a hard series to lose, but Lindsay was forced to its best paces to win. Thus they walked off with the group honours in the Tankard and District Cup competitions.

The other games resulted as follows:

GOOD GAMES IN CHURCH HOCKEY LEAGUE

Knox and St. Andrew's will play Mark street at 9.15 o'clock.

Both games should be fast, as Mark street and St. Paul's and All Saints' will have a much stronger line-up.

Mr. Jerry Coughlin will referee.

CURLING

The return games with the Toronto Victorias will be played in Toronto to-morrow.

The Peterborough skips will be Messrs. T. F. Matthews, R. M. Waddell, W. D. Campbell, J. W. McDermid, and R. G. Sturgeon.

Officers of Lansdowne Lodge Are Installed

The annual meeting for the installation of Lansdowne Lodge, S.O.E., took place last Monday evening, Jan. 21st, in the S. O. E. hall. There was a good attendance and District Deputy Harry Beal conducted the installation ceremonies. There was a lively interest taken in the meeting, and after routine business had been disposed of Bro. H. Beal took charge of the meeting.

The financial statement for the year ending 1918 showed a good balance on the right side of the ledger.

Lansdowne Lodge has made progress both numerically and financially during the past year, despite the extraordinary conditions caused by the war, and looks forward hopefully for continued progress in 1918. A large part of the Lodge Funds has been invested in War Loan Certificates, thus combining patriotism with business. The following officers were elected and installed, each being exhorted to faithfully perform the duties devolving upon them.:

Wor. Pres.—Bro. A. Follis.
Wor. V. Pres.—Bro. B. Lemmon.
Wor. Past Pres.—Bro. E. Kitney.
Wor. Fin.-Sec.—Bro. W. G. Shiner.
Wor. Rec.-Sec.—Bro. A. Kingdon.
Wor. Chaplain—Bro. P. Webb.
Wor. Treasurer—Bro. C. Wood.
1st—Committeeman—Bro. F. Rathbone.
2nd Committeeman—Bro. A. Hope.
3rd Committeeman—Bro. H. Sowden.
4th Committeeman—Bro. A. Frick.
5th Committeeman—Bro. H. Bromley.
6th Committeeman—Bro. W. D. Roberts.
In. Guard—Bro. Jas. Runnett.
Out Guard—Bro. J. Townsend.
Hall Trustees—Bros. R. Waram, F. Rathbone and C. Wood.
Trustees—Bros. R. Tivey and D. Curtis.
Delegates to Sup. Lodge—W. G. Shiner.
Lodge Physician—Dr. D. C. King.
Auditors—Bros. H. Beal, R. Waram, S. F. Kitney.
District Deputy—Bro. H. Beal.

The installation being over the members gathered around the Festive Board, where a sumptuous repast had been provided by Messrs. Coleman Brothers in their usual first-class manner. Supper being over, the members enjoyed a social hour in song and story, to the delight of all.

Bro. H. Sowden brought down the house in a clever recitation and responded to an encore with several sones.

Mr. Charles Coleman delighted all with several comic songs.

Bro. Townsend sang "The Song that Reached My Heart" and all contributed to make the evening both pleasant and profitable.

The members dispersed in the wee sma' hours by singing the National Anthem.

NEW YORK, Jan. 18.—Food for horses and cattle in this section has become as scarce as a result of the railroad congestion that "a famine which may result disastrously" is imminent, according to Thomas F. Freel, superintendent of the American Society for the Prevention of Cruelty to Animals.

County Declines To Assume Good Roads Scheme

The Roads and Bridges Committee of the County Council, which is composed of all the members, with Mr. McIntosh, of North Monaghan, chairman, decided this morning to take no action in the Government's good roads policy. This subject has been discussed annually since prewar days, and it may be said that if there has been any crystallisation of thought it has been adverse rather than favourable to the project.

Warden Anderson and Deputy-Reeve Eason of Otonabee were delayed more than an hour in reaching the city this morning, due to a blockade on the line below Hastings, where a wheel off a freight car caused a temporary tie-up. After waiting patiently, the Council elected Reeve Bullied to the position, and until the Warden arrived he acted as chairman of the Council.

Reeve Fitzgerald of Lakefield, supported by Reeve Holland of Ennismore, made an unsupported attempt to induce the Council to increase the grant to continuation schools by 25 per cent. of the sum that is now contributed. The idea received its annual defeat.

"We are educating many pupils from the county in our school at Lakefield. We have nine teachers in training at the Normal School. This county needs teachers, and when we ask for increased aid we feel that the County should be prepared to help us."

The other councillors were unmoved by this appeal.

Inspector Lees urged the Council to send representatives to the Teachers' Convention in Toronto at Easter.

To the Editor of The Examiner.

Sirs,—On Monday evening next the citizens of Peterborough will have an opportunity of hearing Miss Lillian Dillingham in a song-lecture, to be held in St. Paul's Church. While attached to No. 3 Stationary Hospital on the Western Front, it was my privilege to hear Miss Dillingham, and I can assure you a treat is in store for all those who are fortunate enough to hear her on Monday evening next. Wounded men were carried on stretchers to hear this talented artiste, and her cheering influence was felt at more than one hospital centre on the Western battle front. Miss Dillingham came in contact with men of all ranks and all conditions. I would respectfully urge as many citizens as can possibly attend to turn out next Monday night and hear this well-known singer.

Sincerely yours,
Mrs. M. K. Douglas,
Nursing Sister.

ASK FOR CONTROL OF PACKING TRADE

WASHINGTON, Jan. 21.—President Wilson was urged to take over all the packing plants of the country for Government operation as a war measure in the interests not only of the nation but of the packing house employees in Chicago, Omaha, Kansas City, and East St. Louis.

The appeal was made to the President by a delegation of leaders of the various crafts employed in the packing plants who told him that unless conditions of which labourers in the packing plants complained were not quickly remedied the men might be forced to strike.

Mr. Gompers, introducing the delegation to the President, said there was so great a condition of industrial unrest in the packing houses that the labour leaders feared they would not longer be able to hold the workmen in line unless the conditions they complained of were remedied. They believed the surest remedy would be for the Federal Government to commandeer and operate all the great packing plants. The alleged objectionable conditions were brutal treatment, low pay, and long hours.

NORTHCLIFFE HAS COMPLEX TASK IN NEW CAMPAIGN

Large Part of the Army Looks Upon Gen. Robertson as a Good Soldier—Believe There Are No Differences Between General Staff and War Cabinet.

CHARGES THAT REGULARS ARE GIVEN PROMOTIONS

LONDON, Jan. 24.—In opening the campaign against General Robertson, chief of staff, Lord Northcliffe is tackling a much more complex problem than when he attacked Lord Kitchener. The latter was still a popular fetish but his most fervent admirers, in circles where the facts were known, believed that his best work, for which he was particularly fitted, had been done and splendidly done.

Robertson has not the same popularity as Kitchener, and the crowds may not burn the Daily Mail for his sake. The general public, however, which in these matters draws its impressions from the army, which now forms so large a part of the nation, looks upon him as a good soldier.

REGULARS GOT PREFERENCE

Robertson is charged by Lovat Fraser, whose views the Daily Mail is careful not to espouse in their entirely, with being the representative of the caste system of the old regular army. That officers of the territorial and new army battalions are confined to regimental duties, while staff appointments are regarded as the prerogative of the old regulars, is one way of stating the charge. Another way is to say that whereas the regular officers are but three per cent. of the total number of officers in the present British armies they occupy eighty per cent. of the staff positions. A third way is to assert that only regular officers ever get beyond the rank of brigadier general.

REPINGTON'S CRITICISM.

The Morning Post's announcement that Colonel Repington has become the miltary correspondent of that paper was printed on the same page as an editorial denouncing Lovat Fraser's condemnation of the Imperial General Staff in the Daily Mail, as a "wild farrage." Meanwhile the responsibility for suppressing the Cambrai report has been again accepted by the War Cabinet. Colonel Repington has for many months been vehemently urging enormous increases in the military forces by drastic means which the War Cabinet have thought unwise, and perhaps impossible, as proved by measures that they are actually now taking and which are passing through Parliament this week.

Support of Repington's programme therefore, would have been equivalent to hostility to the Government programme. The Morning Post has been conspicuous as consistently hostile to Lloyd George so far as alleged differences between the Imperial General Staff and the War Cabinet are concerned, such differences are believed to be largely mythical.

It is noteworthy that the Times has held strictly aloof from such polemics

STEEL PRODUCTS SHOW DECLINE

Steel Manufacturers Will Be Assisted by the Government

In its summary of the iron, steel, metal and machinery markets for the week, Canadian Machinery and Manufacturing News, Toronto, makes the following observations:

Although the very severe weather has passed, its effect is still being felt in industrial circles more particularly on account of the continued freight congestion. The lack of adequate transportation facilities aggravated by the severe climatic conditions has increased the already acute shortage of raw materials. It will be some time before the industrial situation is normal, notwithstanding the efforts that are being made to ameliorate conditions. The coal shortage is particularly acute and the shortage of cars appears to be the primary reason. For the same reason there is a shortage of coke which is curtailing the output of iron and steel. On account of the serious shortage of steel, the steel manufacturers have agreed to increase production by 20 per cent. over the 1916 output, providing adequate supplies of raw materials are available. The Dominion Government proposes to assist the steel men in the attainment of this object. If the mills are able to increase production to this extent, the shortage will be materially relieved in so far as certain products are concerned. The outlook in regard clinedto steel products imported from the States, however, is not so hopeful. Prices of steel plates, black and galvanised sheets and Canada plates have declined due to the lower prices on these products prevailing in the States. Prices on all other steel products are firm and unchanged. There has been a general advance in the prices of lubricating oils and compounds, ranging from 3c to 8c per gallon. Copper, antimony, and aluminium are weaker and quotations lower. There is no improvement in the tin situation, which continues acute. The machine tool market continues steady, with a firm volume of business.

Dislike For Food

Every healthy man and woman should have a natural desire for food at meal times. This means that the digestion is in working order and that the blood is in good condition. But if you feel a dislike for food—if the sight and smell of wholesome food repels you—then you may be sure that nature is telling you that all is not well. If after a night's rest you have no appetite for breakfast, your digestion requires attention. If your food is distasteful, or if you feel that it is a trouble to eat, your stomach is rebelling. You do no digest properly the food you are taking and are therefore not hungry.

All these symptoms of a disordered digestion mean that the blood is not absorbing proper nourishment from the food, for the work of the blood is to collect proper nourishment from food and impart it to the system. The stomach tries to refuse food the nutriment from which the blood cannot absorb, and this causes the lack of appetite. If you force yourself to eat, the undigested food becomes a clog to the system. Nature is warning you. Dr. Williams' Pink Pills alone give the blood the richness and purity that it requires to perform its natural function. That is why Dr. Williams' Pink Pills cure the most obstinate cases of indigestion—why they will cure any trouble due to poor blood.

You can get these pills through any medicine dealer or by mail at 50 cents a box or six boxes for $2.50 from The Dr. Williams' Medicine Co., Brockville, Ont.

GRAIN MARKET

The car situation, so far as the grain trade is concerned, is worse than before the recent storms, when it was about as bad as it could be, barring a total embargo. The result is that, while there is an urgent milling demand for wheat, scarcely any is to be had. In addition to the transportation difficulty, farmers are holding their wheat, scarcely any deliveries being made. The same conditions apply to all the grains. The keenest demand, but very little offering of any kind.

Destroyers' Bold Fight Led To Sinking Of Former German Cruiser

Story of Last Sunday's Naval Battle—Seaplanes Joined in the Attack on Former German Cruisers—Goeben Sighted the Monitors.

SHORE BATTERIES REPLY

LONDON, January 24.—The British destroyer Lizard was about two miles from the northeasterly point of the Island of Imbrose on patrol duty at 5.20 o'clock last Sunday morning when it sighted the warships Goeben and Breslau (Sultan Selim and Midullu), says an official statement from the Admiralty giving a detailed report of the engagement which resulted in the loss of the Breslau and the beaching of the damaged Goeben.

The Breslau was steaming in a northerly direction to the south and east of Cape Cephalo, followed shortly by the Goeben, which was about a mile astern. The Lizard at once gave the alarm and, opening fire, it proceeded to keep in close touch as possible with the enemy ships. The Goeben and Breslau engaged the Lizard at about 11,000 yards, shooting over her without hitting.

Goeben Sights Monitors.

The Goeben sighted British monitors in Kusu Bay, on the northwest corner of Imbros, and engaged them, the Breslau continuing to fight the Lizard, which was prevented from closing to torpedo range because of the accuracy of the enemy's fire at the shorter range. The destroyer Tigress now joined the Lizard, and the two destroyers endeavoured to cover the monitors by forming a smoke screen, in attempting which they were subject to an accurate fire from the Goeben.

Meanwhile, the British monitor Raglan had been hit heavily, and sank. The small monitor M-28, which was on fire amidships, blew up, and finally disappeared about 6 a.m. The enemy then ceased his fire and altered his course to the southward.

Observing trawlers coming to the assistance of the monitors, the Tigress and Lizard followed the enemy. At 7 a.m., when the Breslau was about six miles south of Cephalo, a large explosion was observed three minutes later three more explosions took place, and at ten minutes past seven she sank by the stern, keeling over as she went down.

Goeben Flees.

On seeing the Breslau sink, the Goeben turned and circled round her once, and then continued on a southerly course. Immediately after this four enemy destroyers were sighted coming out of the Dardanelles, supported by an old Turkish cruiser. The Tigress and Lizard at once engaged the enemy destroyers which hurriedly retired up the straits, the nearest one being hit repeatedly and set on fire.

The Goeben continued a southerly course until an attack by British aircraft forced her to alter her course and head for the Dardanelles.

In the act of turning she struck a mine, which caused her to settle down aft with a list of ten to fifteen degrees, which considerably reduced her speed. She proceeded slowly up the Dardanelles, escorted by enemy seaplanes and the four Turkish destroyers which had returned to her assistance.

British aircraft attacked the Goeben repeatedly, and obtained two direct hits when she was off Chanak. The Goben was now in such a damaged condition that she was steered for the shore, and beached at the extreme end of the Niagara Point about one hundred yards from the lighthouse. Shortly after she was beached two more direct hits were made on her by the aircraft, who were engaged heavily by several enemy seaplanes. In the encounters which took place one of the British seaplanes failed to return.

Shore Batteries Reply.

Two shore batteries at Capelles then opened an accurate fire on the Tigress and Lizard, who had been following the Goeben, and in view of the activity of the British naval aircraft, the two destroyers retired out of range and proceeded to rescue the survivors of the Breslau. During these operations the destroyer Tigress hunted the submarine.

"German survivors from the Breslau," says the official statement, "expressed their intense dislike for the Turks, and said they had hoped to be sent back to Germany on the Goeben's return to Constantinople after the raid.

"Our aircraft reported Monday afternoon that the Goeben was still ashore, in the same position, and that she was still being bombed."

The British destroyers Lizard and Tigress are sister ships, having been built in 1910. Their tonnage is 750, and they are 240 feet in length. The Goeben measured 22,635 tons, and the Breslau 4,478 tons.

Arts and Crafts Column

HUGHSON JOHNSTONE, painter and decorator, 416 Water street, will answer in this column each Wednesday for Examiner readers, questions relating to painting, sign-writing, paper-hanging, kalsomining, furniture polishing, decorating, etc., for the benefit of those who might like doing their own work. Questions sent to the Examiner will receive attention in due course.

Jennie McDd., City: Through your "Arts and Crafts" column, will you please answer these questions?

(1) How can I know whether arsenic is present in my wall paper or not? (2. Can wall paper be cleaned or washed without injury? (3) Will you print some simple method to clean wall paper?

Ans.: (1) Take some of the colouring matter from the suspected wall paper and dissolve it in a little ammonia hydroxide, pour off this solution on to a piece of glass, and drop into the liquid a crystal of silver nitrate. A yellow colour around the crystal will indicate the presence of arsenic. Or wet the paper with some ammonia. If arsenic of copper be present it will turn blue.

(2.) Not many present day papers can. But many can be freshened up without much apparent injury.

(3) I do not know of a simple method. Most methods require the services of an artisan. For this reason: There are so many kinds of paper, some cheap, others expensive, some varnished, others soirettes that you dare not touch. New stock papers may be cleaned while stale old stock are lifeless and can hardly be looked at or handled, let alone clean, and a cleaner suitable for one would be entirely unsuitable for another. Let me know what kind of paper you want to clean or send me a sample of it and we will advise you how to handle it.

Mrs. J. W., City: I have a solid black walnut chair, which I have cleaned, sandpapered and scraped to the raw wood. What would you suggest as a proper way to polish it?

Ans.: There are so many "proper ways" that it is difficult to advise, not knowing your skill in this line. But a simple yet satisfactory way, (providing you have not scraped below the surface) would be to oil the chair with linseed oil and immediately wipe dry again. Allow this to stand 48 hours in a moderately warm room, then apply a coat—well brushed out—of any good rubbing varnish. After another 48 hours at least, give it a very light rubbing with No. 0.0. sandpaper, dust thoroughly and apply a second coat of varnish. Allow this to stand 72 hours, then with a soft piece of felt or flannel, a saucer with some finely powdered pumice stone in it, a little sweet oil and a clean soft cloth proceed to polish. By dipping the felt first in the oil, then into the pumice stone and carefully rub back and forth with the grain of the wood, wiping off occasionally to see that it is all rubbed evenly. When rubbed enough, be sure to thoroughly clean off every trace of oil. This is most important.

Amateur, Weller street: How many rolls of paper is required for a room 30 x 20 feet and 10 ft. high?

Ans.: Not knowing how many openings there are in the room, about 30 rolls wall, 20 rolls ceiling.

M. T. B., Millbrook: Will you be so kind as to give me the recipe to make oak colour?

Ans.: You do not say what kind of oak, whether red, white, bog, antique, etc. But by mixing eight parts white with two of raw sienna, a good oak colour may be had.

Dandruff Surely Destroys the Hair

Girls—if you want plenty of thick, beautiful, glossy, silky hair, do by all means get rid of dandruff, for it will starve your hair and ruin it if you don't.

It doesn't do much good to try to brush or wash it out. The only sure way to get rid of dandruff is to dissolve it, then you destroy it entirely. To do this, get about four ounces of ordinary liquid arvon; apply it at night when retiring; use enough to moisten the scalp and rub it in gently with the finger tips.

By morning, most if not all, of your dandruff will be gone, and three or four more applications will completely dissolve and entirely destroy every single sign and trace of it.

You will find, too, that all itching and digging of the scalp will stop, and your hair will look and feel a hundred times better. You can get liquid arvon at any drug store. It is inexpensive and four ounces is all you will need, no matter how much dandruff you have. This simple remedy never fails.

We put them on for $1.75 pair.

"THE CLUE IN THE AIR"

A DETECTIVE STORY—Isabel Ostrander

"Thank you, sir, I would not have thought those things might have come under your notice, being occupied as you were with matters of tremendous importance. All that was long ago, and I've no connection now with the force, getting mixed in this business the other night by the merest chance, as you know. You'll be wanting me to tell you about that?"

"If you will. No, don't throw your cigar away. I'll smoke, too."

He produced a platinum cigarette-case, the unostentatious elegance of which made McCarty's eyes bulge, and lighted a cigarette with his own matches before the latter could push forward the box upon the desk. Then he settled back in his chair.

"This case possesses extraordinary points and in some ways is unique, even in my experience. I do not know what inferences, if any, you have drawn from your associations with Inspector Druet during his preliminary inquiries among the tenants of the Glamorgan. It does no good, of course, to jump to conclusions, but an active use of deductive reasoning, together with a slight exercise of your imagination, would have taught you much, McCarty. I personally utilize science to a great degree when I have established a working basis. It weighs and measures with unassailable exactitude, recording the most subtle emotions and trains of thought of the subject under examination."

"Think of that, now!" ejaculated McCarty, with immense respect.

"But to obtain that working basis, I deduce, sometimes from the most trifling indications. Nothing is without significance to the trained analytical mind. I will try to make you see what I mean.

"You, for instance, McCarty, have told me nothing of yourself or your affairs but I have discovered several small facts about you since I have been in this room. You have had trouble with at least one of your tenants about repairs, and are threatened with a lawsuit, but you have decided to meet the demand, and are planning to provide immediately what is required. You are not easy about the state of your health and have tried to give up cigars, but you have not succeeded in doing so.

"Your increasing weight, too, bothers you, and you are making an effort to reduce. You purchased a new suit of clothes, but it doesn't fit, and you are going to send it back. That is all, I think, except that you thought of taking a trip to Ireland last spring, but gave up the idea because of the difficulty of obtaining a passport."

McCarty, who had been listening with starting eyes and slowly dropping jaw, edged his chair back until it caromed with the desk.

"Holy Saint Patrick!" he exclaimed in an awestruck voice. "I've heard of black magic, but this beats the devil himself! Mr Terhune, do you mean to be telling me that you have doped all that out of me, just by sitting there five minutes?"

"Exactly I'll explain Inspector Druct has mentioned our investment in suburban real estate, of course, and when I see an envelope on your desk with an attorney's name in the corner and a Homevale postmark, together with the fact that your classified telephone book is open at plasterers and masons, I conclude that some one has consulted a lawyer to enforce certain repairs, and you are arranging to comply

"As far as the worry over your health is concerned and your effort to give up cigars, there is a well thumbed home medical book on your mantel and also several boxes of different brands of cigarettes, pouches of tobacco, and an imperfectly colored pipe. The cigarette boxes are open and the cigarettes themselves stale and dry, and slightly dusty, and only one, or at most two, gone from each box. Obviously you have tried them but did not find them to your taste, and the same result obtained with your pipe, for only a small quantity of tobacco has been taken from each pouch.

"You're smoking a cigar at the present moment, so the habit proved too strong for you. The chair just inside your bed room door, there, is a tailor's box, open, containing a blue-serge suit folded but without regard to its original creases. Why would you put it back in the box if it were not to be returned, and why return it unless it failed to fit satisfactorily?

"In the corner are a pair of Indian clubs and from where I sit I can just catch a glimpse of the bath-room beyond your bedroom. There is a punching bag suspended there, and a standard scales. Here again the inference is obvious. You see how simple it is my dear McCarty."

"But—my trip to Ireland and the pig-headed red tape that interfered with my getting a passport? However did you light on that?"

"Mere observation once more, and a little deduction. Your nationality is patent and your inclinations would lead you rather to Ireland than England if considering a trip purely for pleasure in that direction.

"There is a dusty pile of American and English steamship line folders in the colors they use for late winter and spring issues on the shelf beneath your desk, and sticking out from among them are several State Department envelopes, showing that you have held quite a correspondence with the authorities in Washington. Now, do you begin to understand my method?"

McCarty brought his hand down smartly on the desk top.

"Never have I heard the beat of that! You're a wonderful man, Mr. Terhune, if you'll excuse my saying so. I thought that it was only in story books they could pull such a stunt and get away with it. And have you gone through the Glamorgan like that? Sure, you must know all about the mystery by now!"

Mr. Terhune smiled deprecatingly.

"Scarcely that. We are dealing with a crime in which clever influences are at work to conceal all possible clues; but I don't mind telling you in strict confidence, McCarty, that I am convinced I am on the right track. I have the details of the girl's death properly fixed in my mind. We will eliminate the young man who assisted you to carry her into the building, for he could have had no connection whatever with the affair. The fact that he gave a false name and address to the officer in charge is of no importance. Nine casual witnesses out of ten will do that to avoid the annoyance and notoriety of testifying at an inquest."

"Yes, sir," McCarty spoke respectfully, but without conviction. "Of course, Cunliffe said he'd been loitering around before, shamming intoxication—"

Terhune waved the suggestion aside.

"An erroneous detail," he said. "If Officer Cunliffe's surmise as to that is correct, it has absolutely no bearing on the case. Inspector Druet has given me an account of his first interviews with the tenants, but I should like to have you tell me again. There may be one or two points which he failed to bring out. You see, I have a sincere admiration for your own ability, my friend."

McCarty, with a mutinous glance at the medical volume on the mantel, produced a fresh cigar, lighted it from the stump of the last, and began. He told of each interview in turn, carefully reserving his own opinions and conclusions, and the famous detective listened intently.

"And what do you think of it? Did anything suggest itself to you, McCarty? Any inconsistencies or contradictions in the testimony?" There was a tolerant, slightly skeptical smile at the corners of Mr. Terhune's mouth, but it vanished utterly at the other's reply.

"Well, sir, of course it was not for me to interferer in the inspector's investigation; but, in spite of what she said, that grass widow on the third floor, Mrs. Doremus, was not alone with her servants that evening. She had a visitor—a man."

"Extraordinary!" The detective's tone was not too cordial. "I myself discovered that yesterday, but I do not understand how you came to the same conclusion. There is a garbage-incinerating plant in the building; but because of the excitement and general disorganization resulting from this affair, the janitor had not yet disposed of the kitchen refuse brought down from the different apartments on the previous evening.

"In Mrs. Doremus's can I found the rinds of two alligator-pears, artichoke leaves, bits of terrapin, and the crushed carcass of a canvasback duck, the remains of a meal far more elaborate than it is to be supposed a lady would indulge in alone. From her tradespeople, a list of whom I obtained from her maid, I ascertained that the articles had been ordered on that day, so they were not left over from a previous occasion. When I confronted the lady, she attempted to deny it; but I studied her psychology carefully, and finally succeeded in getting an admission from her. How did you happen upon that point?"

"Me? Oh, I smelled his cigar," said McCarty.

"H-m! Did you discover anything else?"

McCarty shook his head.

"Well, I have settled, purely by a process of eliminative deduction; the approximate time Miss Rowntree must have entered the house," the detective went on; "It was between half-past nine and half-past ten. I am sure that the hall-boy, Albert, is telling the truth when he says he did not see her that evening but although he insists that he was on duty every minute, I think he must have deserted his post about then, probably to run an errand for one of the tenants and secure an extra tip. The records of the telephone calls show that they were fairly numerous up to that time, but none are listed after that, until just before eleven. I have noted them carefully, traced each one, and made exhaustive inquiries at the central exchange."

"Miss Rowntree came in a little after ten," McCarty remarked. "The boy didn't see her, for he was fast asleep at the switchboard."

Mr. Terhune extinguished his cigarette in the ash tray with unnecessary force.

"How do you know that?" he demanded.

"Sure, I flirted with the nurse-girl that went in just behind her, and talked to her on the stairs."

He told in substance his conversation with the Fenton baby's attendant on the day before, and when he had finished Mr. Terhune rose.

"McCarty, I'm going back to the Glamorgan now, and I would like to have you come with me. Of course, what you have learned has been merely chance or luck, as you would doubtless call it; but your point of view may be useful to me. I take it you are interested in the case from your inquiries yesterday."

"I am that, sir, and I'll like nothing better." McCarty, too, had risen and his eyes sparkled. "I'm not able to get the thing out of my mind at all since the poor thing fell at my feet."

"Strange words, those she uttered to you, McCarty," Mr. Terhune observed as they descended the stairs. "They open up an interesting line of thought."

"Yes, sir, unless she was out of her head," agreed the other. "There was no man flying around that I saw."

"Use your imagination, my dear McCarty! That reference cannot be taken literally. Cultivate an ability to read beneath the mere superficial meaning of what you may hear. Try to conceive an hypothesis in relation however vague, to the thought expressed, and trace it back psychologically. It is a rather fine point, I admit, but you must possess at least rudimentary imaginative power."

"Try to give a guess, you mean, sir?" McCarty replied obediently but somewhat doubtfully. "I'll see what I can do, but I'm afraid I'm not much good at it. I was trained in the old days, when all we did was to go out after the guilty party and get him convicted. There's been a lot learned since I was on the force."

TROUBLED WITH CONSTIPATION From 16 to 20

Constipation is one of the commonest ills of mankind, and one too often allowed to go unlooked after until some serious complication sets in.

If the bowels are properly looked after there will be no constipation, jaundice, sick or bilious headaches, heartburn, coated tongue, sour stomach, floating specks before the eyes, etc.

Milburn's Laxa-Liver Pills will keep your bowels so regulated that in no time the constipation will disappear entirely.

Miss Emma E. Melanson, Halifax, N.S., writes: "I am now 20 years of age, and since I was 16 I have been greatly troubled with constipation, so much so that at times I would be in bed 3 or 4 days a month. I tried all the old-fashioned remedies, castor oil, cascara, etc., with only temporary relief, until my sister-in-law gave me some of Milburn's Laxa-Liver Pills. From the first they seemed beneficial, and I gave them a fair trial. This was two years ago, and with an occasional dose I have kept entirely free from constipation for the period mentioned."

Milburn's Laxa-Liver Pills are 25c a vial at all dealers, or mailed direct on receipt of price by The T. Milburn Co., Limited, Toronto, Ont.

BREAD COST ANALYZED.

OTTAWA, Jan. 17. — Statistics for November completed by the cost of living branch, Labour Department, show that the average cost of bread in the Dominion increased by one-tenth of one cent per pound over the October returns, due chiefly to the increased cost of flour used and a slight increase in the cost of ingredients and overhead expenses. The material increases were in St. John, Montreal, Brantford, Port Arthur, Fort William and Medicine Hat.

The cost of bread in Toronto, per pound, was, in October, 6.45 cents, and in November, 6.46 cents. The cost of baking and overhead expense in Montreal (where cost per pound in November was 6.93 cents) is high, compared with Toronto.

The management and overhead costs per pound of bread in Halifax are 29 cents, in Montreal .83 cents, in Ottawa .38 cents, in Toronto .52 cents, and in Winnipeg .51 cents.

"It is safe to say," the report concludes, "that the wholesale price of bread is regularly one cent less per pound and a half loaf than the retail price. Larger bakeries usually sell from fifty to sixty per cent. of their bread wholesale. The profits for the year 1917 are now being investigated by the rating commissioner.

"The disposition on the part of bakers to replace the use of first patent flour by second patents is shown by the following: The proportion of first patent flour used by bakers in August was 52 per cent., of second patent flour 48 per cent.; in September 42 per cent. first patent, 58 per cent. second patent; in October, 34 per cent. first patent, 66 per cent. second patent; inn November, 28 per cent. first patent, 77 per cent. second patent. The cost of second patent flour is regularly fifty cents per barrel less than first patent. The first and second patent together, according to millers' returns, cover about nine-tenths of the flour produced from Canadian wheat.

"The cost of flour purchased by bakers in November shows an increase of only three cents a barrel over that purchased in October; the average cost of flour purchased by bakers in October, was $10.57 per barrel, in November $10.60."

LESS AUSTRALIAN WHEAT.

ADELAIDE, Australia, Jan. 22. — The Government's estimate of the wheat crop of South Australia is 26,500,000 bushels, as compared with 45,000,000 last season, which record decrease is due to the smaller area sown and also the destruction by mice and after sowing by excess of rain and rust.

NERVOUS DEBILITY SLEEPLESSNESS

Doctor Said He Could Do No More So Peterboro' Woman Turned to the Great Food Cure With Splendid Results

Mrs. Chas. E. Wiley, 136 London St., Peterborough, Ont., writes: "About three years ago, I was suffering from nervous debility, sleeplessness and loss of appetite. My nerves were so bad that I could not attend church, or any place where there was a crowd or excitement. During the night I would lie awake for two or three hours. I had tried several remedies, and taken treatment from doctors. The doctor finally said he could not do any more for me, and it was then I started using Dr. Chase's Nerve Food. I had read in the newspapers of how highly it was recommended, so I secured some and commenced using it. After the third box, I noticed an improvement, so I kept on taking them until I had used eight or nine boxes. The results were such that I could sleep and eat well and could go to places where there was a crowd or excitement, without any difficulty. My health was generally benefitted greatly. Since that, from time to time, when I am not feeling up to the mark, I take a few of the Nerve Food pills, as I usually keep some in the house. I would recommend this treatment to any one suffering from nervous trouble of any kind."

It feeds the nerves. That is the great secret of the success of Dr. Chase's Nerve Food. That is why cures effected by this treatment are both thorough and lasting.

The great difficulty when the nerves become exhausted is to get enough nourishment from the food you eat to restore the nerves. By supplying the elements from which Nerve Force is created in condensed and easily digested form Dr. Chase's Nerve Food feeds the wasted and depleted nerve cells back to health and vigour.

You feel the benefit obtained by renewed energy and ambition, pain and weakness disappear, digestion improves, the complexion takes on new colour, and in a score of ways you find the proof of the good this food cure is doing you.

When you have decided to use Dr. Chase's Nerve Food make up your mind to give it a fair chance to cure you, and then insist on getting the genuine article, bearing the portrait and signature of A. W. Chase, M.D., the famous Receipt Book author. Price 50 cents a box, full treatment of 6 boxes for $2.75, at all dealers or Edmanson, Bates & Co., Limited, Toronto.

TRY TO PREVENT DISEASE.

A Thorough Physical Test May Point the Way to Saving a Life.

"Complete examination," says a health bulletin, has shown that the physically perfect man is almost impossible to find. Almost every one who has reached the age of thirty has some impairment or defect of his body. It may be such a minor defect as a decayed tooth or a slight digestive disturbance. Or it may be trouble with the kidneys that will develop into Bright's disease if not attended to promptly. Little defects or impairments, if neglected, may cause untold suffering and loss.

"If you have a regular family physician arrange with him for a thorough overhauling of your body. This inspection, which should be conducted without clothing, should consist at least of the following:

"Height, weight, chest and abdominal measurements and a survey of the general bodily condition. Examination of eyes, ears, nose, throat, mouth, teeth, tongue, skin, glands, lungs, heart, circulation, stomach, liver and other abdominal organs. Examination for evidences of rupture, varicose veins, faulty posture, flat foot, spinal curvature, deformities and asymmetries. Tests of the vision and hearing. Tests of the brain and nervous system for paresis, locomotor ataxia and other central nervous affections or nervous instability. Chemical and microscopic examination of the urine. Blood pressure tests.

"Such a thorough examination as is suggested here may be the means of prolonging, if not of saving, life."

THE CAREFUL ELEPHANT.

His Bump of Caution Seems to Be Remarkably Well Developed.

The author of "From Jungle to Zoo," in explaining the difficulties of transporting wild animals by rail, gives a striking example of the elephant's cautiousness:

"The keepers generally place a heavy platform from the door of the truck to the ground, but few elephants will venture on it. In one case the men sent in a trained elephant first in the hope that the newly captured elephant would follow. The new elephant stopped dead, however, threw up his trunk and made it evident that he would go no farther.

"They offered him all kinds of food and addressed him with encouraging words; they led the trained elephant out and then in again with a rush, in the hope that the other would follow in the excitement of the moment. But it all had no effect whatever; there the balky one stood, waving his trunk and glancing from left to right and then from right to left with his little crafty eyes.

"At length after two hours of hard work, when the men were exhausted and streaming with perspiration, the elephant suddenly lowered his trunk, seized the inclined platform and threw it away. Then, lifting up first one huge foot and then another, he walked quietly into the truck and settled down at once to a good meal."

Telephone Grandeur.

"What's your opinion of Bemmaster?"

"Well, when I first met him he impressed me as being a leader of men, a 10,000 volt dynamo, a clarion voiced czar who would brook no opposition, but when I met him the second time I sized him up for a pusillanimous mouse."

"Where did you meet him the first time?"

"On the telephone."

The Exception.

"I understand," said the foreign statesman, "that you elect all your rulers by ballot."

"You have been sadly misinformed," answered the American. "We don't elect our wives in that manner.

GOT WET FEET TOOK AWFUL COLD

COULD NOT SLEEP FOR COUGH

A bad cold accompanied by a distressing cough that keeps you awake at night is most aggravating, and unless it is attended to at once may develop into something very serious.

Dr. Wood's Norway Pine Syrup is the remedy you should take. It heals the mucous surfaces, relieves oppression and tightness of the chest, removes the accumulation of phlegm, quiets the most obstinate and distressing coughs, and secures rest and sleep at night, not only to the sufferer, but to others whose rest would be otherwise broken.

Mrs. Ezelia Acker, Lake Pleasant, N.S., writes: "I got wet feet and took an awful cold; could not sleep at night, and would do nothing but cough. My husband got me a bottle of medicine, but it was not worth bringing home. I was going to call the doctor in when a friend asked me to try Dr. Wood's Norway Pine Syrup. I told her I had little faith in it, but she urged me to get a bottle. I did, and I must say that of all the medicine I ever took, it is the best, and relieved me the quickest of anything I ever saw."

"Dr. Wood's" is put up in a yellow wrapper; three pine trees the trade mark; price 25c and 50c; manufactured only by The T. Milburn Co., Limited, Toronto, Ont.

AN AUSTRALIAN SOLDIER.

A Brave Anzac Who Made the Supreme Sacrifice.

It was in the hour preceding the dawn that a British regiment relieved the Australians and took possession of the trenches which the Southern soldiers had taken from the Germans on the day before. The Germans were loath to part with their trench, but an argument conducted with bayonet and bomb impressed them with the earnestness of Australian desires, and the Germans, withdrawing "according to plan" (vide German official), took up a position further back. Needless to say, all the enemy soldiers did not withdraw; numbers of them, who had lost all interest in the doings of men forevermore, lay out on the field, their faces white beneath the stars.

The Australians had gone, and the British took stock of their surroundings. As a rule, a recently contested trench is grimly interesting, and the one in which they found themselves was no exception to this rule. The Germans had made a big fight and paid the penalty; their limp bodies in field-gray uniform fringed parapet and parados, lying there as they fell when flung out by the victors. Mute, impotent things they looked, well in keeping with the wreck of war, the shattered dugouts, the ruined machine-gun emplacements, blood-bespattered parapet and parados. The Australians have nothing to learn in the art of taking a hostile trench.

Dawn was almost breaking, and a white mist lay over No Man's Land when two Tommies, stretcher bearers, turned toward their own trenches after the night's work between the lines. As they went they stumbled, in a fold of the ground, on a number of corpses piled together in a confused heap.

"My God, there was some fighting here," said one of the men. "That is a heap . . . seven of them."

"All but one Germans," said the other. "I think the Australian did for them all."

He pointed at the one dead man who was not a German. He was a big, well-knit soldier, who now lay face downward to earth, his body across his blood-stained bayonet and one hand gripping the throat of a lifeless enemy.

"This man's all alone here. He must have engaged all these single-handed. . . . Ah, these Australians. They're beggars when they're roused."

"We have just time to bury him before it's light," said his companion. "We'll hurry up with the job, get his papers, and identity disk and cover him up. It seems a shame to leave him lying alone out here."

They got the man's papers, then looked for his identity disk, but found that it had gone. They buried him and then went back to their trench and looked at the papers. Two books were objects of great interest to one of the stretcher bearers, who had a taste for literature. Both were books of verse; one was Adam Lindsay Gordon's poems, another was a miscellaneous collection of Australian poetry. Both dog-eared volumes were annotated and pencilled and showed that the dead man had devoted much study to their contents.

One verse struck the stretcher bearer's attention—all the words were underlined in red ink. It ran:

All creeds and trades will have soldiers there—give every class its due;
And there'll be many a clerk to spare for the pride of the Jackeroo.
They'll fight for honor and fight for love, and a few will fight for gold,
For the devil below and for God above, as our fathers fought of old;
And some half blind with exultant tears, and some stiff-lipped and stern eyed,
For the pride of a thousand after years and the old eternal pride,
The soul of the world they will feel and see in the chase and the grim retreat—
They'll know the glory of victory—and the splendor of defeat.

At the bottom of the page was written in red ink in a strong firm hand this sentence: "The whole world sees the German as an enemy now; may he never be seen otherwise."

Further along in the book was written this: "We must judge this war, not by the good it may bring, but by the evil it has averted."

"I wonder who this soldier has been?" the stretcher-bearer asked himself. "Who his people are?"

As if to answer this question, a photograph dropped out from between the pages. It was the likeness of the soldier and under it was written:

"An Australian soldier who has no next of kin."

That night the stretcher bearer, who, in addition to a taste for literature, had a sense of the dramatic, opened the grave again, and placed the two books on the breast of the dead soldier. Then he fashioned a wooden cross and placed it over the dead man's grave. On the cross he scrawled, in a big black letters, this epitaph:

A
Brave Australian Soldier
Who Died for the Empire.

His Hiding Place.

A Scotchman and an Irishman once set out together on a holiday, and Sandy intrusted all of his money to his friend with the strict injunction not to give him more than a stated sum for expenses each day. After a few days Sandy pleaded for an increase, but in vain. Afterwards he confessed to Pat that, on the latter's refusal to comply with his wish he got out of bed every night when the Irishman was asleep and searched for the cash, but could never succeed in finding it. "Where did you keep it?" he asked. "Well," said Pat, "I let you go to bed first every night, and every night when you weren't looking I put my purse into one of your pockets. I was always first up in the morning, and took it out again."

IF KIDNEYS ACT BAD TAKE SALTS

Says Backache is Sign You Have Been Eating Too Much Meat

When you wake up with backache and dull misery in the kidney region it generally means you have been eating too much meat, says a well-known authority. Meat forms uric acid which overworks the kidneys in their effort to filter it from the blood, and they become sort of paralyzed and loggy. When your kidneys get sluggish and clog you must relieve them, like you relieve your bowels; removing all the body's urinous waste, else you have backache, sick headache, dizzy spells; your stomach sours, tongue is coated, and when the weather is bad you have rheumatic twinges. The urine is cloudy, full of sediment, channels often get sore, water scalds, and you are obliged to seek relief two or three times during the night.

Either consult a good, reliable physician at once or get from your pharmacist about four ounces of Jad Salts; take a tablespoonful in a glass of water before breakfast for a few days and your kidneys will then act fine. This famous salts is made from the acid of grapes and lemon juice, combined with lithia, and has been used for generations to clean and stimulate sluggish kidneys, also to neutralize acids in the urine so it no longer irritates, thus ending bladder weakness.

Jad Salts is a life saver for regular meat eaters. It is inexpensive, cannot injure and makes a delightful, effervescent lithia-water drink.

"Hush Hush" A Naval Unit

M. A. ROUSSEAU, the naval critic of The Temps, who has returned to Paris from visiting the Grand Fleet, has been permitted by the Imprimatur of the British Admiralty to give French readers the first description of the famous "Hush, Hush" boats, about which, as regards their characteristics, the authorities have succeeded in maintaining hitherto profound secrecy.

We were passing, writes M. Rousseau in front of ships of unusual aspect, specially constructed craft for war purposes; monitors, trawlers, and the like. Certain of these vessels caught our attention, especially by their outline and dimensions. They were very long, with immense decks fore and aft. They appeared to lie low on the water. Perhaps this was an optical effect produced by their length. They have two tripod masts, the first of which carries tops apparently armored, and in the middle of the vessel rises a very squat central castle, at the extremities of which are the heavy artillery turrets—turrets for two guns of the biggest calibre. The secondary artillery, the calibre of which is the same on all vessels of the same type, is at the limit of the average and small artillery. The stem of these craft is tapered, more like the beam of a yacht than that of a battleship; it is not perpendicular, but curving inwards; to use a sailor's phrase it is "cut-water." The shape of the stem has certainly been determined in order to realize very high speed, and, as a matter of fact, these vessels are very swift, much fleeter than the fleetest of pre-war cruisers.

These craft—we may call them battle cruisers—are of two types, or, rather, of two dimensions, for their elements of power are, we believe, the same, except as regards protection. As for speed, it is as high on the small as on the big craft, the radius of action having to be the same, and the armament, if it differs in number, is the same as regards calibres of the principal and secondary artilleries.

These vessels have been created since the war. I say created, because it was stated to me that they were inspired by the lessons of the war. They were begun in 1915, and have been twelve months in service—an admirable result of the organization of labor in the British dockyards. I know not whether they have all been built in private yards, but the most important of those actually afloat, the ——, which is commanded by Captain Michael Hodges, formerly naval attache at the British embassy in Paris, was turned out by private industry. Other vessels of the kind are under construction, their dimensions being yet more considerable.

SHERBROOKE SHOWS A FINE CIVIC SPIRIT.

Sherbrooke, Que., Jan. 22.—At the city council meeting here, Chas. D. White, K. C., occupied the Mayor's chair, for the first time since his election by acclamation on the 14th inst. Ald. Edwards, in moving a vote of thanks to the retiring Mayor, Ernest Sylvestre, referred to Mayor White's election as a remarkable manifestation of the broad spirit of Sherbrooke citizens, where a population of over two-thirds French-Canadians elected an English speaking Mayor on his merits as a man. Mayor White is a prominent Unionist, and took an active part in the recent election. He was a Conservative candidate in 1911. His election is regarded as representing an ideal civic and racial situation, in direct contrast to the exaggerated reports circulated against Sherbrooke citizens during the recent election campaign.

ANTIPATHY TO GERMANY SHOWN IN U. S. COURT

Hard to Select Jury at Trial of German Naval Reservist in New York.

NEW YORK, Jan. 22.—Antipathy to Germany to-day threatened to interfere with the selection of a jury in the trial of Fritz Von Rintelen, German navalu reservist, and nearly a dozen other defendants charged with conspiracy to place fire bombs aboard steamships sailing from this port.

After 24 talesmen had been examined, counsel for Von Rintelen objected to Federal Judge Howe continuing the trial on the ground that the present state of public feeling made it impossible for his client to be accorded an impartial hearing.

The court overruled the objection, saying it was "extraordinary," but two of the jurors who had been selected declared they were so bitterly opposed to Germany that they could not be considered qualified to serve. They were excused.

Most of them on trial with Von Rintelen were members of the crews of German ships which were seized by the United States Government at Hoboken, N.J., at the declaration of a state of war.

READY!

In the newspapers there recently appeared articles telling of the arrival of the American fleet at Queenstown—telling how the Officers of the English Navy had gone to Vice-Admiral Sims and asked him when he would be ready for action. Every American thrilled with pride at his answer—

"WE CAN START AT ONCE."

"READY TO START AT ONCE"—What a wonderful motto for every man, and yet how many of us realize that at any moment we may suddenly be called away from Business, from Home and Friends, from this world of ours to pass in to the Great Beyond.

Are you Mr. Reader, "READY TO START AT ONCE?" Have you made provision for those dependent on you should the call come?

"READY TO START AT ONCE." No man can do more—we cannot afford to do less.

If your loved ones are not already protected against such an emergency you had better act while you have the opportunity. To-morrow may be too late.

The Sun Life Assurance Company of Canada will protect your Dependents providing you do your duty while the opportunity is yours.

Laugh When People Step On Your Feet

Try this yourself then pass it along to others. It works!

Ouch! This kind of rough talk will be heard less here in town if people troubled with corns will follow the simple advice of this Cincinnati authority, who claims that a few drops of a drug called freezone when applied to a tender, aching corn stops soreness at once, and soon the corn dries up and lifts right out without pain.

He says freezone is an ether compound which dries immediately and never inflames or even irritates the surrounding tissue or skin. A quarter of an ounce of freezone will cost very little at any drug store, but is sufficient to remove every hard or soft corn or callus from one's feet. Millions of American women will welcome this announcement since the inauguration of the high heels.

TO-DAY there is hardly any Canadian who is not intensely, and often personally, interested in the news that reaches THE GLOBE by cable from all parts of the earth. Events in England, in France, in Egypt, in Russia and in Japan have taken on a greater significance to Canadians these last few years.

THE present world-embracing cable service that THE GLOBE gives its readers is without precedent in Canadian journalism.

THE GLOBE prints each morning the Exclusive cables of The London Times (perhaps the world's premier newspaper), The London Chronicle, The New York Times (the new world's leading paper) and The Philadelphia Ledger.

IN addition to these important sources of news, THE GLOBE employs the full services of the Canadian Associated Press, the Canadian Press, and its own special correspondents at strategic points in Canada and throughout the world.

MUSIC IN THE HOME

OUR NATIONAL ANTHEM IN CHURCH.

The National Anthem is sung every Sunday in many churches throughout the land, either during the regular service or immediately following it. In one church in London, England, it is sung quietly and devotionally as a prayer, all kneeling. There may be a suggestion in this for some Canadian pastors and congregations.

MERELY AN INCIDENT.

This is only an incident—a little touch of nature in the game of soldiering. It happened last Christmas in the Barracks.

Some officer had to be on duty, and it fell to the lot of the Youngest Subaltern. Early on Christmas Day the barracks had been practically deserted, and at supper time the Youngest Subaltern sat alone at the table in the Officers' Mess — even the waitress had gone, leaving his cold supper spread out for him. The snow beat against the windows until the glass trembled and rattled in its sashes. The mess cat licked its paws and then settled down for an evening's snooze.

Fifty yards away the bugle sounded the supper call.

"Oh come to the cookhouse door, boys, come to the cookhouse door."

The Youngest Subaltern readjusted his belt and issued forth (for does not the sacred law of K. B. and O. state that the orderly officer must attend all parades). This disconsolate bugler stood at attention as he appeared. Twelve solitary soldiers were grouped on the parade ground.

"Tough luck, men," the officer looked at them, "first Christmas away from home?"

"Yes, sir." A fair-haired, blue-eyed lad answered for them all.

"Same here," said the Subaltern, wistfully, and then stiffened up. "Parade 'shun—right turn—right wheel—quick march," and the lugubrious bugler blew.

"Oh, pick 'em up, pick 'em up, bot potatoes, bot potatoes."

The Youngest Subaltern went back to his lonely supper—and the cat. An hour later he was still there — his eyes gazing into space—his heart,—well he was only a kid and was on duty Christmas Day, five hundred miles from home. He heard the twelve men stroll up to the recreation room just outside the Officers' Mess, each man aimlessly handling some old magazine, looking for some story or picture that would make him forget his own vision of a fireside and a merry crowd at the town where the lad who went "a-soldiering" used to sit.

"Christmas," muttered the Subaltern, and the cat opened one eye and yawned.

"Christmas," muttered the men outside, "Christmas—in barracks."

Then the Youngest Subaltern heard a wonderful thing. Someone had gone to the piano—there had been a few bars played by fingers that seemed to caress the keys, and then the strains of the familiar marching song came to him,—

"Keep the home fires burning, for the hearts are yearning."

It wasn't German music—for that matter it wasn't very good music, but the Subaltern's eyes moistened, as a dozen voices took up the refrain, a little querulously at first, and then with a hearty Canuck roar. The Orderly officer got up, and leaving the cat and the Mess, he joined the men. The fair haired, blue eyed lad stopped playing the piano and stood to attention.

"Carry on!" cried the Youngest Subaltern, "give us some more music. Jove, how I envy you that gift—study much?"

"No, sir — just picked it up at home, I suppose."

"Good work. Give us 'Keep the home fires burning' again. Come on, you chaps — let's give it with some pep—now, then, all together."

It wasn't as good as the Mendelssohn Choir could have done it, and the Subaltern's conducting was more energetic than accurate, but it eased a lot of heart strings, and men were smiling and singing with all the lustiness of full blooded Anglo Saxons. When he left them an hour later, the Youngest Subaltern was grinning like a new recruit, and the fair haired, blue eyed boy was playing, very softly and tenderly, some little melody of the past—and the snow beat against the windows until the glass trembled and rattled in its sashes.

MUSIC AND KNITTING NEEDLES

The question of the propriety of knitting during church services on Sunday has come up in several Detroit congregations and has been answered according to the convictions of the pastor. In this respect the Detroit Free Press leaves the matter to the spiritual pastor and masters of the said congregations.

Now, the same inquiry is made in reference to music. Is there sufficient concentration in the average feminine mind to allow a real absorption in the works of great composers and still be mindful of the "purl two knit two" of red cross directions, or even continue plain knitting without dropping the stitches? It would see that music deserves better than being compelled to share with such a humdrum task as knitting, even though hallowed for patriotism's sake. Good music radiates an inspiring and uplifting influence. It rouses a certain spiritual exaltation which we ought not to miss, and which we require in these days of spiritual strain. Moreover, we need an occasional interlude in the midst of the incessant activities we affect. Whatever distracts attention limits the spiritual influence great music exerts. If we listen merely to have the ear tickled by agreeable sounds we may knit, but advertise ourselves as uncomprehending listeners. If music moves us, if we truly love and catch its spirit, it seems a profanation to couple it with the click of knitting needles. It is also a matter of courtesy not to annoy others who to value the privilege of listening undisturbed.

While it is a fact that the average pupil in music is more anxious to play than willing to "learn" to play, yet it is also a fact that most of us wish to do well whatever we do, even though we may be lacking in will to work "hard" enough to realise our best in any direction.

The unwillingness of the average student to "work and wait" for results, and the shortsighted policy of parents who look for quick returns in "pieces" from their daughter's lessons, these are the great factors responsible for the unsatisfactory results attained by the majority of music students to-day. The enormous task of serious music study is not realised in even a small degree by the average student or parent planning a course of "music lessons". This state of affairs accounts for much of the careless, methodless pretense of teaching with which we are burdened. The teacher fears to do even his best, poor as it may be, knowing that, does he insist upon anything like "work" on the part of his pupil, he or she will be likely to seek a less insistent master So, through the agencies of ignorance indolence, and in many cases utter lack of conscience, and a general lack of conception of the meaning and the possible value of music as a real part of our social economy, we go on year after year, spending millions of money, wasting countless hours in indifferent practice, profitless anxiety and worry, finally reaping nothing but disappointment, for, indeed, nothing in our modern educational processes proves itself so resultless in its average outcome as music study

SINCE SINGING IS SO GOOD A THING,
I WISH ALL MEN WOULD LEARNE TO SINGE.

It has taken a long time to get the idea worked out in practice that music is for the masses. It is only recently that music has begun to be given its rightful place in our lives and the war has helped largely in bringing this about. As far back as the sixteenth century at any rate, there was a man with foresight enough to have the vision of music for everybody.

That man was the musician William Byrd. He was very anxious that people should sing. The London Music Student has published Byrd's reasons for encouraging everybody to sing which in his own quaint form are: "Singing is a knowledge easily taught and quickly learned where there is a good master and an apt scholar. The exercise of singing is very fruitful to nature and good to preserve the health of man. It doth strengthen all parts of the brest and doth open the pipes. It is a singular good remedy for a stutting and stammering in the speech. It is the best means to procure a perfect pronunciation and to make a good orator.

"It is the only way to know where nature hath bestowed the benefit of a good voyce, which guift is so rare, as there is not one among a thousand has hath it; and in many that excellent guift is lost, because they want art to express nature. There is not any Musicke of instruments whatsoever comparable to that which is made of the voyces of men, when the voyces are good and the same well sorted and ordered. The better the voyce is, the meeter it is to honour and serve God therewith; and the voyce of man is chiefly to be employed to that ende."

Byrd finishes with this rhyme:
"Since singing is so good a thinge,
I wish all men would learn to singe."

ZURICH, January 24.—Notwithstanding the Austrian official statements of yesterday that the general strike has been "settled," delayed Austrian newspapers received here to-day, are filled with despatches reporting a continuation of the general tie-up. The Neue Frei Presse of Vienna declared the strike in that city had completely tied up the arsenal.

(Special to The Toronto Star and The Peterborough Examiner.)

PETROGRAD, January 24.—Twenty organizers of the plot against the Bolsheviki, accused of inspiring the famous "battalion of death" to pledge allegiance to the monshiviki, were arrested to-day.. The entire unit, it was stated, was held in custody at its barracks, and bombs, arms and compromising documents were later found. The "battalion of death," according to this evidence, was prepared forcibly to back up social revolutionaries of the right. (Canadian Press Despatch.)

A Vienna despatch to the Vossiche Zeitung of Berlin, says that while work was resumed in part on Monday, the strike continues in a number of large factories. Arthur Henderson, formerly a member of the War Council, made an eloquent appeal against the passage of the resolution. He declared its effect would b to break up the Government's strength and to delay the advent of peace.

(Canadian Press Despatch.)

PARIS, January 24.—There is nothing to report, except a raid east of Auberive in which we took prisoners, says to-day's official announcement.

(Canadian Press Despatch.)

LONDON, January 24.—Up to 10:15 o'clock to-day, there was no confirmation here of the Smolny Institute wireless reports of a revolution in Vienna as reported in United Press despatches.

(Special to The Toronto Star and The Peterborough Examiner.)

COPENHAGEN, January 24.—Austrian Socialist leaders are "experiencing difficulty in controlling the Extremists of their party," according to delayed messages received to-day from Vienna.

The despatches reported 200,000 Viennese still striking. At Budapest the strike partially continues.

READY FOR THE FOE'S OFFENSIVE

Canadian Press Despatch:

LONDON, (Via Reuter's Ottawa Agency), Jan. 24.—Reuter's headquarters correspondent, discussing the threatened impending German offensive says: "It is taken for granted that at the utmost, most violent onslaught against any part of the front can hope to attain would be to push us back a little. Any prospect of breaking through is practically negligible and scarcely worth discussing. In the meanwhile we are preparing ghastly hospitality for the enemy if he attempts an attack."

WANTS RIGHTS OF BELGIUM TO BE RECOGNIZED

Emperor Karl of Austria-Hungary is Insisting Upon This According to Reports Received By the Vatican

KING ALBERT'S REPLY

(By John H. Hearley.)

ROME, Jan. 24. —Emperor Karl of Austria, is insisting on a fulll recognition of Belgium's rights against German militarist effort to prevent an unequivocal Teutonic statement as to that nation before the trial of an unprecedented west front offensive, according to word received by the Vatican to-day.

The Holy See regards the reply of King Albert of Belgium, to the Pontificial appeal of last August, just announced, as of the highest diplomatic importance. It was held in some quarters that such a firm statement might force some clear definition of Germany's position as to Belgium.

The Osservatore Romano to-day declared King Albert's note "a splendid vindication of a high and noble motive inspiring the Holy See in the present world conflict."

King Albert's reply emphatically sets forth that Belgium would demand complete territorial, political and economic independence and integrity.

SIGNIFICANT RETIREMENT

Canadian Press Despatch:

ITALIAN ARMY HEADQUARTERS, Northern Italy, Wednesday.—The enemy has evacuated territory on the northern mountain front behind Monte Tomba, extending from the Piave River westward. Their defence lines have now been moved back to Monte Spinoncia.

Italian patrols making reconnaissances in the last few days found that the enemy patrols and sentinels had been withdrawn and later discovered that the enemy had abandoned the entire region. This retreat is a sequel to the brilliant victory the French troops recently obtained on Monte Tomba, inasmuch as the enemy's position thereafter became untenable.

The retirement of the enemy is important, as showing that he has given up his effort to force a passage to the Venetian Plains by way of Monte Tomba and the west bank of the Piave, at least for the present. He is now constructing defensive works in the rear.

ANNUAL MEETING OF THE L. U. A.

The annual meeting of the L. U. A. of Central Ontario was held at the Empress Hotel on Saturday last.

After a very enjoyable dinner in the Empress Grill Room, the members repaired to the club room on the second floor of the hotel.

President P. A. Ferguson occupied the chair, and a fairly representative meeting was present. NIR .'16 gathering was present.

The annual statement of meetings, membership, and finances showed that a splendid meeting had been held every month during the year, with the exception of the holiday season. The membership had been increased from twenty to forty and the average attendance at the meetings for the year was sixteen.

In a brief address the president reviewed the most successful year in the history of the association. Mr. Hughson Johnston spoke on "Good Will Among the Members," and Mr. J. J. Fallon gave a talk on "Misrepresentation of Profits."

The election of officers for 1918 resulted as follows:

President: R. E. Sedgwick.
Vice-President: A. McClelland.
Secy.-Treas.: W. R. Scadding.
Executive Committee: H. Johnston, T. W. Robinson, J. D. Cameron, W. A. Haslem, in addition to the officers.

A very pleasant evening was brought to a close in the usual manner.

Eat Coarser Fish Says The Food Controller

Canadian Press Despatch:

TORONTO, Jan. 24.—Food Controller Hanna's fish committee is taking steps to encourage real economy by inducing Canadians to demand the so-called coarser fish, such as cod, haddock, herring and skate, instead of high priced "luxury" fish like halibut, salmon, white fish and trout. It is pointed out by the committee today that the demand for the latter kinds is so great and the price so high that fishermen refuse to bring in the other varieties.

County Council To Ottawa To Interview Gen. Mewburn

Adopt Suggestion of Mr. J. H. Burnham Who Accompanied Them "in the Interests of Production" Through Sufficient Help Remaining on the Farms

SHOWDOWN FOR FARMERS' TRIBUNALS

Accompanied by Mr. J. H. Burnham, M.P., the County Council left at noon to-day for Ottawa to interview General Mewburn, the Minister of Militia, on behalf of the farmers of this district whose sons have been refused exemption from military service.

The burden of the mission has been euphamistically expressed as a plea for greater production of foodstuffs, but stripped of this camouflage, it is a petition to the Minister to grant the demands of the farmers' tribunal, composed of ex-Warden Brown and Mr. Knox, to whom the rural subjects of conscription presented their claims for exemption. It is evident that there is a connection between the maintenance of farm production and the continuance of young farmers in their present employment, but the fact that the Council will intercede with the Minister of Militia and not with the Hon. Mr. Crerar, Minister of Agriculture, dispels any doubts of the real purpose of this trip to the Capital.

Mr. Burnham addressed the Council yesterday afternoon, reviewing the events that had culminated in the appointment of the so-called farmers' tribunals. Their recommendations had been forwarded to the Military Service officials, but apparently had not carried the weight that was attributed to them a short six weeks ago. Mr. Burnham suggested that the Council should go to Ottawa and interview the Minister of Militia, urging that the demands of the farmers' tribunals be honoured in the interest of greater production. In passing the buck to the County Council he stated that he had used his influence in securing the appointment of the tribunal, but that its work should now be officially advocated by the Council.

Reeve Walsh moved, seconded by Reeve Brown, that the Council go to Ottawa and interview the Minister of Militia. When the roll was called at the C.P.R. station at noon, all the members responded, except Reeve Fitzgerald of Lakefield, who was prevented by illness at home.

It is known that farmers who had ignored the notices to appear before the regular military tribunals were peremptorily notified a second time that their first claims for exemption would be disallowed by default if they did not present themselves in person. It has been stated that numbers of farmers have been since ordered to report, and apparently there is a gap somewhere in the reaches of the farmers' tribunal.

On the other side of this question there are some farmers who are going to be seriously hampered in their farm work this year unless they can obtain suitable substitutes for the young men who have been or are about to be called out by draft. Hence the County Council is acting in perfect good faith, and under the impression, which Mr. Burnham has actively promoted, that the decisions of the farmers' tribunal will be endorsed by the military authorities.

Regard The Russian Situation As Critical

(Canadian Press Despatch.)

AMSTERDAM, January 24. — German Parliamentary circles regard the Russian situation as being very critical, according to the Lokal Anzeiger of Berlin, a copy of which has been received here. The paper says that the latest news from Petrograd shows that the Bolsheviki supremacy is seriously threatened, and the question now arises as to whether it would be wise to negotiate further with men whom anarchy at any moment may sweep away. The Lokal Anzeiger adds that in political circles account is being taken of the possible influence the events in Petrograd may have on the negotiations at Brest-Litovsk.

NOTHING KNOWN IN MONTREAL ABOUT THE LAVAL RUMOUR

Ottawa Report Says 164 Out of 177 Students Have Been Declared Physically Unfit—However General Revision of Class I Men is Expected

CONFUSION IN COUNTRY

(Special to the Toronto Star and The Peterborough Examiner.)

MONTREAL, Que., Jan. 24.—Nothing is known here officially or otherwise of the story from Ottawa, that of 177 Laval students, 164 have been declared unfit for military service for a variety of reasons, ranging from tuberculosis to flat feet. However, even if the Military Medical Boards which examined them classed them as unfit, it does not mean they will escape service in every case, as it is understood there is to be a general revision of Class A men throughout all Canada under instructions from the Military Council at Ottawa.

The military authorities in this district, as in others, are not at all satisfied with the medical findings returned in many cases, and several instances are reported of exemptions granted for medical reasons being appealed by the military. If the story of the Laval students proves true, the military will hear of it in time, and can be relied upon to see that justice is done.

To date there has been all sorts of confusion in the appeal courts here by reason of private parties declaring ment fit for service by Military Boards to be really unfit. Some of the appeal judges have been inclined to follow the decisions of private physicians, while one has flatly refused to go contrary to the Military Board's findings despite what private doctors testified.

Under an order-in-council passed yesterday at Ottawa, this confusion will now end. A final board of three well known doctors has been appointed and when there is a conflict of testimony the cases are to be referred to it. Its word is final and the appeal judges will have to govern themselves accordingly.

Some doctors are reported to have been making as high as $400 a day. Some of the well known ones are said to charge $20 for an examination and $20 for appearance before the appeal courts. On several occasions cases have been held up in three or four courts at once because private physicians who examined the case in dispute were testifying in another court.

HANNA TO RETIRE

Ottawa Report Says Food Controller Will Shortly Resign

(Special to the Toronto Star and The Peterborough Examiner.)

OTTAWA, Jan. 24.—It is stated here on excellent authority that Hon. W. J. Hanna will shortly retire from the position of food controller. No reasons are attributed for his contemplated retirement.

GERMAN GOVERNMENT PLAYING WITH FIRE WARNS SOCIALIST

Says Situation in Germany is But Little Different From That in Austria Or. Ebert Assails German Leaders

WHAT "VORWAERTS" SAYS

(Special to the Toronto Star and The Peterborough Examiner.)

COPENHAGEN, Jan. 24. — "The German government is playing with fire. Germany's situation is but little different from Austria's." Phillip majority Socialists so warned the German authorities in a speech before the main committee of the Reichstag reported in the Socialist organ, Vorwaerts received here to-day.

The Vorwaerts in its issue of Wednesday evening printed the remarks of Dr. Ebert before the German main Reichstag committee declaring there were sensational rumours "of street fighting at Budapest and Vienna and of the proclamation of a republic at Prague (Bohemia).

According to the Vorwaerts, Ebert assailed the German government in these words: "The whole world know of the general strike in Austria Hungary—only the German people did not know of it. This resulted in sensational rumours of street fighting at Budapest and Vienna and the report of a proclamation of a republic at Prague.

"We salute the action of the Austro-Hungarian proletariat and express our warmest sympathy. German labour, where necessary, will use its full power to combat efforts to prevent an early peace based on understanding and right."

Wednesday evening's issue of the Vorwaerts was its first since the three days' suspension recently meted out to it by the German government for printing news of unrest in Austria.

Deserters Few In Peterboro' District

There are few deserters in the Peterborough district. The response to the draft has been practically unanimous, and it is stated that this district has a record second to none in the Dominion. In spite of the sneers of superpatriots, the old spirit that marked recruiting days has not vanished from this territory. The police receive notices of men who are listed absent at Kingston, but investigation reveals their presence in the aviation school, artillery branch and most frequently in the infantry. The clerical corps of constables at Kingston sometimes leave the police peevish when they find soon whom they have been sent out to arrest, have been in the ranks for weeks. The spirit the men have shown not only in reporting for service, but in their drills at the armouries has been the subject of favourable comment. And the main satisfaction is found in the fact that deserters are splendidly few in Peterborough's vicinity.

Board Of Conciliation Appointed

Canadian Press Despatch:

OTTAWA, Ont., Jan. 24.—The Minister of Labour has appointed a Board of Conciliation to deal with the dispute between the Grand Trunk Railway Company and its conductors and Trainmen. The Board is made up of His Honour Judge Wallace of Oxford county, Robert Patterson, Stratford, for the company, and Fred Bancroft, of Toronto, representing the men. A new schedule as to wage rates and working conditions is sought by the men.

INNOCULATION AT ARMOURIES

There was little drill at the Armouries to-day. The members of B Company had a session with the doctors this morning and by the time the innoculation proceedings were over few of the men were ready for the daily routine. A large number received their second innoculation to-day while the rest got their first injection of the anti-typhoid serum.

NOT HURT BY THE DRAFT.

Winnipeg, Jan. 22.—Just how far Winnipeg has been handicapped by the draft was revealed when a canvass of representative firms was made. Not one was crippled. The Retail Merchants' Association employment agency reports: "There is no commotion whatever in the demand for labour. Many foreigners who have been waiting to take the places left vacant by men drafted have been fooled. There is plenty of labor available for farm work in the spring."

"Peterborough Presents Possibilities Unsurpassed."

THURSDAY, JAN. 24, 1918

QUEBEC AND THE REST OF US.

Quebec province is, in many respects, abreast with the other provinces of the Confederation; ahead in some ways, and much behind in others. In the matter of recruiting she has not come up to the mark, and how she has done under the draft system in the way of redeeming her past in this regard, we shall not know until the authorities get the time or the courage to publish a statement of the results of the application of the Military Service Act.

In the matter of finance, Quebec is distinctly ahead of the other provinces. Her business has been well managed, and a comfortable surplus reposes in the coffers of the province. This has not been accomplished by cheese-paring; for useful public works have been provided. Quebec has a good record for improved roads; she is besides looking ahead, conserving her resources.

In the annual address of Hon. Clifford Sifton, Chairman of the Commission of Conservation, it is stated that Quebec has constructed out of its own resources, at a cost of a million and a half dollars, a water storage system on the River St. Maurice, the reservoir thus created having 100,000 million cubic feet capacity, the third largest in the world, the larger being the great Assouan reservoir on the Nile, and the Gatun Lake, on the Panama Canal. This work was done out of Quebec's own resources, while our own Trent reservoir system, costing much less, was provided by federal money.

Quebec has also come into the prohibition ranks, having for years been largely under optional prohibition. An act is before the Legislature to abolish liquor licenses, beginning May 1st, 1919, not provisional, as in the case of Ontario and the Dominion, but permanent—not a mere war measure, subject to ratification, and possible rejection.

In other respects Quebec is coming to a screner frame of mind. The evidences of antagonism created by a long series of rancorous attacks by certain Ontario elements, and by the high feeling of the general elections, seems to be lessening, and will continue as the causes of friction are removed.

As an evidence of liberal spirit and tolerant attitude, the election of a Protestant, English-speaking mayor of Sherbrooke the other day by an electorate composed of two-thirds French Canadians, furnishes an example that, mutatis mutandis, would be rare in other provinces, especially Ontario.

Quebec has many good points and practices that we might adopt with advantage. Quebec will get on better as a worthy member of Confederation if some of her sister provinces will let her alone, or take her kindly by the hand, instead of by the throat.

If the sisterhood of provinces in respect of its members is willing to live and let live, give and take, be conciliatory rather than critical; smooth, instead of rasping, the bonne entente, which is the sine qua non of the best interprovincial relations, will be confirmed, and croakers will be robbed of the cry that Confederation is going to smash.

Queen's University is at the front. It has established new vocational courses in a score of callings. Canada needs practical education.

LOOKING AHEAD.

It becomes Canadians to look ahead, and in the present anticipate the future. Canada, unlike many other countries, hasn't much of a past to look back to—chronologically, only a hundred years. Our future very obviously is before us, and its value will depend upon the manner in which we envisage our future and provide for making it useful; to plant now in order to reap later.

A hundred years is a long time as the mere flight of time goes; but it is a short time in the life of a nation. In 1818, when the hardy settlers invaded this country, a hundred years was a long time ahead of them; as it must have been to our ancestors who made the first survey of Peterborough a hundred years ago, in 1818. But the past century doesn't seem long to us.

It is human to think only of the present—of ourselves; but that is not the attitude with which to regard the future of a country or a community. It is the highest statesmanship, and the most obvious wisdom, to look forward.

A hundred years ago a fir forest was planted in the Vosges mountains in France, upon worthless land; that is upon land unsuited for agricultural purposes. Not long since this timber had a value of $1,500 per acre; and a similarly planted spruce forest near Oberindorf, in the Black Forest, Germany, was valued at $2,500 per acre. Both are striking examples of the profitable results of looking forward and turning the future into money value. These forests cost little to plant. They grew while men slept, lived, acted and died, generation by generation; but the process of wealth production went on ceaselessly and silently.

We have in this county and in the north country, thousands of acres of land, unfit for cultivation, not worth the toil of tilling. By clearing or lumbering they have been denuded of the original forest and stand to-day bleak expanses, growing scant stands of worthless trees.

If a few thousand acres were acquired by the County of Peterborough and planted to pine or spruce, or other good timber, in the course of two or three generations—perhaps less than a hundred years—these lands would be covered with a forest value to provide a perpetual revenue sufficient to pay virtually all the expenses of county administration; and taxation would become, if not unnecessary, a mere formality.

Such a proposal is not visionary in view of the results of forest planting in France and Germany. The results would be certain.

Of course seventy-five or a hundred years is a long time to look forward to; but the years will pass, and the reward will meantime be growing. In the surrounding townships, the descendants of the pioneers are reaping the benefits, occupying the lands taken up by their fathers and grandfathers a hundred years ago.

Looking forward is profitable. Less than a third of a century ago, the Canadian government gave in the form of subsidies 25 million acres of land to the Canadian Pacific Railway—lands then practically worthless from conditions of situation and access. The statesmen of the day may not have thought much of the gift, and the railway people may not have valued it very highly. But the result has been that the railway company has sold of these lands—worthless thirty or thirty-five years ago—enough to amount to the astonishing figures of 80 million dollars, and it is estimated that, including the lands yet to be sold, the total value of the original grant of lands, will reach the figures of 250 million dollars.

The future is not to be despised as an asset, if we prepare for reaping results. It is selfish and short-sighted to legislate, plan and provide only for the present, for ourselves only. The civilized world is waging this awful war, not so much for the present generation, as for future generations.

The dairymen at their recent convention, came out strongly for accepting milk on the basis of fat contents, instead of weight. "Piece-work" is the rule in most city factories, why not make it the rule in cheese and butter factories?

WOMEN AS TRUSTEES.

Says the Woodstock Sentinel Review: Brantford is proud of the fact that it has two women trustees on its Board of Education. This is a natural field for the activity of women, and they may be expected to take an increasingly important part in the work of education. There is plenty of room for women with ideas and enthusiasm on the boards of education throughout the country. There are great opportunities for improvement in our educational system. It is a work in which women are especially interested and for which they have shown an undoubted capacity.—Brantford Expositor.

ITALIANS BURY PRO-GERMAN ALIVE.

Frostburg, Md. — Assuring he had expressed pro-German sentiments and had stated publicly his wish for the success of the German offensive in Italy, infuriated Italians today threw Philip Offman, sexton, into the grave of Leonard A. Calvelli, being buried in Saint Michael's cemetery here, and were proceeding to bury him alive, when his cries for help brought back Rev. Father Andrew J. Deitzer, who was leasing the cemetery. The priest brushed aside the men, and Offman, badly cut and bruised, was pulled from the grave.

Scene from "NOTHING BUT THE TRUTH" at The Grand for two performances next Saturday, January 26. The seats sale opens to-morrow. Referring to the play which appeared at The Russell Theatre last Saturday The Ottawa Journal says:

How Robert Bennett succeeded in telling the truth, the whole truth, and "Nothing But the Truth" for twenty-four hours, was amusingly unfolded at the Russell Theatre last night. This mirth provoking farce was a laugh from start to finish. It wasn't so much what the actors said as the way they said it, and Louis Haines, as Robert Bennett, was a highly efficient fun-maker. A master of facial expression, his witty sayings were pronounced with a ponderous gravity which won for him many outbursts of applause from the enthusiastic audience. His partners in business, E. M. Ralston and Richard Donnelly, who did their level best to make Robert prevaricate and whose failures were the source of much amusement, were little behind Robert. Clarence Van Dusen, a hanger-on of the firm, had as his chief characteristic a nasal drawl which he employed quite effectively.

The girls, Mable and Sable Jackson, were very good actresses, especially Mable. Gertrude Fowler, as Gwendolyn Ralston, Bob's fiancee, had the only really serious part in the play, and her mother, Mrs. R. E. French, was splendid both as to looks and manner. Their neighbour, Ethel Clark, performed her "cry-baby" outbursts very well indeed.

Nor can the Bishop be forgotten. He proved to be a good business head at selling worthless stocks, even extracting the war tax from the worthless Van Dusen.

The play is an adaptation by Frederick Isham. It centres about the bet of ten thousand dollars by Bob, against an equal amount from the other three friends, that he would tell "nothing but the truth" for twenty-four hours. Bob had the money in trust for Gwen, who had promised to double it for charitable purposes, so he had a sufficient reason for wanting to make good. In the course of the allotted time, there were many funny situations created by Bob's unerring frankness in saying exactly what he thought, thus outwitting the other parties to the wager greatly to the expense of Mr. Ralston.

"Nothing But the Truth" is one of the funniest plays ever staged here and it will appeal to all who enjoy a good laugh.

BRITAIN DECIDED IN THREE HOURS AND CANADA ACTED AS PROMPTLY

As chief speaker at the Patriotic Fund launching in Toronto Sir Frederick Smith, Attorney-General of Great Britain, among other things spoke of the causes of the war and Canada's brilliant share in it. Sir Frederick reviewed events since the outbreak of the war, and said that history would not envy those of whom shall at last be said by the universal consent of mankind, "He willed this war." Great Britain was clear and would be cleared in history. They knew who was responsible for the war. They knew that the German Ambassador at Constantinople had told the American Ambassador there six months before the war started the very moment the war would come, and they knew from the evidence of Italy that a year before the war broke out the war was then proposed by the Germans and Austrians to their Italian Allies. "What was the choice given to Great Britain? They did not give us a month in which to decide whether or not Great Britain was to be involved in the greatest and most critical struggle in all her history. It presented itself to those who were responsible for making decisions in quite a different way. You have not forgotten the origin of it all, the murder of a Grand Duke and the proposal by Austria to take steps in relation to Serbia which in one day would reduce Serbia from the status of an independent nation to the status of a vassal nation, and the calculated step that that would involve Russia, and that the whole thing would prepare for the re-opening and finishing of the work of 1870. Everything was prepared and the pistol was put to the head of Sir Edward Grey, representing a nation governed by a pacifist Government and a Government which had neglected what we considered the most elementary points necessary in the preparation for war. Within three hours we were practically presented with an ultimatum by Germany to the effect that 'If we invade France will Britain hold aloof or will Britain not hold aloof?' The honour of Britain and all she has stood for for centuries was involved and we were invited to stand aside and let the Germans march through Belgium, whose neutrality we had guaranteed, in order to conquer France. I told you that two hours were given us to decide on these things, and I tell you now, long afterwards, that two minutes sufficed. (Applause.) We knew well enough that we had no army. All the men we had available to send at that moment was 80,000, and I remember well the agony of anxiety under which the French Government at that moment laboured. They did not know whether we would think it wise to send the only army that we had to France at that desperate moment. The French Ambassador said to Sir Edward Grey, 'We want your army; we need your moral support; if you can send us nothing else, send us the band of the Grenadier Guards.' (Applause.) But we did not content ourselves with that. Not knowing what was going to happen to them, not knowing whether the advance of the mightiest military machine that had ever been made might not overwhelm France, and in overwhelming France submerge civilisation, we put all we had to the hazard and our gallant little army went to France."

Tribute to Sir Sam Hughes.

Sir Frederick said that Britain had no time, under the circumstances, to consult the overseas Dominions. She arrived at the best decision she could and thought the Dominions would take the same view. They all knew what was the view taken by Canada. Great work of improvising had been done by the decadent little island from which he came, but no swifter work had ever been done than that which brought into existence one of the most brilliant divisions ever mobilised, the First Canadian Division. Camps since the war began had sprung up like mushrooms, but surely no camp had ever grown more swiftly than the great camp at Valcartier. As long as the history of this war was taught in the schools of Canada the historian would give a high place to the exertions and efforts of Major-General Sir Sam Hughes. Some said Sir Sam had made mistakes. Well, Lord Kitchener had made mistakes, and no man ever made armies who did not make mistakes.

In a tribute to the gallantry of the First Canadian Division at the second battle of Ypres, Sir Frederick said that if Canada had wished, if they could have assumed the watchword of the French at Verdun "They shall not pass"—for that had been the spirit of the Canadians at Ypres. If the Canadians had given away then, the whole line would have been compromised and broken, and it might be interesting to them to know that Lord French, who was the British Field-Marshal at the time, had told him that in his judgment the second battle of Ypres was not less critical than the first battle of Ypres. (Applause.)

ANOTHER SOLDIER'S GOOD-BYE

(Montreal Daily Mail.)

—A young Englishman, before taking part in a fatal charge "somewhere in France," wrote a letter of farewell to his mother, for, as he told a friend, he had an idea he would not survive the battle. Here is the letter:

"Dearest Mother,—We are in for a very big fight to-morrow, so I am going to leave this note in my pocket, and it will only get to you if I am knocked out. I just want to say good-bye, mother dear. I have had a very happy time of it, and the nicest lot of near relations that a man was ever blessed with. Don't be sorry for me—it is not everyone who has the privilege of dying for all he thinks worth while in the world, and this old world without British influence for good and without you dear people would be a poor place to live in. We are fighting for very high ideals, Justice, honesty and fair play as among nations, for the teachings of Christ as against those of the devil.

"It is an unselfish cause, and one for which I am very proud to be fighting. I know you will be sad, and I would not have it otherwise; but you can comfort yourself with the thought that you, too, have had to make a sacrifice for the noblest possible cause. My best love to father.

"YOUR VERY LOVING SON."

PETES ARE IN GOOD SHAPE FOR TO-MORROW'S GAME WITH LINDSAY

The Peterborough juniors finished their training for Friday night's decisive O.H.A. battle with Lindsay, with a lively practice last night, all the regulars being out except Girard, who is suffering from a slight cold. The team is in the best of shape and are delighted with the fact that there will undoubtedly be a fast sheet of ice to-morrow. A battle on soft ice against the heavier and bulkier Midgets would not have been appreciated, but the present prospects are that the hockey cushion will be hard and fast for the big game at Brock street and the Petes are satisfied.

There is no lack of confidence in the Lindsay camp, and the Midgets rightly say that they will have to be watched every minute of to-morrow night's game.

Referee Burgoyne will start the teams away at 8.15 o'clock and the prospects are for an old time crowd.

The Peterborough team will line-up as follows:

Goal—Murray.
Right defence—Girard.
Substitute—Williams.

GEORGE STREET TEAM LEAD CHURCH LEAGUE

The George Street team, champions of the Church League last year, are out in front in this year's race by reason of the victory over the St. Paul's-All Saints' team last night.

The Methodists won by 8 goals to 4 after an uphill battle, in the early stages of which the ultimate losers looked to have a good chance. The St. Paul's-All Saints' team had a lead of 1 goal to 0 at the end of the first period, and the teams were tied 3 to 3 at the end of the second. However, George Street drew away in the last period and won handily.

In the second game the Mark St. team, last year's runners-up, defeated the Knox-St. Andrew's team after a snappy battle by 4 goals to 1, sending the Presbyterians down into the cellar position.

The score was tied at the end of the first period, with Mark Street leading 2 to 1 at the close of the second. In the last period the East City boys made the game safe by scoring twice.

The league standing is as follows:

	Won	Lost
George Street	2	0
Mark Street	1	1
St. Paul's-All Saints	1	1
Knox-St. Andrew's	0	2

RAISE THE WINDOW.

The death rate in city or country rises or falls with the average window sash. When window is closed tight the death rate goes up. As the chilly autumn nights come and the opening of the window grows smaller, the undertaking business picks up.

Death certificates never mention "closed windows," as the cause of death. It is "tuberculosis," "pneumonia," "La-grippe," that gets the blame. But the real culprit often is the closed window. The germs seldom have a chance when the window is open and the lungs inhale fresh air.

Workers are rarely discharged because they insist on keeping the windows closed, but the boss finds the employee dull-headed, half-hearted and inefficient and looks for some one to do the work better.

Good ventilation of the sleeping room is the most important of all. It can be secured, without much loss of cost and without drafts — though even drafts are infinitely better than a closed window. The open window pays in health.

Settlement Must Be Reached

That is Feeling of Government on Irish Question

Canadian Press Despatch:

LONDON, Jan. 24.— In connection with the report of the Irish convention, which is expected soon, the Associated Press learns that there are two outstanding features which indicate a settlement of the perplexing question whether or not the convention's report is unanimous. One feature is the appreciation on the part of British statesmen that a settlement must be reached for the sake of cementing further friendships with the United States, not only for the period of the war, but for the future. The other feature is that the British public has become wearied by the present state of affairs. It is pointed out that the war has changed the whole problem. Hitherto the Irish question has been kept alive by parties, but now there are no parties and all leaders are agreed that if settlement is possible it must be reached. Thus far there is no inkling what the report will be, but it is believed in responsible quarters that the government will be prepared to step into the breach and force a settlement if necessary. If the convention is unanimous in its recommendations, the government probably will act accordingly, but in event of disagreement the feeling is that the government will accept the majority report and put it into effect with possibly few alterations, calculated to harmonize with different factions in Ireland.

South Monaghan Will Be Invited To Join Peterboro'

South Monaghan will be invited to join the county of Peterborough, to which it is attached by topography and common interests that centre in this city. Reeve McIntosh introduced the subject at this morning's session of the County Council. Two-thirds of the residents of South Monaghan, he said, are anxious to be linked with Peterborough. The township is connected with Durham for school purposes, with Northumberland for county and Provincial legislation, and with Peterborough for Dominion elections. The farmers make this city their market town. In land transactions they have to write to Cobourg, requiring several days before the details are concluded. If Peterborough were the county town they could drive in and complete their business in a day. Some of the South Monaghan men are almost forty miles from Cobourg, and the most of them are comparatively close to Peterborough.

The County Council fell in with Mr. McIntosh's proposal, and will extend a neighbourhood hand to South Monaghan with the hope that it will come under the Peterborough standard.

Scarcity Of Farm Help Tends To Decrease Average School Attendance In East Peterboro'

Interesting Report by Mr. Richard Lees at This Morning's Session of the County Council—Many Teachers Changed Schools Last Summer—Work Suffers From This Weakness.

HOW GRANTS HELP SECTIONS

The following report was presented to the County Council yesterday morning by Mr. Richard Lees, Public School Inspector for East Peterborough townships:

During the year there were in operation 69 rural schools with 71 teachers, 3 village schools with 16 teachers, and one suburban school with 5 teachers, making a total of 92. The schools in eight sections were not open for the full school year, the period varying from six to nine months. These schools were No. 2 Burleigh, No. 14 Belmont, No. 2 Anstruther, and Nos. 2, 4, 5, 6, 7 and 8 Chandos. No. 13 Methuen was not open during the year, the reason being that there were no children to attend. In the discharge of my duties, I made 121 half-day visits, besides several of shorter duration.

A comparison of the qualification of the teachers employed during last term with the same period of 1916 shows a slight improvement, as will be seen from the following:

	1916	1917
First-class certificates	0	3
Second-class certificates	37	44
Third-class certificates	18	16
District certificates	10	4
Temporary certificates	11	10
	77	76

This does not include the village schools where all the teachers held second-class certificates both years.

Altogether there were last fall 19 teachers who held certificates below the grade required for the positions they occupied. Of these, six had no professional training whatever. They were distributed, one each in Belmont, Burleigh, Anstruther, and Chandos, and two in Dummer. It is probably still true that there is not a sufficient supply of qualified teachers, and in consequence the schools whose trustees are alert, in earnest, and willing to pay reasonable salaries get them, while those who are indifferent, over-cautious, or disposed to consider anything good enough, fail. I desire to repeat with emphasis what I have said before, that much of the money paid for cheap, incompetent teachers is absolutely wasted.

Too Many Changes.

Teachers still continue to change as frequently as ever. Of 72 rural school teachers that I visited in the autumn of 1916, I found 25 in the same positions at my last visit, a year later. The average experience of the 71 teachers in the rural schools at the end of the year was nearly four and a half years. Ten of them had an average of 17 years, while twelve others had taught for 3 years more. It will thus be seen that the remaining 49 were practically beginners. Under such conditions, it is hardly reasonable to look for much progress.

How Grants Are Made.

In regard to grants, I shall not follow my previous custom of giving a statement of the amounts received, but shall offer a few remarks in regard to the working of the plan on which the grants are distributed. The most important grant is that paid on the basis of the qualification of the teacher and the amount of salary. Two years ago a change was made in the mode of apportioning this grant for the purpose of securing for the poorer schools a larger share, and by that means enabling them to provide for the children of these schools educational privileges equal to those enjoyed by the more fortunate sections. As at present arranged, no school section with an assessment of $100,000 or over and employing a teacher with a second-class certificate can get a grant exceeding $65 under this head. If the assessment is below $30,000 the grant may be $225, which, with the fixed grant, makes $255. It must be remembered, however, that the former school would get $300 from the township, while in most cases the latter would get only $150.

A Striking Example.

In order to illustrate the manner in which this works to the advantage of poor sections that have some enterprise and devotion to the cause of education, let us consider the example of two adjoining sections. One employs a qualified teacher, though not with a second-class certificate, and pays $575. This section received last year a regular grant of $220, and from the Assessed Schools Fund $450 additional, making a total of $370. Adding to this the township grant of $150, there is left $55 of the teacher's salary to be raised by the section. The neighbouring section employs for six or eight months of the year any sort of teacher that can be got for $350 or less. Their grants last year were $121 and they would be entitled to about $112.50 from the township, making a total of $233.50. The teacher would get, for 8 months, $280, leaving $46.50 to be raised by the section, as compared with $55 in the other case. For $55, one section has a full year's school with a fair chance of a pretty good teacher, while the other pays $46.50 for eight months' school with no chance whatever of efficient service. Or, put it this way. One section by spending $46.50 gets $233.50 to expend for the benefit of the children, while the neighbour, by spending $9.50 more, gets $236.50 more for the same purpose. This is not a special case, but was chosen at random. I did not even look for a good example.

Attendance Not Improved.

There is no indication of any general improvement in the average attendance of the pupils of the rural schools. Indeed I am inclined to think that the scarcity of help in the most of the farming communities has tended to decrease the school average. The total number of children enrolled continues steadily to grow less. Many of the schools are becoming too small for efficient work. There are not enough pupils to keep up interest and to stimulate effort.

What of School Fairs?

The teaching of Agriculture is receiving more attention, but here again the smallness of the schools and the constant changing of teachers are the chief hinderances. Teachers hesitate to undertake the work of a school garden with a class of a dozen or less, especially when most of them are small. On the other hand, trustees hesitate to make the necessary provision when they realize that in six months or less the teacher will probably be gone and replaced by another who may not be interested in that work. The school fair has taken quite a hold on the imagination of a good many of the people of the country. I am not at all convinced as to its efficiency as an educational institution, but this, at least, can be claimed for it. It creates interest, brings into touch with the school many who, otherwise, took little notice of it, and gets the parents and friends together in an event directly connected with school work. These things are important and may pave the way to something better.

Evidence of Public Spirit.

A new building was erected during the year in Section No. 4, Otonabee, at Keene. Through the generosity of one public-spirited citizen, who contributed $2,000 towards its cost, the trustees were enabled to erect a good building at a total cost of about $5,000. The section now has a building of which it will have no need to be ashamed for many years to come.

FOOD CONTROLLER STOPS THE EXPORT OF COMMODITIES NEEDED HERE.

In future no exportation from Canada of sugar, farm or garden seeds, or bran, shorts, or middlings from grain will be permitted except under license from the Food Controller. Revised instructions have been issued by the Commissioner of Customs to collectors at all ports of exit, that shipments of small value must not be licensed by endorsement on the usual shipper's export entry when such shipments include any of the commodities enumerated.

In the case of bran and shorts this action was taken as a result of information that at certain points on the front r, persons were taking food into the United States on farmers' vehicles or sleighs, securing large profits on their operations.

In order to expedite the licensing of fish dealers and to pervent unlicensed persons from shipping fish out of Canada, it is now required that no fish from inland waters in Manitoba, Saskatchewan, or Alberta may be exported after 1st February except under individual licenses for such shipment. Applications for such should be made to Mr. J. D. McGregor, western representative of the Food Controller, Winnipeg.

THE ANNUAL MEETING OF ST. PAUL'S CHURCH

Reports of Various Activities Indicated a most Successful Year--Membership is 1072 the Largest in the History of the Church.

St. Paul's Presbyterian Church has had a good year. The reports of the various activities of the Church for 1917, as presented at the annual congregational meeting, last evening were well calculated to encourage optimism. During the year the membership increased, congregational giving increased and the various societies of the Church all reported a year of activity and progress. The report of the session, presented by the Rev. Robert Pogue, expressed appreciation of the work done by all, a few paragraphs of which report are as follows:

"It is a source of great satisfaction to note the ready response which has been given in money and labour to the many appeals which have been made from various quarters through out the year. While much has been accomplished outside of regular congregational work, the financial needs of the church, both for current revenue and for missions at home and abroad, have not been overlooked. We are pleased to note that the gifts to both these departments of our work shows an increase over a year ago. This is as it should be. With the increase in our church membership and the deepening of the spirtual life of the people, there ought to be an increase in the grace of giving also. The blessing which has come to the donors is sure to result in the enrichment of the life of our church.

"The cloud of this terrible world conflict, which has brought sorrow, suffering and bereavement to so many homes, has not yet lifted, and the indications are that this year will call for greater sacrifices than we have yet made. It is the hope of the session that our people will give themselves to more earnest prayer, humbling themselves under the mighty hand of God, and that one result of this awful discipline will be the strengthening of the bonds of brotherly love among God's own people and a greater consecration to Christ and to the work of the Church.

"There has been steady progress in the different branches of the church's work throughout the year. The membership of the church shows a net increase of 69. We began the year with 1,004 on the roll; we lost by death, 20, by certificate 16, and by being dropped from the roll, 15, or 57 in all. There were added by profession of faith, 67, and by certificate 58. The membership of the church is now 1,072, the largest in the history of the congregation.

"As careful surveys have shown that the percentage of those entering the church from the Sunday School is far greater than those from other sources, the elders and pastor are naturally most interested in the men and women who make up that band of devoted servants of the church, dedicating their time and thoughts to the training of our children."

The session paid a tribute to three young church members who had laid down their lives on the field of battle—Harold Hill, Max. Breckenridge, and Jas. Alp. A former Church member, Grant Mowat, has also made the supreme sacrifice. Their sincere sympathy was extended, also the parents and friends of Geo. Finney, Stewart Anderson, Harold Henry, Victor Thorndyke, Gorman McGee and Chas. Reichard, all of whom were adherents of the church, and gave their lives during the last year for their country.

The women's organizations were congratulated on their good work. "In St. Paul's congregation," said Mr. Pogue, "any session report would be incomplete that did not make special mention of the splendid work accomplished by the ladies of the congregation through the several missionary societies. Their example places a high mark of service for our men; the results that would follow an endeavour by the men to reach their mark would work a revolution through all branches of our Church work."

St. Paul's church is blessed with a graded Sunday School. The superintendent, Mr. A. Mowat, reported an enrollment o fabout 400 and an average attendance of over 280. The regular contributions of the children amounted to $444.13. Special mention was made of the efficient services of the organist, Mr. Allen, of the secretar- treasurer and his assistant, Messrs. Fisk and Middleton, and of the librarians, Messrs. Connal and Johnson.

The reports of the Women's Missionary Society showed total receipts during the year of $1,764.65, the special thank offering alone bringing in $933.50. An appeal was made for even more consecrated service in this society during the coming year.

Another important church organization, The Ladies' Aid Society, reported what was probably the busiest and best year in the history of the Society, their activities netting them well over $550, and much good work being done including the decoration of the Sunday School rooms. On behalf of this society Mr. Madill asked that special collections be turned over to them to aid them in their relief of the poor, which has been one of the extra duties of this society. The congregation heartily approved of giving them the preparatory service collections for this purpose.

St. Paul's is, perhaps, best known outside of our church as a missionary church, supporting their own missionary in Corea, and at present the two adult Bible classes are giving financial assistance to the training of one of the young ladies of the church, Miss Maud Atcheson, for missionary work abroad. Total bequests to missions during the year totalled $6,480.06. The Fraser Mission Band showed a balance on hand at the end of the year of over $400, and the Faithful Workers' Mission Band, a young ladies' organization, sent a check for $150 to the Presbyterian

The first draft of the estimates for the Fire, Water and Light Committee this year totals $26,394.48. Of this sum $18,190.48 is for regular salaries, by Chief Grange and his assistant of $400 for salary increases requested from, and the remaining $7,804.00 covers general expenses of the Department.

Last year's appropriation was $18,500, which is $90.48 less than the salary list for 1918, if the increases are granted. The actual expenditure last year was $20,001.25, but part of this is otherwise provided for, leaving an overdraft of approximately $1,000.

These are the bulky figures that outline the requirements of the Fire Department this year. Ald. Dobbin's committee received the announcement without a fluster and no one mentioned the pruning hook of other days. With the Department at full strength and all the increased salaries fixed last year together with the incoming motor truck, more fire hose, new rubber hip-length boots and coats and other incidentals, the Committee was apparently prepared for increased estimates:

THE SALARY SHEET.

The present salary list is made up as follows:

Chief	$1,400
Assistant Chief	1,100
Captain	1,050
Lieutenant	1,025
Electrician	1,100
Engineer	1,000
Nine men ($1,000 each)	9,000
One man	950
One man	900
Substitute for 238 days at $2.46 a day	545.48
Watchman	120.00
	$18,190.48

The increases asked for are:

	1917	1918	Inc.
Chief	$1,400	$1,600	$200
Assist.	1,100	1,200	100
Captain	1,050	1,100	50
Lieut.	1,025	1,075	50
			$400

HORSES ATE $1,931.75

Chef Grange's report disclosed the cost of nine horses' fare of oats, hay, carrots, meal cake, etc. at $1,931.75, or $214.64 for each horse for twelve months. In other words the rate of cost of one horse's feed was 58 7-9 cents a day. Some of the items were:

1,200 bus. of oats, at 90c	$1,080
30 tons of hay at $17	510
Straw	155

MOTOR DIFFICULTIES.

Ald. Worth suggested the complete motorization of the Department as a stroke in economy, but doubted whether heavy motor apparatus could be driven any place in the city against the present depth of snow.

Ald. Dobbin—"I don't think it could. I believe it would be useless. This has been an extreme winter. Toronto's Fire Department is paralyzed except in the very centre of the city, where the streets have been cleaned."

EXPENSES OF THE CHIEF'S CAR

The Chief's report included the cost of the maintenance of the red runabout for six months. Chief Howard used it during July and August:

Accessories and repairs—
Howard acct.	$13.60
Grange acct.	7.35
Lubricating oil	1.55
Gasoline—
Howard, 47 gals.	17.86
Grange, 25 gals.	8.95
	$49.31

Subtracting the first item, which was largely for permanent fixtures, the running cost was $35.71 or $5.95 a month It should be remembered that the Chief has not used the car regularly since early in November.

APPLES! APPLES!

For cooking and eating, also canned and evaporated. Choice Sound Potatoes, Table Carrots, Red Currant Jam 75c. per pail. Best Oleomargarine. Fresh Eggs and Butter. Delivered anywhere in the city. Jas. R. Bell, Sanitary Grocer, 197 Hunter street. 'Phone 455. dtf.

FISH CLOGGED IN WATER WHEEL

LINDSAY, Jan. 24.—One day last week a strange situation developed at Stephenson's chop mill, Omemee. The water wheel became clogged, refusing to perform its duties, and upon investigation it was found that the trouble was caused by a school of bass and maskinonge, which had come up the river under the ice and lodged in the wheel. Many of them were badly mangled and villagers carried them away in bags for chicken feed.

Percentage Of Attendance In West Peterboro' Schools Was 60

Inspector G. E. Broderick, of Lindsay, reported to the County Council that he had made 70 half day visits in West Peterborough during the year. He found 31 teachers employed, 2 first class, 20 second, 7 third, 1 district and 1 temporary certificate.

"It is very satisfactory to be able to report fewer changes in teachers than formerly. With the increasing number of teachers holding higher qualification and greater stability in the profession, higher efficiency in school work should be expected. And we are getting it. Slowly, perhaps, because while many of the teachers are qaulified, they lack experience.

Equipment.

In May, 1916, the Minister of Education issued instructors to Inspectors to the effect that the payment of all grants for 1917 would be conditional upon the Board's supplying all the minimum equipment required by the Regulations. All the schools but three on both sides of the Inspectorate complied with the Minister's request. In Peterborough west about $350.00 was expended in equipment during the year.

The statement gave the salaries of the teachers and also recorded the attendance. In the Peterborough townships of Mr. Broderick's inspectorate there were 505 pupils enrolled, with an average of 4541.73 and a percentage of 60.

Mr. Broderick has been ill and was unable to attend the meeting of the Council. His report was read by Mr. Lees.

This Will Remove Hair or Fuzzy Growths

(Toilet Tips.)

A safe, certain method for ridding the skin of hair, hairy growths is as follows: Mix a paste with some powdered delatone and water, apply to hairy surface about 2 minutes, then rub off, wash the skin and the hairs are gone. This is entirely harmless and seldom requires repeating, but to avoid disappointment it is advisable to see that you get genuine delatone.

City Will Deliver Coal Only In Half-Ton Lots To Families That Can't Pay For Delivery

Delivery of coal by the city henceforth will be restricted to orders of not less than half a ton and only to those persons who cannot pay for their own deliveries. This was the decision of the Fire, Water and Light committee last night, and it was confidently assumed that the city had done more than its share in meeting the recent crisis. More than 1,500 orders have been delivered by the Police Department in bitterly severe weather, a service that was fully recognized by the committee. Practically all of the orders were for small quantities of 200 and 300 pounds, a supply sufficient for scarcely more than a week in the average home. As a result, police constables, Street Commissioner Evans, occasionally a fireman or two, and sometimes a willing citizen have simply been travelling in a monotonous circle and it was gradually expanding. Convinced that the emergency is passing, the committee feel that this voluntary delivery system should be limited to the most necessitous families and that the dealers should make all the other deliveries.

This attempt to return to normal conditions was embodied in a resolution moved by Ald. Werth and seconded by Ald. Jones.

The committee declined to negotiate with John Crowe, a farmer, who offered to deliver first quality hardwood in the city at $11 a cord. It was felt that this would be brought in anyway, and that the wood importations should be confined to that which will come from a distance.

Have Sold 42 Cords.

"We have sold 42 cords of the hardwood we contracted for. It is of satisfactory quality and has sold at $10.75 a cord. There was some basswood in it," Ald. Dobbin said, "so we culled this out and paid for it at the price of soft wood. We have sold all that has been sent us and another car is on the way."

No More Soft.

The city's flurry in soft wood has been cancelled. The limit was two cars and the most of it was green, round elm.

"It wouldn't burn this year and I don't think you could chop it," Ald. Saunders remarked.

No Emergency Yet.

"A number of citizens have asked me if the Council intended to commandeer coal from private homes," Ald. Dobbin.

"When Chief Thompson announces that he can't get coal from the dealers then I'll be ready to consider the supplies in the citizen's cellars," Mayor Duncan declared. "We will not go into the cellars unless the people are in actual want. There must be an emergency."

Using Horse For Board.

Ald. Dobbin informed the committee that Chief Grange was reluctant to use the spare horse at the Fire Hall for fuel delivery. Mr. H. Evans secured the use of another horse for its "board" at the Fire Hall. This arrangement was approved by the committee.

"Cinderella" Most Successfully Repeated

The pleasing comic opera "Cinderella," which was so successfully presented under the direction of Mrs. A. A. Perrin on Friday, 11th January, was repeated at the Grand Opera House last night to the delight of a large audience, and won fresh laurels for the producer and the talented amateurs in her company.

The first performance was in aid of the Serbian Relief and British Red Cross Funds, while the net proceeds of last night's entertainment will be devoted to the work of the Peterborough branch of the Canadian Red Cross Society.

The operetta, with its tuneful music and its charming costumes and delightful dances was most pleasingly presented last night, and the success of the initial performance was emphatically confirmed.

All the principals again scored heavily last evening. Mrs. Perrin was delightful as Prince Charming, combining an attractive personality with a splendid voice that made her vocal numbers most enjoyable. Mrs. D. Nicholls gave a splendid portrayal of the title role, showing both histrionic and vocal ability. Mrs. W. Greenslade and Miss Ida Sanderson were effective in their presentation of the parts of the cruel sisters, and Mr. "George" Lynch caused much amusement by his work in the role of Cinderella's father. Miss Keltha Kidd was a successful cast as the Fairy Godmother, and the other parts were in good hands.

A feature of the performance was the minuet number in the second act, which was most effectively given and which provided a most charming stage picture.

Miss Edith Price and Miss Ennie Aylmer contributed a rose ring dance that was most gracefully executed.

All the musical numbers were well received. Probably the most delightful of all was the trio, "Wandering Sons of Minstrelsy," by Mrs. Perrin, Miss Ruby Quartermaine, and Miss Etta Kemp, in which the three splendid voices blended most harmoniously.

Third Annual Report Of St. Andrew's Patriotic League

Society Accomplished a Splendid Work During the Year --Officers Elected For the Current Year--The Treasurer's Report.

The third annual report of St. Andrew's Church Patriotic League contains the following:

Another year has passed by and during this year our Society has done splendid work. The attendance has not been large, but those who have been out have proved themselves faithful workers. Therefore we have a very encouraging report of the work. We also have met with troubles, but they have been taken in the right spirit, and instead of discouraging our members, they have worked all the more earnestly.

At the very outset of the year we were called upon to lose our President, Mrs. Moore was forced to resign on account of ill health. We thereby lost a good and faithful President after considerable difficulty in getting one to undertake the responsibility. Mrs. Howard Waram was elected our new President, but early in November, on account of her leaving the city, we were called upon to accept her resignation. Just before Mrs. Waram's resignation our much-beloved Vice-President, Mrs. Waddell, Sr., was called away by the Hand of Death. Our Society was then left without a President or Vice-President. Mrs. Rowand very kindly accepted the office as President until the end of the year for which we were all very grateful. Early in 1917 death called home one of our most faithful workers, in the person of Miss Read, who was convenor of the Knitting Committee. This office was filled later by Mrs. McClelland. During the year our Society has raised money in various ways. We served supper at the annual Congregational meeting which resulted in a neat little sum of money to start the new year with. An appeal, through a circular letter, was sent to all the members of the congregation. Several donations were received in this way, for which we wish to thank all those who responded so generously. Four very successful teas were held during the year, and the Society feels grateful to Mrs. McClelland, Mrs. F. L. Robinson, Mrs. Glover and Mrs. McNabb for the use of their homes on these occasions. We particularly thank Dr. F. L. Robinson for the proceeds of one afternoon performance at the Empire Theatre. This was a very generous donation. We also extend our thanks to Mr. Chisholm for the proceeds of a life membership fee, got through Miss Morrow for Mrs. Chisholm. The organ recital given by Mr. H. A. Fricker of Toronto was a huge success.

The Society especially thanks Miss Mercedes Rae for her kindness in donating the proceeds of a bazaar she held at her home on Margaret Avenue, in July.

The workroom has been opened every Thursday during the year except for the Christmas holidays, when it was thought wise to close, each member taking home a portion of work to finish. A good deal of work was accomplished in that way

LIST OF WORK.

The amount of work done in the year ending 1917, is as follows:

19 dressing gowns, 664 towels, 144 sheets, 137 gray flannel shirts, 222 pyjama suits, 5 pillow cases, 30 housewives, 5 personal property bags, 6 many-tailed bandages, 12 bed pads, 24 trench caps, 175 pairs socks, also 46 boxes were filled with Christmas cheer and sent to our boys overseas.

Respectfully submitted,
Edith John, Secretary.

ON THE RED RED ROAD TO HOOGE

The following verses were sent home to Mr. F. Austin by Corp. R. W. Austin, formerly of the 8th C.M.R., and now on active service in France. They are worthy of reproduction in the Examiner:

On the Red, Red Road to Hooge.

You on parade go get your spade,
Fall in the pick and shovel brigade,
There's a carrying fatigue for half a legion,
And work to do with the spade.
This is the dust and ruins of Ypres towns
The seventeen inch still battering down,
Screeching death in a fiery breath
On the red, red road to Hooge?

Who is the one whose time has come?
Who will not return when the work is done?
Who will leave his bones
On the blood-stained stones
On the red, red road to Hooge.

Onward, Canucks, with never a stop
To the sand bag trenches and over the top,
Over the top, though a bullet you stop
On the red, red road to Hooge.

The burst and roar of the hand grenade
Welcome us into the death parade,
The bit of gloom in the Valley of Doom,
In the craters down at Hooge.
Fell many a soldier from the Rhine
Must sleep to-night in a bed of lime,
'Tis a pitiless grave for a knave so brave
In the crater down at Hooge.

Hark to the stand to fusillade,
Sling your rifle, go get your spade
And spade away till the break of day
Or a hole you'll fit at Hooge.
Call the roll, and another name
To rent the smell of the roll of fame,
So we carve a cross to mark the loss
Of a chum who fell at Hooge.

No need for the pastor to write
No mother's charge in the dawning light,
The daily mail wont tell a tale
Of the night work done at Hooge.
But our general knows and his praise we have won,
And he's pleased with the work the Canucks have done,
Through shot and shell, at the mouth of hell
On the red, red road to Hooge.

HOW THE PRUSSIANS DEAL WITH MINXES IN TIME OF WAR

Quite an amusing story is told in a London Sunday paper of two shameless young hussies at Rosenberg (West Prussia), who advertised in the local paper that they were "bored", and desired to make the acquaintance of two "young educated gentlemen of jolly, free and easy temperament" to take them to parties and winter sports. The next issue contained a reply, signed by the police, "recommending" them to follow the example set them by thousands of English girls, who now have no cause to whine about boredom," and enter a munitions factory. The notice concluded:

"Unless the two girls referred to adopt this course within a week from to-day, the police authorities will enter their homes and, if need be, drive them to work."

The compliment to the energy of English girls is so flattering that one cannot forbear returning it to the German police

With Walter Lawrence in "COME BACK TO ERIN" At the Grand Next Monday.

At last we are to see a new Irish comedy-drama, wherein the good fairies have no part in the making and the long-abused low villain is eliminated. The story of "Come Back to Erin," the play which will bring Mr. Walter Lawrence to The Grand next Monday, 28th January, is said to be an up-to-the-minute theme dealing with life in Ireland as it is to be found to-day, abounding with startling situations, heart interest, and wholesome comedy. The play is in four acts, and during its progress Mr. Lawrence sings many of the old songs and some new ones that have gained popular favour.

How Interned Ships Damaged By Huns Were Quickly Repaired

All the damage done to 109 German ships by their crews prior to their seizure by the United States government when war was declared has been repaired and these ships are to-day in service, adding more than 500,000 gross tonnage to the transport and cargo fleets in war service for the United States.

There is evidence that a German central authority gave an order for destruction of these ships, effective on or about Feb. 1, 1917, simultaneous with the date set for unrestricted submarine warfare, and that the purpose was to inflict such vital damage to the machinery of all German ships in our ports that none could be operated for from eighteen months to two years. This purpose has been defeated in signal fashion. In less than eight months all the ships were in service.

The destructive campaign of the German crews cunningly comprehended a system of ruin which they believed would necessitate the shipping of new machinery to substitute for that which was ruthlessly battered down or painstakingly damaged by drilling or dismantlement. There is documentary proof that the enemy believed the damage irreparable.

To obtain new machinery would have entailed a prolonged process of design, manufacture and installation. Urged by the necessity of conserving time the engineers of the Navy Department succeeded by unique means in patching up and welding the broken parts and replacing all of the standard parts which the Germans detached from their engines and destroyed or threw overboard. The mechanical evidence is that the campaign of destruction was operated on these ships for than two months and that the Germans were convinced that they were making a thorough job of it. Their scheme of ruin was shrewdly devised and deliberately executed, and it ranged from the plugging of steam pipes to the utter demolition of boilers by dry firing.

When the United States shipping board experts first surveyed the ruin the belief was expressed that much new machinery would have to be designed, manufactured, and installed, making eighteen months a fair estimate of the time required. However, at the navy department, where the need of troop and cargo ships was an urgent issue, officers of the bureau of steam engineering, having faith that the major portion of the repairs could be accomplished by patching and welding, declared it was possible to clear the ships for service by Christmas, and the last of the fleet actually took her final sea test and was ordered into service as a Thanksgiving gift to the nation.

To accomplish this end the navy department secured the services of all available machinery, welders and patchers, many of them having been voluntarily offered by the railroads.

When the Leviathan, formerly the Vaterland, and the largest ship afloat, was put into commission by the United States' government and sent to sea for a trial, her commander, a young American naval officer, was ordered to "exert every pound of pressure that she possesses, for if there is any fault we want to know it now." The Leviathan stood the test.

Inspection developed the fact that the destruction on all of the ships was, in general, the same, confirming the theory that general instructions had been issued to all commanding officers by the same agent. It also appeared that the parts damaged, as a rule, were those probably on hand as spare parts in the home ports of the vessels and thus, in case this country did not enter the war the ships could again be commissioned by utilizing spare parts which could have been obtained when navigation opens to the Germans.

In breaking the great cylinders of the liner engines there was practised a system of boring holes in curved lines and the breaking out a piece by battering the weakened point by means of a ram, rigged for the purpose. When more delicate machinery was involved, there were instances of sacking parts until they were bent and broken. Many cylinders were cracked from the blows of the rams. In the cases of boilers melted down by dry firing it was necessary, of course, to replace them, but in no instance did the American engineers fail to repair a broken cyclinder by welding.

Oxy-Acetylene Welding is one of the most wonderful scientific inventions of the age, ranking in magnitude with wireless telegraphy or the discovery of radium, it is hard to understand why it is not more often taken advantage of by the general public, as practically all broken metal parts of machinery, automobile and household utensils formally relegated to the scrap heap can now be quickly and cheaply repaired by its use.

People of this locality are fortunate in having a welding repair shop located here. Mr. Millard, 225 Hunter street, has been using this process in his repair shop for the past two years and has repaired with complete success hundreds of broken articles, ranging all the way from small typewriter parts to engine cyclinders weighing hundreds of pounds.

1,000,000 WOMEN IN BRITISH WAR PLANTS

WORK ON EQUAL PAY BASIS.

Vast Number of Fighters Released by Readiness with Which Places Are Filled.

More than 1,000,000 women are now employed in munition plants in England, and are engaged in most classes of skilled labour, according to a study of the employment of women prepared by the Industrial Bureau of the Merchants' Association.

"At the beginning of the employment of women in 1915," the report says, "practically all employers in England looked upon the introduction of a woman into a machine shop as one of the horrors of war, but nothing has been so remarkable as the change in the attitude of manufacturers toward the employment of a woman. Now if any question arises as to the employment of an unskilled man no employer will hesitate to employ the woman. She has been found to be quicker in acquiring skill and is far better and faster than the type of man left in the factories now."

The report gives the experience of some factories to show that the introduction of women labour has usually benefitted the men, because the women have first been placed in the unskilled labour class, and the men in that class moved up into the semi-skilled class, commanding higher pay.

"Later on," the report continues, when practically all of the useful men had been drafted or had gone into the munition industries, the Labour Supply Department adopted the scheme of using women for every job women could do or could be trained to do. In this connection a condition attached to their use, agreed upon by both capital, and labour should be mentioned. It was agreed that women undertaking skilled work should receive the same day rate as skilled men and the same piece rate. A woman's wage could differ from that of a man only when employed on unskilled or semi-skilled work, and then she came up under an order which fixed the minimum wage at a rate which in general came to about two-thirds of the man's wages, varying with the district involved. The lower rate on unskilled work was due to the fact that women were found to be less effective on these general tasks, because on heavy lifting and such work it was found necessary to replace two men with three women.

"The conditions of pay for women have not been particularly advantageous to employers directly, but indirectly they have been of very great value. As a result of the good wages that women have been able to earn on munition work, employers have never lacked applicants for almost every kind of work. At the present time the employment of women in England is limited only to the facilities for training them. As a further result of equal wages, the class of women taken into the munition plants has been much above the class of the factory girl and the women employed by the textile works before the war. Women of good position and with fair education have been found, and this doubtless has had a very great influence on the variety of work on which it has been possible to employ women.

It soon became apparent that women could be rapidly trained into skilled workmen, according to the report. One factory, making light shells, was cited in which 94 per cent. of the employees were women. It continues.

"Taking shell, fuse, and grenade work as a whole, the average number of women employed is about 80 per cent. Of the skilled operations, such as howitzer work, the averages are not so high, but there are individual cases which show just high a percentage of women employes. In the largest English explosive factory there are 15,000 hands, and of these 11,000 are women. On trinitrotuluol manufacture the average is about 80 per cent. women, and on picric acid the average is about 40 per cent. On filling fuses and that class of work the average is generally well over 90 per cent.

"Women have undertaken work in every industry which has any bearing on munitions. Outside of the machine shops their work is very largely labouring work, and they have undertaken labouring in every industry under the worst conditions, even such conditions as exist in blast furnaces, acid works, iron and steel plants.

"For the more highly skilled work on howitzers, airplanes, engines, etc. the Ministry of Munitions has had to help the employers by equipping training schools. By far the greatest part of the women on that work have been trained in the factories themselves, but the smaller factories have found considerable difficulty in doing their own training, and in many factories there is too little work of this nature on which women can gradually acquire skill.

"The Ministry has therefore established two classes of training establishments— training school attached to the various technical colleges that exist in most industrial centres and factories taken over by the Ministry and equipped as instructional plants. They do actual munitions work in these training establishments. They do not attempt to give general training, but they give specialized training on a specific type of machine, and in that way women acquire a considerable degree of skill in a period of from six to eight weeks."

ANOTHER SMALLPOX CASE.

Another case of smallpox was discovered in the city today in a family living in the vicinity of the Central School, following closely on the removal yesterday of a patient to the Isolation Hospital. An emergency meeting of the Board of Health was held when it was decided to authorize the purchase of four tents to be used in the event of an outbreak, and to authorize a public vaccination should the disease spread. The principal of the public schools to-day advised the children to be vaccinated, and a notice to that effect was made public by Chairman P. S. Coate, of the Board of Education on the advice of Dr. T. L. McRitchie, M.O.H.

CANADA IS TO CO-OPERATE ON COAL PROBLEM

Fuel Controller Magrath Goes to Washington For Conference.

OTTAWA, Jan. 23.—Mr. C. A. Magrath, fuel controller, left last night for Washington to take up with Dr. Garfield, the American fuel controller, the question of the best means of Canada co-operating with the United States in conserving the continent's fuel supply.

If an order similar to that issued in the United States fixing every Monday a holiday and closing down industries for a stated period will aid the situation, Canada is ready to take similar action. The American difficulty is largely one of transportation and the Canadian roads are not congested as are the lines in the United States.

In the meantime, the war cabinet is endeavouring to speed up coal production in the coal mines of Nova Scotia. Hon. Gideon Robertson, recently returned from Nova Scotia, where he was helping settle labour disputes in the coal mines. He took up with the men and the companies the question of increasing production. A number of practical suggestions by which production could be increased even with the present labour supply were made and will be put into force immediately. Efforts also will be made to secure more labour.

Repington Says That The Huns Outnumber Allies In The West

Germans Have Concentrated 2,000,000 There, "To Forestall U. S. Arrival"—Claims Armies Have Not Been Adequately Maintained and Reinforced.

QUESTIONS PREMIER'S COURAGE

LONDON, Jan. 25. — Tremendous concentration of German troops on the western front, and possibility of an early attack to forestall and offset the arrival of any great force of Americans was revealed here to-day by the famous military critic, Col. Repington, writing in the London Post.

"I am not going to mince words," he declared. "The Germans have now concentrated 165 divisions in the west, which is more than the combined forces of all the allies. These forces are increasing at the rate of seven to fifteen divisions monthly, and it is possible the total may eventually grow to 200 or 250 divisions.

Germans May Attack.

"With a superiority amounting to an advantage of fifty divisions, the Germans may attack when the necessary time has elapsed.

"Our armies have not been adequately maintained and reinforced since the time of Earl Kitchener.

"It is a question of the deepest concern to every man, woman and child in the United Kingdom, whether Field Marshal Haig can now be sufficiently reinforced in time to compete with the enemy on fair terms. In my opinion he will not be.

"We ought to withdraw 100,000 men from distant expeditions. Notably, there is Salonika. We must increase through combing out the trades by 350,000 men, call from Ireland 200,000 and call out the men between the ages of 18 and 19."

Questions Premier's Courage.

He says further that each man at the front has had to do the work of two because the Premier has lacked the courage to tell the country the truth and to pass on to the public the advice he must have received from any general staff conscious of its duty.

"The most favourable construction I can place on the Premier's inaction," he adds, "is that he was gambling for peace by Christmas, but in spite of his innumerable speeches, no peace came."

In this strain the writer proceeds at great length. He charges the Cabinet with procrastination and cowardice.

This is the first public statement from Repington since he severed his connection with the Times.

"Stonewall" Jackson was not a man to speak ill of another man without reason. At a council of Generals early in the war, one of them remarked that Major Smith was wounded and would be unable to perform a certain duty.

"Wounded!" said Jackson. "If that is so it must have been by an accidental discharge of his duty!"—The Southern Bivouac.

HERD INSANE TOGETHER.

Unprecedented Overcrowding in New York Insane Institutions.

ALBANY, Jan. 22.—Unprecedented overcrowding in the State institutions for the insane, is charged in the annual report of the State Charities Aid Association to the State Hospital Commission, made public to-day. The total capacity of the thirteen State hospitals is rated at 27,809, and at the end of the fiscal year they contained 34,739 inmates, an excess of 6,908, or 25 per cent.

"The overcrowding has grown steadily worse, year by year, and has long since reached a point where it jeopardizes the standards of care and treatment and retards the recovery of patients," the report says.

The Charities Aid Association believes that the State ought to appropriate at once $20,000,000 to provide adequately for the insane and feebleminded, the expenditure to run over ten years.

Cocoanut Oil Fine For Washing Hair

If you want to keep your hair in good condition, be careful what you wash it with.

Don't use prepared shampoos or anything else, that contains too much alkali. This dries the scalp, makes the hair brittle, and is very harmful. Just plain mulsified cocoanut oil (which is pure and entirely greaseless), is much better than anything else you can use for shampooing, as this can't possibly injure the hair.

Simply moisten the hair with water and rub it in. One or two teaspoonfuls will make an abundance of rich, creamy lather, and cleanses the hair and scalp thoroughly. The lather rinses out easily, and removes every particle of dust, dirt, dandruff and excessive oil. The hair dries quickly and evenly, and it leaves it fine and silky, bright, fluffy and easy to manage.

You can get mulsified cocoanut oil at most any drug store. It is very cheap, and a few ounces is enough to last everyone in the family for months.

Newest skirts are so narrow that they allow only the tiniest steps.

Omemee Enjoying Hydro Lighting.

City people, who have always enjoyed modern conveniences, would never imagine the joy and delight of the citizens of this little village when the Hydro-Electric was turned on in almost every home, as well as the places of business, on Thursday evening, 17th January.

Since work was started in the village last June many delays and disappointments have been patiently endured, the last delays being caused by the storm of Saturday and Sunday, two weeks ago, which made it necessary to postpone the visit of the inspector, who arrived about four o'clock, via Port Hope, on Thursday afternoon. In the evening the village was transformed into a veritable fairyland.

The Late Mrs. John Bannan.

The death of Mrs. John Bannan, which occurred on the 12th of January, came as a very great shock to her friends, many of whom had not heard of her illness, which lasted only five days. The cause of her death was pneumonia. All that skilled nursing and the best medical attention could do was done to save her life, but without avail.

Mrs. Bannan was a member of the Anglican Church, and the service on Tuesday afternoon was conducted at the home by Rev. Mr. James, the remains being interred in Emily Cemetery.

Left to mourn the loss of a loving helpmate and a kind and indulgent mother are the bereaved husband and three sons, Otto and Thomas at home, and Stewart, who has been serving in France since 1914.

DEAD MEN'S EFFECTS ARE AUCTIONED ON DECK

An Old Custom of Sea Followed in British Navy—Relatives Benefit.

LONDON.—Dead men's effects are sold at auction on the ship's deck by an old custom of the British navy. Prices out of all proportion to the value of goods are often realized for the man's heirs, especially if the late owner was popular with his shipmates.

Purely personal belongings, such as letters and photographs, are first taken out to be forwarded to the deceased's relatives. Then, as soon as official sanction is obtained, the rest of the articles are taken to a convenient part of the ship and offered for sale. The master-at-arms acts as auctioneer.

Bidders who have obtained the small articles from such an auction sometimes throw back their purchases for resale until as many jackies as feel inclined have had a chance of contributing something towards the assistance of the dead man's next of kin. Thus these 'kit sales become the lower deck's way of taking up a charitable collection.

The kit of a deserter is similarly sold by auction, the proceeds going to the national treasury. But the whole outfit rarely fetches more than a few shillings, as many sailors regard the possession of articles formerly belonging to a deserter as undesirable, if not unlucky.

ASSIST FARMERS WITH THRESHING

New Plan May Be Tried If Extra Labour Can Be Secured

WOULD SEND OUT GANGS

If the Federal Government, co-operating with the provincial authorities, is able to solve the farm labour problem, it is probable that a new system will be put into effect in Ontario next Fall in order to facilitate threshing. The officials of the Ontario Department of Agriculture are now studying a plan to substitute co-operative threshing, as now carried on by the farmers by puting out a large number of threshing gangs. There are many difficulties in the way, but the proposed system has so many advantages that every effort will be made to make it workable.

At the present time much of the threshing in Ontario is carried on by the farmers helping each other. On farms where there is an insufficiency of labour this means that the farmer, in repaying his neighbours for assistance, must drop plowing and other necessary Fall work for ten days or two weeks, sometimes more. The result, naturally, is a smaller acreage of land under cultivation the following summer.

The plan suggested is that approximately 2,000 threshing gangs of about eight men each be sent out next Fall. These men, of course, would have to be drawn from the cities and towns, but it is hoped that the measures to be put into force by the Dominion Government will provide the men. With threshing over most of these men could be returned to their ordinary occupations.

In the option markets the bears are becoming discouraged and the markets remain so persistently strong and the avalanche in receipts which was to bear down prices is so long in materialising. They are still looking for the big receipts, but in the meantime cash offerings are at a premium.

"THE CLUE IN THE AIR"

Conversation was impossible in the breakneck dash of the roadster down through the crowded streets. Speed regulations were set at naught, the policemen on the way evidently recognising the gray car and its distinguished occupant. McCarty set his teeth and held on grimly, with a mental note to side-step a like invitation in the future, and made no effort to speak until they pulled up before the doors of the Glamorgan.

A pretty nurse arranging the pillows in a baby carriage in the hall looked up at McCarty with an expression of blank surprise as they entered, which swiftly changed to sullen apprehension as she caught sight of her quondam admirer's lifted hat with an indignant toss of her head.

"Is that the girl?" asked Wade Terhune, and scarcely waiting the other's nod, he approached her.

She was obviously disposed to be distant and non-committal at first but she quickly surrendered, and from a discreet distance McCarty saw that she was repeating her story of the encounter with the other woman. After a few moments she and the detective turned and disappeared up the stairs together.

"She showed me the exact spot where she overtook Miss Rowntree," the latter explained when he rejoined McCarty. "Her story appears to be straight enough. What a pity her curiosity did not lead her to watch and see which apartment the young lady entered. But that, I think, is a foregone conclusion."

McCarty paused at the elevator door and eyed him.

"You mean that one with the window open, and the roses?" he asked breathlessly. "The one the other girl walked out of and away under our noses?"

Palpitation of the Heart and Nerve Troubles

WERE CURED BY

Milburn's Heart and Nerve Pills

When the heart begins to beat irregularly or intermittently, palpitate and throb, skip beats, beat fast for a time, then so slow as to seem almost to stop, it causes great anxiety and alarm and the least excitement or exertion seems to affect it.

Many people are kept in a state of morbid fear of death, become weak, worn and miserable through this unnatural action of the heart.

To all sufferers from heart troubles we would advise the use of Milburn's Heart and Nerve Pills, which by their action in strengthening the heart and regulating the beat remove all the distressing conditions, and impart vigor and vitality to the system.

Mrs. Thomas Davidson, Mount Brydges, Ont., writes: "I have been a great sufferer in the past with nerve troubles and palpitation of the heart. I tried several remedies, but without any good results. My son came in one day and advised me to take Milburn's Heart and Nerve Pills. After using one and a half boxes, I am fully recovered, and am in a perfect state of health, thanks to your valuable medicine."

Price 50c a box at all dealers, or mailed direct on receipt of price by The T. Milburn Co., Limited, Toronto, Ont.

"I mean the apartment we are going to now." Terhune stopped, and then, as the boy entered the cage and fastened the door, he added: "To the third floor, please, Mrs. Doremus."

McCarty caught his breath. The woman whom he had convicted of the first lie, and whose manner had been so bafflingly furtive! Wade Terhune must of course be in possession of some more indicative fact than her mere reticence about a guest on the night of the tragedy. To be sure, he himself had seen her open her window and heard her first scream of surprise and horror, but had the inspector not said that the window might have been closed quickly almost before the body touched the sidewalk, and a person with sufficient presence of mind would know that by again raising it violently and screaming, attention would be drawn to the fact that it had been closed?

However, presence of mind was the last virtue McCarty would have attributed to Mrs. Doremus, even though in the midst of her panic and hysteria she had remembered to shield her visitor from being drawn into the inquiry. Who had that guest been, and was the motive for concealing his presence on that night a deeper and more sinister one than an attempt to save him from the nuisance of an interrogation?

The maid, Mary, opened the door to them, and McCarty found himself watching her askance. There was a perceptible difference in her attitude since the night of the tragedy. Pert and self assured she had been then, resisting their authority to the point of insolence when they had first demanded to see and question her mistress, civil later only when she wanted to divulge her own information concerning the voice she had heard in the air shaft. Yet there had been about her, too, an air of furtiveness—a barely concealed apprehension—which McCarty, the unimaginative, had divined rather than observed.

Now it had vanished, and although she was demurely respectful in the presence of the great detective, her poise and self assurance were more marked, and there was a veiled mockery in her manner which puzzled McCarty more than a little.

Mrs. Doremus was standing in her drawing room pulling on her gloves when they entered, and she bridled defiantly as she returned Wade Terhune's suave salutation. In her street costume her plump figure unmistakably revealed the lines of middle age, and her face seemed sharpened in the clear morning light.

"I am going to a hotel, Mr. Terhune," she announced, her mouth tightening. "I understand it is by your request that I have received an order preventing me from packing and removing my things to a storehouse, but you surely will not attempt to go so far as to make me a prisoner here?"

"Certainly not, Mrs. Doremus. You are free to make what arrangements you please, but we must know where to find you at any time," he responded.

"You mean that I am to be under surveillance. This is intolerable!" She burst out angrily. "I will not submit for a moment to such an indignity!"

Mr. Terhune shrugged.

"You must realize that every one in the house is more or less under observation and you are the first to attempt to evade it by going away."

"I cannot help it. I cannot endure this place for another day, it is getting on my nerves—but I don't know why I should give any explanation to you!"

"I don't know either, madam," Terhune said pointedly. "Your lack of frankness in the first instance concerning the gentleman who was your guest two evenings ago was unfortunate, however. If his account of the time he spent here is satisfactory, and can be proven, we will not trouble you further. But we must locate him first."

The telephone shrilled, and Mrs. Doremus picked up her hand bag.

"My taxi is waiting——"

Terhune stepped quietly between her and the door.

"I'm afraid it will have to wait a little longer unless you care to dismiss it. You told me yesterday that your guest of the evening before was a Mr. Allen—George T. Allen—an old friend whom you had not seen in years until you had met him by a chance that morning downtown. You said he was merely passing through New York on his way to Canada, and you did not know at what hotel he was stopping. I think that is correct?"

"Perfectly. Having corroborated that, I suppose I am at liberty to leave? Really, Mr. Terhune, you go too far!"

"One moment, please. Mr. Allen arrived at about seven and left at ten?"

She nodded curtly, her eyes snapping.

"Mrs. Doremus, where did you first meet Mr. Allen?"

"I—I don't remember. It was long ago. In Seattle, I think."

"You were not married then? What was your maiden name?"

She wet her lips with the tip of her tongue.

"It was Thomas."

Wade Terhune took a single step forward, and although his voice was still quiet, there was quality in it which braced the listening McCarty, as if to meet a forthcoming blow.

"Are you sure, Mrs. Doremus? Please think again. Are you sure your name was not Thompson?"

She stared at him, her face paling until the blotches of purple rouge on her cheeks stood out in ugly blotches of purple.

"You have said that George T. Allen was an old friend, but you did not add that he was a former husband of yours. You claim not to have seen him for years until the day that he dined with you, yet the house attendants declare that the man who was your guest that evening had been a frequent and never announced visitor here.

"You assert that he left at ten o'clock; I maintain and will prove that he was in this apartment when Marion Rowntree crashed to her death on the pavement below; he was in this apartment when Inspector Druet and ex-Roundsman McCarty questioned you later! Mrs. Doremus, what had that man and you to do with the crime?"

The woman did not answer. Her mouth twisted convulsively, the hand bag slipped from her grasp, and she swayed backward against the table, and crumpled to the floor.

CHAPTER VIII.

THE MAN IN THE CORNER.

Dennis Riordan had scarcely settled himself in his customary chair before the fire house that afternoon, and coaxed his pipe to draw properly, when ex-Roundsman McCarty made his appearance.

It was not the McCarty of the glad hand and the good word whom Dennis knew, however; it was a strange and stealthy McCarty, who walked with a cautious step, which might have been termed mincing in a person of less bulk, and who glared balefully at the astonished object of his regard.

"There was a fire last night," he announced weightily. "And you, that's mostly as sure-footed as a cat, fell off a ladder or triped over the hose. Also you have had another row with your sister and wrote to her to make it up. That's all I'm thinking, except that your month's pay is running low, and your eyes are troubling you again."

Dennis knocked his pipe against the arm of his chair and scuffed the glowing embers carefully out on the pavement.

"'Tis either rye or Irish," he observed. "It's Irish, I'll bet. It used to get you this way years ago. You don't happen to be under the impression that I'm Queen of the May, or anything like that?"

"I'm deducing," McCarty returned with dignity. "And using the powers of my imagination."

"You are that!" agreed the other emphatically. "My advice to you my lad, is to go home and sleep it off. There has been no fire, not even a false alarm, and I don't know what the devil you mean about Molly, or my eye or my eyes and if it isn't Irish whisky—which I'd like you to let me know where you can get a drop of the real thing now, with the war and all—you'd better keep out of the sun and not excite yourself."

"Then I've not got the hang of it at all!" McCarty dropped crestfallen into the chair expectantly vacant beside his friend. "I told Mr. Terhune I wasn't on to the trick."

"Terhune!" Dennis straightened his chair with a clatter. "Ter—do you mean to say, Mac, you have been hob-nobbing with the like of him?"

McCarty nodded.

"I was trying his method just now, but it don't seem to work. You've got a bump on your forehead the size of an egg, and I deduced you tripped up at a fire. Molly does the mending for you except when the two of you have had a scrap, and I see that there is a hole in your sock and a button off your vest; you never write a letter that you don't try to blot it with your thumb, so I put two and two together and took a chance you had written to her. When do you shave yourself except when your month's pay is running low, and are you ever without a sporting extra in your hand unless your eyes are bothering you too much to read? It's very simple."

"It's damn' foolishness!" Dennis retorted stung by the reference to his personal appearance. "I banged my forehead on a chair in a friendly shindy with Mike upstairs, Molly's gone to the country with the baby, and I got the ink on my thumb writing a bank-deposit slip, so you needn't be losing sleep over my month's pay.

TO THE KNOWING WORLD — AN INQUIRY.

Men don't believe in a Devil now, as their fathers used to do.
They have forced the door of various creeds to let His Majesty through.
There isn't a print of his cloven foot, or a fiery dart from his bow,
To be found in earth or air to-day—for the world has voted so.

But who is mixing the fatal draught that palsies heart and brain,
And loads the bier of each passing year with ten hundred thousand slain?
Who blights the bloom of the land to-day with the fiery breath of hell,
If the Devil isn't and never was? Won't somebody rise and tell?

Who dogs the steps of the toiling saint, and digs the pit for his feet,
Who sows the tares in the field of time wherever God sows wheat?
The Devil is voted not to be, and of course the thing is true;
But who just now is doing the work the Devil alone should do?

We are told he does not go about like a roaring lion now;
But whom shall we hold responsible for the everlasting row
To be heard in home, in church and state, to the earth's remotest bound,
If the Devil's by a unanimous vote is nowhere to be found?

Won't somebody step to the front forthwith, and make their bow, and show
How the frauds and crimes of a single day spring up? We want to know.
The Devil was fairly voted out, and of course the Devil's gone;
But simple people would like to know who carries his business on.

Fighting Men of India Brought Strange Problems Of Food and Religion

ONE of the commissariat problems of the war, which has been solved satisfactorily, was the question of "Native meat," or the ration of meat for the Indian troops serving in Europe. The solution has been found in the institution of "Native butcheries." A native of high caste in India would, of course, not eat any meat that even the shadow of a European had passed over. In coming to France the Native troops have, however, been granted certain religious dispensations, not only with regard to food, but, in the case of Hindus, in being allowed to leave the boundaries of their own country. Doubtless a dip in the Ganges, for those who survive the war and return to India after it is over, will put matters right again! Nevertheless, their caste rights as to food are as strictly observed as the exigencies of active service allow. The goats and sheep, chiefly Corsican and Swiss, purchased for their consumption, are sent up in a truck to railhead alive, and are slaughtered by men of their own caste in a butchery arranged for the purpose, generally in a field or some open place in close proximity to the railhead. The Mohammedan will eat only goats or sheep slaughtered by having their throats cut, and the Hindu by their being beheaded. The latter method is carried out in the abattoir by a native butcher with the aid of a cavalry sword at one fell swoop, and of the two methods is certainly to be recommended as being the most rapid and instantaneous death. I need hardly add that the Native butchery is always looked on as an object of awe and interest, if not of excitement, by the French inhabitants, and none the less by the English soldiers, who consider it a tremendous joke.

The Natives do not object to their meat being handled by English soldiers, or to it being brought to them in the same lorry which also perhaps carries British ration beef, although the cow is a sacred animal to the Hindu and in the form of beef is naturally distasteful. The only point is that the goat's meat or mutton intended for their consumption must not actually come into contact with the beef, and this is arranged for by a wooden barrier between the two erected in the interior of the lorry. On one occasion, however, the native rations for a certain regiment had just been dumped on the side of the road, and were being checked by the Daffadar, or Native quartermaster-sergeant, when at a critical moment an old sow, followed by her litter, came out of a farm gate and innocently ran over the whole show. A lot of palaver followed amongst the Natives, and there was no alternative; they would not have these rations at any price, and back they had to be taken to be exchanged. The pig is, of course, abhorrent to the Mussulman. One story in connection with the rationing of the Indian cavalry whilst in the trenches at Ypres in the summer of 1915 may be of interest. The cow being a sacred animal to the Hindu, it became necessary to replace the usual tins of bully beef by a suitable substitute. With this end in view, quantities of tins of preserved mutton were sent up for consumption by the Hindu personnel. The tins in which it was packed, however, unfortunately bore the trade mark of the packers, Messrs. Libby—a bull's head—and in consequence of this the Hindus would not have it that their contents could be anything but beef, until their own Native officers convinced them that such was not the case.

The organization for rationing Native troops is such that they are able to be fed in accordance with the rites of their caste, surely a not unimportant factor. There are various special articles.

Atta is coarse ground flour, very similar to that of which so-called "standard" bread is made at home. Of it the Natives make chupattis, which are round flat cakes of baked dough. Dhal consists of dried pease. Ghi is a kind of butter, which, judging from its smell, would appear to be rancid. Gur is simply brown sugar or molasses. It may be mentioned that the Native meat ration is very small. The Natives are not meat-eaters in the accepted sense of the word, and their small ration they invariably "curry" with the ration of ginger, chillies, turmeric and garlic, which are the raw ingredients of curry powder. Not infrequently also they are issued with a ration of rice and also dried fruits. —Lieut. A. M. Bealson.

London Has War Museum Where German Propaganda And Methods Are Shown

IN the near neighborhood of Dickens' Old Curiosity Shop in Central London, there stands a big modern building, the property of W. H. Smith and Son, news agents, the contents of which form an excellent war museum, and at the same time constitute another proof of German impudence and stupid inability to grasp the fact that their enemies have any brains. Talk of German thoroughness and then look at a copy of the Deutsche Rundschau (the German Round Table), which was caught in the Censor's net. The outer cover shows it to be for September, 1902, but this magazine was the issue for September of last year. Surely superficiality could not be surpassed, for 15-year-old periodicals are not generally in circulation. The Odyssey of Homer, too, naturally suggested the German student, but it also suggested something else to the eagle eye of the censor when he found it addressed to an internment camp, and, turning over its leaves, he found not the exploits of ancient days, but the wonderful exploits of a man who had escaped from that camp. Grammars teaching syntax, orthography and etymology looked harmless, but instead of the simple quotations familiar to every student in any country used to exemplify the rule, modern sentences were given which were directed against the Allies.

Kultur, as studied in this enemy library, was of profound interest. There were sixteen books on Hindenburg, five on Mackensen, several on the cruises of the Emden, the Dresden, and the Deutschland. Moreover, the Hun has adopted a favorite political device of reviving a man's past utterances to disprove his present veracity or good faith. They have dished up in recherche fashion what our French Allies had to say of us in Fashoda and South African war days, and for the edification of Holland they reproduced an old work, "The Tyranny of the English," published in 1781 in Amsterdam, dealing with British relations with the Dutch East Indies, at that date.

This propaganda has been diverted into three channels:

(1) Religious, moral, and sentimental.

(2) The attempt to sow discord among the Allies; and

(3) Efforts to condemn the Allies in the eyes of neutral nations. Some of these efforts have been most brazen, as, for instance, the publication and circulation of a pamphlet in India, indicting British rule in that land, which purported to emanate from an English firm that is not in existence. Because the average Englishman had not gone to Germany as a waiter or hairdresser to study their language, the German assumed we had no linguists, and therefore sent books, papers, and letters through the mail in a variety of obscure languages. But in one room in this building there were men who could read a letter from an Iroquois or a Zulu chief, from a Chinaman, an Arab, or a Portuguese gipsy, and for the most part they were British subjects. The comic papers have been largely used by Germany for propaganda purposes, and the caricature, generally in very gross taste, looms large.

But the censor's drag has taken things more material than literature. The latter mail was turned into a heavy parcel mail. Imagine the chagrin of the heavy paunched Teuton who might bear that ten pounds of meat, addressed to him from a hyphenated cousin in the United States, landed in England. This good "hyphenated" must have been a war profiteer, judging from his many efforts, for in one case the censor was requested to allow the package to pass "for an invalid sister," and next time (same handwriting) "to an old lady."

Even Kaiser William's mail bag is not sacred. In the library is a booklet from a Cincinnati citizen, all about the horrors of Armageddon, on the fly-leaf of which was expressed the author's hand-written hope for "an early and permanent world peace." Another letter commended a Scriptural passage to the attention of the Kaiser, which is rather pointed, inasmuch as book, chapter, and verse only were given, and on looking it up, it has to do with the casting out of evil spirits. A scarabaeus was also sent from Egypt, marked "cursed," but counterbalancing this ill-omen was some redwood from Brazil, which cut across, revealed a perfect iron cross. The supposition is that the consignor wished to cheer the Kaiser by showing that even if he exhausts his stock of iron in dealing out the awards, nature has a plentiful substitute in the forests of Brazil.

British Labor Speaks

A plain, outspoken speech on the position of British labor after the war was made recently by J. H. Thomas, M.P., secretary of the Amalgamated Society of Railway Servants, at a luncheon given by the Aldwych Club. He said:

"The moment there are peace negotiations war work will cease, and when the men who for three years have risked death come back they will ask if they have to stand in queues waiting for jobs.

"Is this what we have been fighting for? Because if it is we will have another scrap to alter it.

"The problem might be solved if every controlled establishment should be in position, immediately the order to cease making shells is given, to turn its attention to the manufacture of useful things.

"Then what is to be our army of the future? If an effort is made to give us conscription I for one, and I think the great masses of the working people, will feel that our sacrifices have been in vain; for in their endeavor to destroy German militarism they will have perpetuated militarism in this country."

Pew Held Two Premiers.

Not since the State obsequies of Sir Charles Tupper has St. Paul's, Halifax, shown such signs of mourning as at the first service after the tragedy in that city. St. Paul's, sometimes called the Westminster Abbey of Canada, was less injured by the explosion than any other public building in Halifax, only one stained glass window being broken, but several of its old monuments were overset on their foundations. Its rector, the Ven. Archdeacon Armitage, a graduate of Wycliffe and well-known in Ontario, officiated at twenty-four funerals during the week following the disaster.

It is interesting to remember that one pew in St. Paul's church gave Canada two of its Prime Ministers in the persons of Sir Charles Tupper and Sir Robert Borden. When Sir Charles left Halifax his pew was taken by Sir Robert Borden and Sir Hibbert Tupper.

Colds Settle On The Kidneys

Hence the Backaches, Rheumatic Pains, and Lumbago — Relief Comes When the Action of the Kidneys is Aroused.

Kiltarlity, N.S., Jan. 11.—It is not only the lungs that suffer during the cold, damp seasons The kidneys are almost equally susceptible to sudden changes of temperature, and many a serious case of kidney disease has its beginning with a cold, which settles on the kidneys.

Persons working out of doors are most likely to be victims of such trouble and suffer from backaches, lumbago, rheumatism, and crippled, aching limbs, but anyone is liable to sit in a draught or expose his back to a current of cold air.

Cold settling on the kidneys causes congestion, a clogging of these filtering organs and consequent derangement of the whole digestive and excretory systems. The liver fails to work, the bowels become constipated, and the stomach gets upset.

Because of their direct and combined action on these organs, Dr. Chase's Kidney-Liver Pills are of most prompt and most lasting benefit for such derangements. They are positive in their effects and are backed by the experience and integrity of Dr. A. W. Chase, the famous Receipt Book author.

Mr. Neil A. Cameron, Kiltarlity, N.S., writes: "I am glad to recommend Dr. Chase's Kidney-Liver Pills to anyone who is suffering from rheumatism. For about twenty-five years I was bothered more or less with this affliction. I was treated by doctors all over Nova Scotia, and when on business in New York, had an opportunity to consult one of the greatest specialists there; but I never gained more than temporary relief. In an effort to get rid of the accumulating development of the disease, I tried Dr. Chase's Kidney-Liver Pills, and when I had taken eight boxes, I was, to my astonishment, totally cured. I therefore heartily recommend these Pills to all who suffer from rheumatism, and anyone who doubts this testimonial may write me as proof to the contrary."

(Rev. James A. Collins, P.P., says: "This is to certify that I am personally acquainted with Mr. Neil A. Cameron, and believe his statement is true and to my personal knowledge correct.")

Dr. Chase's Kidney-Liver Pills, one pill a dose, 25c a box, 5 for $1.00, at all dealers, or Edmanson, Bates & Co., Limited, Toronto. Do not be talked into accepting a substitute. Imitations only disappoint.

Your Liver Is the Best Beauty Doctor

This is the treatment, in successful use for 50 years—one pill daily (more only when necessary).

Strong Breezes.

There is a stretch of railway along the west coast of Ireland where it was formerly not an uncommon occurrence for the trains to be blown from the rails by the winds from the ocean. These disasters are now prevented by the use of an ingenious form of anemometer which rings an alarm-bell when the velocity of the wind reaches 65 miles an hour. Each station on the line keeps on hand a stock of movable ballast, a ton of which is placed aboard every car arriving at the station after the bell sounds.—Popular Science Monthly.

Huge Deposit of Soda.

Not far from Lake Victoria Nyanza there is to be found a large block of almost chemically pure sesquicarbonate of soda, covering fifty square miles, which is so valuable that it will probably come in for some consideration in the adjustment of the war.

Eloquent Silence.

How Lord French Thanked Gallant Troop.

The critical moments of the first battle of Ypres occurred between two and three o'clock on the afternoon of October 31, 1914. The First Division were holding the Menin-Ypres road and Gheluvelt, and they were hurled backwards by a tremendous attack. According to all human reckoning it seemed that the position was lost. No military commander could have reasonably consulted upon the division rallying and holding its ground against such an overwhelming onslaught. It is generally believed that Lord French when he received the news made up his mind to retire, as, of course, prudence and foresight alike required.

But then the miraculous happened. Brigadier-General Charles Fitz-Clarence decided to attempt the recapture of Gheluvelt. There was an open gap of 500 yards between the village and the South Wales Borderers, who had not retired and were holding on magnificently. General Fitz-Clarence ordered the Second Worcesters to fill the gap. Their charge across open ground under Major Hankey was a brilliant affair. Never perhaps was the rifle-fire of troops advancing under a rain of shrapnel so accurate and so well controlled. Here was the test of training. It is probably no exaggeration to say that no troops in the world could have been found to do this exact thing except men of the first British expeditionary force—the most highly trained troops, we believe, that ever took the field in the history of war. The Second Worcesters were in open order; they had none of that sense of solidity and support which seems to mean so much to the German soldier, and yet they drove the German line back. Gheluvelt was retaken and the position was saved.

We have heard it said that when some few days later the Second Worcesters were withdrawn from the line to rest there was a remarkable illustration of the intensity of Lord French's appreciation of what had been accomplished. We do not know whether the story is true, but as it is creditable to every one concerned, and as (whether true or not) it suggests in a very human way the full significance of what happened on October 31, 1914, we shall risk the indiscretion of telling it. It is said that Lord French felt that he must express his personal thanks to the Second Worcesters, but that when he saw the shattered and exhausted fragments of the battalion in front of him his emotion was so deep that he could not trust himself to speak. He deputed a subordinate to convey to them the message he had prepared, but this officer also found that emotion held him inarticulate. Silence and the language of looks had to be the only message, and perhaps it was the best. We hope the story is true.—London Spectator.

Indications of Long Life.

A long lived person, it is said, may be attributed at sight from a well developed one. The primary conditions of longevity are that the heart, lungs and digestive organs, as well as the brain, shall be large. If these organs are large the trunk will be long and the limbs comparatively short. The person will appear tall while sitting and short while standing. The hand will have a long and somewhat heavy palm, with short fingers. The brain will be deeply placed, as shown by the low position of the orifice of the ear. The blue, brown or hazel eye is a favorable indication. The nostrils, if large, open and free, indicate large lungs. A pinched and half closed nostril indicates small or weak lungs. These are general points of distinction, but are, of course, subject to the usual individual exceptions.

Stale Bread.

The readiest explanation of why bread becomes stale would be to attribute it to the evaporation of water. This explanation is, however, erroneous. The amount of water in new bread and stale bread shows scarcely any difference, and the striking change, the drying of the crumb, is rather due to the fact that the water contained in the bread forms with the gluten a compound that appears dry. By heating stale bread for a short time it again assumes the condition of new bread, and this is the best proof that there cannot be a loss of water.

Vengeful British Captain Brains Eight Boches With Club

WITH THE BRITISH ARMIES IN FRANCE.—The full story of the heroism of a British captain who was so moved with hatred of the Germans for crippling his child with a bomb that he attacked and killed eight of them with a club and withstood a sudden German onslaught by his inspiring leadership has just been received. The tale has made the captain's name a byword of gallantry and bravery in the British camp. Here are the facts:

When the Germans delivered their tremendous assault against Masnieres and Marcoing during their general offensive on November 30 those two towns and the territory about them were being held by a division of English troops. On the staff of the commanding general there was a dashing captain who may be designated as Captain Black in this narrative.

Black was a man of long service and much beloved by all the troops. He had been a jovial companion until recently, when during a German air raid over England his baby girl was crippled for life by a bomb. Black had become bitter against the Germans and had sworn that he would exact full penalty for the airman's deed.

Gets Chance Next Day.

The captain little knew when he turned in on the night of November 29 how soon he would be able to get his revenge. Next morning the Germans attacked Masnieres in force, and the brigade to the right of the troops holding the town was forced to fall back. The brigade in the town, however, stood firm and fought the enemy off. Meanwhile waves of Germans had swept by to the south of the town and were swarming westward.

Captain Black came out of his headquarters south of Marcoing to find five Germans already in possession of a great dump. So quickly had the enemy advanced that this was the first intimation that they were near. Black had in his hand a heavy walking stick, which was his only weapon. Without a moment's hesitation he charged the dump alone and beat about him so fiercely that he brained all five opponents before they recovereed from the surprise. He had made good his vow, but his work was not finished.

Other Germans appeared west of Les Rues Vertes, a southern suburb of Masnieres. Black collected all the signallers, cooks, orderlies and other servants available and, with two companies of regulars, delivered an attack toward Rues Vertes. The Germans fell back and fierce hand-to-hand fighting followed. Black led his little army from house to house, and as often as the Germans made a stand he drove them out, until finally the whole suburb had been cleared, with the exception of one machine gun, whose crew of eight men kept pumping bullets into the British ranks.

Shoots Down Machine Gun Crew.

Black charged this machine gun with one orderly. Four other brave orderlies had been shot down, beside him previously, and this one also was caught as the machine gun was reached. Black then attacked the Germans with a revolver in each hand and shot down the last man of eight. This cleared Rues Vertes of the enemy, and outposts were established about the place. Black had been wounded during the fighting, but he held on to his command until relief came next day.

This story is not the only one to be related of that bitter day about Masnieres. A regiment which had the stiffest part of the fighting in the town was made up of troops known as "die hards," and they fought all day with rifles and bayonets at close quarters and never gave a step in the face of a great onslaught made against them. During the fighting the colonel had been wounded in one eye, and so serious was his injury that his other eye became useless. His troops continued to be so hard pressed that it seemed probable they would give way.

The colonel knew they needed all the encouragement possible to enable them to bear the awful strain. He called for an orderly and, led by his servant, he started making a round of the front line to speak words of encouragement to his troops. For hours this blind man with bandaged eyes kept up his tramp among his men with his hand in that of the orderly, who was his only guide. This heroic example was the final word for the Tommies. They loved their colonel, and they stood and died for him and held their line.

Don't Diet Yourself TO CURE DYSPEPSIA IT ISN'T NECESSARY

The sufferer from dyspepsia and indigestion who has to pick and choose his food, is the most miserable of all mankind.

Even the little he does eat causes such torture, and is digested so imperfectly that it does him little good.

What dyspeptics need is not dieting, or artificial digestants, but something that will put their stomach right so it will manufacture its own digestive ferments.

For forty years now Burdock Blood Bitters has been making weak stomachs strong, and curing severe cases of dyspepsia and indigestion that other remedies were powerless to reach.

It restores the stomach to a normal healthy condition so that the food no longer causes distress, but is thoroughly digested and assimilated, and goes on its way making rich, red blood.

Mrs. Henry Shaw, Campbellton, N.B., writes: "I was for five years troubled with a weak stomach, and could not eat any food that would agree with me. I tried different medicines, but could not get cured. A friend advised me to take Burdock Blood Bitters. I took four bottles, and now I am in perfect health."

Jesus Forgiving Sin. Mark 2:1-12.

Golden Text: The Son of man hath authority on earth to forgive sin. Mark 2:10.

1. Verse 1. How long will an earnest Christian be in a shop, store or community before it is "noised that he is in the house?"

2. Verse 2. Was it Christ's person, his teaching, or his miracles that attracted the crowd?

3. What are the attractions, in this community, which draw the biggest crowds, and what do they suggest to Christian people?

4. Verse 2. If a preacher lives in close contact with God, why would you say, or not, that in a populous community he will attract the crowds?

5. If Jesus were to come here again to reside, and preached the same things he did while he was here, how would he be regarded by the average church member?

6. Verse 3. Of how much benefit is it to bring our sick ones to Jesus?

7. Verse 3. How would you characterize one who did nothing to comfort the sick, relieve the poor, or help people in their trouble?

8. Which more nearly imitate Jesus in caring for the sick, the churches or the societies? Give your reasons.

9. How could the churches improve their organizations, so as to systematically care for all sick people in their respective parishes?

10. Verse 4. If we are fully determined to have all the members of our families saved by Jesus, what is there to prevent us?

11. What qualities do you most admire in these four men, for their insistence in bringing their sick friend to Jesus?

12. Verse 5. Which is the more calamitous and why, a palsied body or a palsied soul?

13. Verse 5. What relation had the faith of these four men with the forgiveness of the sins of this sick man?

14. How long does it take God to forgive the sins of a truly penitent man?

15. Verses 6, 7.—Does Jesus here state or imply, that he had forgiven this man's sins, or that God had done so?

16. Verses 6, 7. If any man of God is assured that a seeker of salvation is truly penitent, why may he not pronounce to him that his sins are forgiven? (This is one of the questions which may be answered in writing by members of the club.)

17. Verse 8. Was mind reading peculiar to Jesus, or would you say, or not, and why, that others have a similar gift?

18. Verses 8-12. The healing of this sick man was clearly a miracle; why would you say, or not, that the forgiveness of his sins was also miraculous?

DEALING IN STOCKS.

Know What You Are Buying Before Investing Your Money.

We hear of fortunes quickly made in Wall street, of miners who have accumulated enormous wealth by a lucky strike, of inventions that have made inventors rich. But how many of these instances are there? Just a few, while countless thousands and hundreds of thousands have lost everything in unsuccessful ventures.

The prosperous, successful man or woman is the one who buys with knowledge of what he or she is buying, whether it be a piece of beef, a dozen eggs, a horse, a house or stocks and bonds.

Money has been made in Wall street and will continue to be made. Those who buy stocks when they sell low and sell them when they advance must make money. The operation is no different from buying a house or a farm at a bargain and selling it at a profit. But one should exercise just as much care in one transaction as in the other.

Have nothing to do with those who offer glittering opportunities to get rich quickly. This will save your money. It may sound very nice to say that one owns a thousand shares of a gold, silver or copper mine with a par value of $10,000 and that cost the holder only $50 or $100. But what use is such a certificate unless it has real value? Better put the $50 or $100 in one share of a dividend paying stock and be satisfied with moderate returns and a moderate profit on any advance the stock may enjoy.

HOLES IN MACARONI.

Did You Ever Wonder How the Dough Was Put Around Them?

Haven't you often asked, "How do they get the holes in macaroni?" Yes, you undoubtedly have, and unless you have visited a macaroni factory you are probably still in doubt. Interesting methods are employed in bringing this food into the form in which it is placed before the public.

After the dough has been well mixed and kneaded in a powerful machine it is ready to form into macaroni, which is of a tube shape about one-fourth inch in diameter, or spaghetti, which is a solid stick shape of about one-eighth inch in diameter. This is done by forcing the dough under hydraulic pressure through a cylinder with a flat circular bronze die or mold at the bottom. The macaroni die is full of holes about one-fourth inch in diameter, and each hole has a small pin in the center of it, which is attached to one side of the hole. This pin forms the hole in the macaroni and divides the dough on one side as it starts through the hole, but before the dough reaches the end of the hole the divided side comes together and remains so, making a perfect tube. The spaghetti die contains only plain holes about one-eighth inch in diameter arranged in groups. When macaroni and spaghetti come from the presses or cylinders they are cut into certain lengths, the length depending upon whether the curing or drying is to be done on trays or by hanging over rods.—Exchange.

Here Are Two Kinds of Education.

In an article called "Increase Your Driving Power" in the American Magazine a writer says:

"Horace Taft, a brother of the former president, once told me that he never considered a man as educated just because he could talk a long time and answer a lot of questions about a given subject, but that he did consider him as educated if set down before some hard, unknown subject or task he could in two hours make something out of it. Judge Daly, brother of Augustin Daly, once told me that he and his brother at the ages of twelve and fourteen years were left as the sole supporters of their widowed mother.

"'That,' the judge said, 'I consider about as good an education as a boy can be given.'"

Our Climate an Asset.

On no other continent, under no other sun, in no other zone, in all the world can be found the same extent of fertile, available agricultural land as in these United States. And in no other equally large tract as that stretching from the Atlantic to the Pacific and between the great lakes and the gulf can be duplicated the same amount of normally good weather as nature has bestowed on this favored land. Our rain and sunshine are so proportioned the one to the other as to produce the best yearly conditions on earth.—Detroit Free Press.

Our Platinum Product.

The United States produces platinum not only from most of the placer gold mines of the western slopes. Its occurrence there is very widespread, being found along the entire west coast, from Alaska to California. Except in a very few localities, however, it is found in such small quantities that its recovery save as a byproduct is not profitable.—Exchange.

Holy Land Earthquakes.

Earthquakes more or less violent have been of frequent occurrence in Palestine. One of the most violent occurred in the reign of Uzziah. This was connected by Josephus with the sacrilege and punishment of that monarch.

Innocence.

Father (to rebellious five-year-old)—Don't tell me you won't. Daughter—Well, papa, what must I say when I mean I won't?

Nothing is so grand as truth, nothing so forcible, nothing so moral.

Undue Profits Not To Be Charged

Controller's Order to Prevent Excessive Prices for Brand and Shorts.

OTTAWA, Jan. 22.—In order to prevent retail dealers taking advantage of the scarcity of bran and shorts to exact excessive profits over the prices fixed by the Food Controller, the latter has ordered that the retail price of bran and shorts, where cash is paid, must not exceed by more than ten cents per bag the cost f.o.b. track at the dealer's station. In cases where purchasers take delivery direct from the car the profit has been limited to a maximum of five cents per bag. An extra charge may be made where credit is given and the bran and shorts delivered from the dealer's store, but this amount must be only a reasonable charge, representing the consideration of such services. When the miller sells at the mill in less than carload lots he is not permitted to add more than five cents per bag of 100 pounds to the price at which he is permitted to sell under the Food Controller's order of Dec. 17, 1917. When the purchaser brings bags to the mill to be filled, the miller must not add more than $3 per ton to the price at which he is permitted to sell under the order of December 17. In effect, the miller must not charge more than the fixed Fort William bulk prices, plus or minus freight to or from Fort William, and in addition $2 per ton as retail charges.

Clear, Peachy Skin Awaits Anyone Who Drinks Hot Water

Says an inside bath, before breakfast helps us look and feel clean, sweet, fresh.

Sparkling and ivivacious—merry, bright, alert—a good, clear skin and a natural, rosy, healthy complexion are assured only by pure blood. If only every man and woman could be induced to adopt the morning inside bath, what a gratifying change would take place. Instead of the thousands of sickly anaemic-lookin- men, women and girls, with pasty or muddy complexions; instead of the multitudes of "nerve wrecks," "rundowns" "brain fags" and pessimists we should see a virile, optimistic throng of rosy-cheeked people everywhere.

An inside bath is had by drinking each morning, before breakfast, a glass of real hot water with a teaspoonful of limestone phosphate in it to wash from the stomach, liver, kidneys and ten yards of bowels the previous day's indigestible waste, sour fermentations and poisons before putting more food into the stomach.

Those subject to sick headache, biliousness, nasty breath, rheumatism, colds; and particularly those who have a pallid, sallow complexion and who are constipated very often, are urged to obtain a quarter pound of limestone phosphate at the drug store which will cost but a trifle, but is sufficient to demonstrate the quick and remarkable change in both health and appearance, awaiting those who practice internal sanitation.

ARCANUM SUIT ENDED.

Boston. — Federal Judge Hale dismissed a bill in equity filed by Arthur S. Cummings and James E. Upstone, of New Hampshire, asking for the appointment of a receiver for the Supreme Council, Royal Arcanum.

The Court held that there was nothing in the bill to warrant Federal proceedings intended to wind up the affairs of the order, and that under the State law only the Attorney-General, and not a member of the order, was permitted to institute suit for receivership. The petitioners had attempted to show that the assets of the council were impaired, but this was denied by the attorneys for the council at a recent hearing.

CHILDREN MUST BE PROTECTED

The children must be safeguarded, for, if they do survive the frequent coughs and colds, it is often with the lungs so weakened that they become chronic sufferers from bronchitis or consumption. Being composed of simple ingredients of undoubted value, Dr. Chase's Syrup of Linseed and Turpentine is admirably suited as a treatment for children. It is pleasant to taste. So much so that children delight to take it on this account, as well as because of the quick relief it affords them.

INDIVIDUAL FOOD CARDS FOR PEOPLE OF GREAT BRITAIN

Details of Scheme Not Yet Determined.

Much Red Tape Expected, But Will Improve on Present System.

LONDON, Jan. 19.—Compulsory rationing has come. London and the home counties will go on rations on 25th February. Details of the scheme are not yet fully determined upon, because the local food committees have until Monday to proffer any late suggestions as to the workings of the plan, but it is probable that the outline of the Food Controller's plan will be as follows:

Individual food cards will be issued to everyone, children below a fixed age receiving cards of a different colour. Each card will contain four sets of spaces for cancellation by the shopkeeper: The first set to be used for the purchase of other foodstuffs as may be found desirable to ration later.

Counterfoils will be attached to each card for deposit with the shopkeeper chosen by each customer to supply him with each article of food bought under the scheme. Each food central committee will issue cards to the persons resident within its jurisdiction. The householder will fill out a simple form of application, which will be retained by the food office, and a food card will be issued to each member of a household. The customer must produce his food card for every purchase.

In the case of meat and other articles, the rationing of which must differ according to the requirements of the different sections of the population, the following special considerations apply: The normal ration will be obtainable on the production of a normal card. Persons entitled to additional rations will have to make a special claim and support it with suitable evidence. The card of such persons will be so stamped by the food office. Special provision will probably be made for persons taking meals in restaurants. Meal coupons probably in the form of books of stamps, may be issued for this purpose.

Such is the brief, and by no means inclusive, outline of the various plans of compulsory rationing now under consideration. Enormous difficulties confront the Food Controller, and when he does determine on a plan or a set of plans, it can be seen from the above how difficult it will be for the public to realise where it stands.

Endless Muddles Likely.

Endless skeins of red tape and muddle loom ahead before even London alone settles down into a satisfactory routine under this system. The people are already bewildered by announcements of such plans as are outlined above. Every London paper has a different opinion as to just what the rationing schemes are; in fact, the one I have outlined is a sort of symposium, even though it is drawn as closely as possible from the Food Ministry's own announcement.

But endless as the difficulties which confront this scheme appear, they are nothing to the food muddle which the country is struggling through to-day. Householders are at their wit's end. Butcher shops simply close their doors, saying: "We have no meat." For two weeks now many families have sat down to jointless Sunday dinners.

Margarine, butter, milk, and such commodities are things the average householder these days is in a constant struggle to obtain, and no one is ever able to get more than one day's supply.

Queues Common Sight.

Queues, sometimes a quarter of a mile long, are still a common sight in many parts of the city, and central kitchens are being established throughout the metropolis to relieve congestion in the meat queues.

Naturally, there are questions innumerable being asked on all sides about the rationing scheme, and there will be many protests against whatever form the Ministry decides upon. So far, London has been remarkably free from anything like an organised protest against food conditions, but in outlying districts conditions have been worse.

In Manchester, on Thursday, thousands of munition workers "downed their tools" as a protest against alleged unequal distribution of food.

The Lord Mayor addressed the workers, who had formed a procession two miles long and marched to the City Hall, and promised immediate action. The demonstration was one of the most orderly in the history of such affairs, and had an undeniable effect of bringing home to many officials the necessity for prompt action.

OUR BOYS IN EUROPE AND HOME PROTECTION

The men on the firing line represent the pick of our country's youth. Many were rejected because of physical deficiency. Many times the kidneys were to blame.

If we wish to prevent old age coming on too soon, or if we want to increase our chances for a long life, Dr. Pierce of the Surgical Institute, Buffalo, N. Y., says that you should drink plenty of water daily between meals. Then procure at a drug store, Anuric (double strength). This "An-u-ric" drives the uric acid out and cures backache and rheumatism.

If we wish to keep our kidneys in the best condition a diet of milk and vegetables, with only little meat once a day, is the most suitable. Drink plenty of pure water, take Anuric three times a day for a month.

Send Dr. Pierce 10c for trial pkg. Anuric—many times more potent than lithia, eliminates uric acid as hot water melts sugar. A short trial will convince you.

Preston, Ont.—"I am pleased to express my experience with Anuric. I have been troubled with rheumatism in right limb and hand for several years, and lately in left shoulder. The only way I could lie was on my back. I had great difficulty to sit down and more to get up. Lately I had a very severe pain in my back. I have taken Dr. Pierce's Golden Medical Discovery several times with the most satisfactory results, so I concluded to give his Anuric Tablets a trial. The pain in limb and shoulder has stopped entirely and in right hand it is very slight and getting less all the time. I can now sit or lie in any position I wish without discomfort or pain. I recommended the Anuric Tablets to two parties and they both claim decided improvement. I certainly will recommend them to any one troubled with the kidneys; there is nothing nearly so good; I tried them all."—Gronos Boos, cor. Duke and Waterloo.

LITTLE CHANCE OF PEACE SOON

SPEECHES OF TEUTON LEADERS NOT FAVOURABLE

FURTHER FIGHTING NEEDED TO ACCOMPLISH ALLIED AIMS

Replies of Chancellor Von Hertling and Count Czernin Indicate That Teutonic Allies Are Not Yet Ready to Go Far Enough to Bring Peace Now---Alsace-Lorraine is the Balking Point in the Negotiations---Germany Manifests No Intention of Righting the Wrong Done France

A SUMMARY OF TO-DAY'S WAR CABLES

(By Carl D. Groat.)

(Special to The Toronto Star and The Peterborough Examiner.)

WASHINGTON, January 25.—The Central Empires are angling for further discussion with the United States and the Allies, but are not yet ready to go far enough to bring peace now. That conclusion was drawn by international experts to-day from the Hertling and Czernin replies to President Wilson and Lloyd George's war aims speeches.

The main balking point appeared to be Alsace-Lorraine. Germany manifested no intention of "righting" or "reconsidering" the wrong done France as demanded by the British and American statements. Her reply to the first five points of the Wilson speech was fully anticipated.

Her answers to the Sixth and eighth points were regarded as a subtle appeal to Russia and France to talk peace independently, but a scornful rejection of her statement that she cannot talk of the cession of Alsace-Lorraine will be the French answer. As for Russia she appears temporarily unfavourable to any more peace parleys with Germany. The answer to the seventh point was regarded as a distinct concession, indicating that Germany has modified her original views as to Belgium.

Czernin's speech was regarded as far more conciliatory than the other, while his tone was far more subdued and diplomatic than anything Germany has issued to date.

There was, however, a certain brusqueness to both which indicated that the Teuton militarists are still dictating and that there must be further fighting to accomplish the allied aims.

Experts here have foreseen that the Teutons would bid for a peace conference or for a further statement of war aims, but have warned that this by no means meant that the Teuton feeling was sufficiently genuine to bring peace. Reading between the lines, some say a reflection of internal difficulties more marked than ever before, but there was doubt that Germany is sufficiently convinced that her military power is on the wane.

AMSTERDAM, January 25.—Severe rioting on Wednesday and Thursday in Berlin was reported in despatches received here to-day.

One report asserted that mobs were marching on the streets demanding peace. It was regarded as of great significance that Thursday's newspapers had not arrived to-day from Berlin as usual.

COPENHAGEN, January 25.—The resignation of Premier Wekerle, the Hungarian Premier, was again reported her, to-day, indicating continued political unrest in Austria-Hungary.

(Special to The Toronto Star and The Peterborough Examiner.)

PETROGRAD, January 25.—Confidence in the "coming assistance of the Western proletariat" was expressed by Foreign Minister Trotsky in a speech to the Congress of Soviet Deputies to-day. The Western proletariat can only mean the people of Germany.

(Canadian Press Despatch.)

PARIS, January 25.—The official statement issued by the War office to-day says: "There have been spirited artillery actions in the region of Maisons de Champagne and on the sector of Avocourt front. On the eastern front there is nothing important to report."

(Canadian Press Despatch.)

BERLIN, January 25.—Chancellor Hertling declared that Germany did not wish annexation by violence, but that the question of Northern France could be discussed only by France and Germany. He asserted there could be no talk of the cession of Alsace-Lorraine.

(Canadian Press Despatch.)

LONDON, January 25.—The hostile artillery was active yesterday evening and in the early part of the night west of La Vacquerie, and in the neighbourhood of Passchendaele, says to-day's official statement. Otherwise there was nothing of special interest.

(Canadian Press Despatch.)

PARIS, January 25.—Premier Lloyd George and Viscount Milner, member of the British War Council, are coming to Paris to confer with Premier Clemenceau, says Marcel Hutin, in his newspaper Echo de Paris. Their visit will coincide with the meeting of the Supreme War Council at Versailles.

(Canadian Press Despatch.)

LONDON, January 25.—Peace terms declarations by Chancellor Von Hertling of Germany, and Count Czernin, Premier of Austria, were features of the cables to-day from the centres of enemy governments. Von Hertling, commenting on President Wilson's latest declarations, said that in some points there should be no difficulty in reaching an agreement, and in others differences were not great enough to prevent discussions to clear the matters up. It was most important, however, in regard to the freedom of the seas, that Britain should relinquish to international control such points as Gibraltar, Malta and the Falkland Islands. Notwithstanding Germany's present strong military and political position, said Hertling, we are willing for peace.

Count Czernin of Austria, said the Allies' leaders should put forth new proposals. It was already apparent, he said, that some of their proposals were acceptable to the Teutons. Respecting Wilson's demand for the evacuation of Belgium without attempt to limit her sovereignty, Von Hertling said this could only be settled by peace negotiations, but Germany never demanded the incorpartion of Belgium by violence.

"There will be some difficulty in settling the colonial claims," said Hertling, "but this chiefly concerns Britain, and all Wilson's suggestions along this line will be taken into consideration."

PETROGRAD, January 25.—The Peoples' Commissaries to-day wired the Soviets of Vladivostok and Harbin firmly to resist the landing or entry of any Japanese or Chinese troops from war craft. The Commissaries were informed that Colonel Budd, of the British army, just arrived in Petrograd from Jassy, had brought word of Roumania's desire immediately to adjust matters in dispute between that country and the Bolsheviki Government.

Last week the Bolshevik Government was reported to have served a 24-hour ultimatum on the Roumanian Government threatening war if Roumania did not instantly release Russian and Austrian army officers, and punish the Roumanian soldiers responsible for their arrest.

PETROGRAD, January 25.—A report that the United States would recognize the Bolshevik Government very shortly was circulated in Petrograd to-day. Officials refused comment.

EXEMPTIONS ARE TO BE REVIEWED OTTAWA ANNOUNCES

Same Exemptions Have Been Granted to Men on Insufficient Grounds Because Military Representatives Hadn't a Chance to Investigate

INSUFFICIENT GROUNDS

OTTAWA, Jan. 24.—Exemptions from military service are to be reviewed. Provision for a general review, if necessary, is stipulated in amendments to the Military Service regulations made by a special order in Council. The amendments do not provide for an immediate review of exemptions; but they grant authority for such review as and when it is considered necessary.

Insufficient Grounds.

As explanatory of the necessity of the new provisions, it is pointed out that, owing to the exceptionally short period (three months) which intervened in the provision under the M.S.A. and the call of the first draft to the Colours, it was impossible for military representatives to satisfy themselves in every case of the correctness of the facts stated by applicants for exemption. The result was that exemptions were granted in some cases on insufficient grounds.

Circumstances Change.

Further, it is stated, the circumstances of men to whom exemption has been granted are constantly changing. Exempted men are under obligation to notify the Registrar of any change of circumstances affecting their rights to continue to be exempt, but it has been found impossible to detect all the cases in which they have failed to do so. Steps have therefore been taken to provide for inquiries from time to time from men who have been granted exemption. When the answer received indicates necessity for review of the exemption, case will be submitted by the District Registrar to the Appeal Tribunal.

Must Answer Truthfully.

Briefly, the new regulations provide that:

Every exempted man must answer in writing such questions as he may be asked from time to time by the Registrar or by any peace officer. In the event of questions being sent by the Registrar by post, answers must be mailed within three days. In default, the exemption may be withdrawn by the Tribunal.

Any exempted man who answers inquiries untruthfully is liable to a term of imprisonment not exceeding one year. In addition, his exemption terminates on conviction.

Expiry or Variation.

Upon the expiry of an exemption

CHANGES EXPECTED

Restrictions in the Use of Commodities May Be Put in Force Henceforth Without Warning to the Public

NEW FOOD CONTROLLER

(Special to the Toronto Star and The Peterborough Examiner.)

OTTAWA, Ont., Jan. 25.—Hon. W. J. Hanna has resigned from the position of food controller, and has been succeeded by a man reputed to be without nerves and impervious to the slings and arrows of outrageous criticism. H. B. Thompson, of Victoria, is a man of large proportions, a brainy and a silent man. It is freely admitted that Mr. Hanna's nerves became frazzled by the variety of criticism to which his actions were subjected. It is stated that the criticism will have no effort on his former assistant and present successor, Mr. Thompson.

Some drastic changes in policy are expected to follow the change in the controllership. It is admitted that the department at present constituted is run on a somewhat extravagant basis. Salaries are generally higher than the civil service and much money is spent on expensive publications.

Some degree of retrenchment may be anticipated. It is quite possible that salaries of clerks and stenographers at least will be brought to the level of those accorded to other government employees. The system of control so far followed has, it is believed, had certain undesirable effects. The announcements made from time to time to the effect that the use of certain commodities would be prohibited or restricted at some future date, have resulted in heavy purchases of these commodities and have encouraged hoarding and increased prices. In the future it may be that any such restriction will be put in force without warning to the public. It is further probable that provision may be made for the Federal prosecution of individuals who unduly boost prices, hoard food for speculation, or otherwise enfringe upon the spirit of food control regulations. Compulsion may in certain matters be substituted for the present voluntary system of food control.

MR. PETER GETTAS WON THE OAK HALL DOLLAR DAY BICYCLE

Mr. Peter Gettas, of Douros & Gettas, 376 George street, won the bicycle offered by the Oak Hall store as a Dollar Day attraction. The bicycle registered 1548.9 miles in its 57-hour motor-driven revolutions, and Mr. Gettas estimated the mileage at 1549.5. Other guesses that were close to the correct number were as follows: Geo. Henderson, 1545 and 1550; D. A. Sullivan, 1552 and 1554; L. Ackford, 1555; R. Ruth, 1546 1-8; A. E. Sargent, 1538; G. Carnahan, 1539; C. E. Wiley, 1539; H. Lang, 1539; T. J. Best, 1541 1-2; R. J. Langord 1543. J. Langord, 1543.

Mayor Duncan removed this morning the seal that had covered the cyclometer and made the following affidavit:

"I sealed up the cyclometer on Saturday morning and opened it at 9 a. m. to-day. It was just as I had sealed it. The mileage registered 1548.9."

G. H. Duncan, Mayor.

Mr. Vincent Eastwood, Manager of the Royal Bank, made the following statement of the examination of the estimates:

"I have to advise that I have examined this bicycle and find that the cyclometer registered 1548.9 miles. I also opened the box containing the cards on which were shown the individual guesses. The estimated mileage was from zero to 3,000,000. The nearest number to the total mileage shown on the cyclometer was 1549.5 on a card signed by Peter Gettas, Esq.

"I also examined the record sales for the period and found that the total amount shown was greatly in excess of the total number of guesses in the box."

V. Eastwood.

The bicycle novelty proved a big attraction and aroused widespread interest among young and old. The Oak Hall store is fertile of Dollar Day specialties and scored a winner with the bicycle.

PLACES WANTED FOR LOCAL RETURNED MEN

Following the closing up of the year past, many men from service abroad have been discharged into civil life. These men come home and find the places they left occupied. They desire work and employment. Who will help provide. It is a poor return that situations may not be found for them, and all are asked to help. You may know of a position, and if so 'phone, write or send word to the office of the S. A. Commission, City Buildings. The man or men will be at once put in communication with the chances. But they need more than a chance, they need places. Who can offer? Any one who can use the services of a bright, alert, well qualified man in office or inside work will communicate. And, please, don't be too long about it.

Capt. Frank Sawers Has Been Appointed as Trench Mortar Officer of the Canadian Cavalry Corps in France

WENT OVERSEAS IN 1914

The many friends of Capt. Frank Sawers, son of Mr. A. Sawers of this city will be glad to learn that the well-known local boy has been meeting with success in his military career. Capt. Sawers went overseas with the Fort Garry Horse in the first Canadian Division. Recently he has been appointed Trench Mortar Officer for the Canadian Cavalry Corps. In a letter to his parents, written from France on Christmas Day, Captain Sawers says:

"Since leaving the Schol of Mortars I have had a very busy time, organizing a brigade, and to-day I learned I am to command it for the winter trench warfare. I am to be a Captain and known as the Cavalry Corp Trench Mortar Officer. I have eight officers and over one hundred men in my command.

"I received an invitation yesterday to dine with the Regiment, Christmas dinner, and am going down this afternoon. We have had snow on the ground for the last week and it has been very cold.

Dillingham Song Lecture

All those intending to be present at Miss Dillingham's Song Lecture in St. Paul's Church next Monday evening, are advised to secure tickets as a crowded church is expected.

Miss Dillingham has entertained our fighting men in France over four hundred times, and is excellent both as speaker and singer; also as an elocutionist. Miss Dillingham was booked for Dominion Methodist Church, Ottawa, on Monday last, as St. Paul's Choir relinquished their former date in order that she might comply with the request to sing in Massey Hall at the launching of the Patriotic Fund campaign, they have been given Monday, and Miss Dillingham will go to Ottawa later.

Doors will be open at 7.30, the programme to begin at 8.15 prompt. Tickets, 25 cents. For particulars see advertisement on last page, and window bills.

Frank Jenne says:

With Australian wool at $1.10 per pound, and even greasy, low-grade fleece at 85c, what wool could you get in a $15 Suit, when a winter Suit weighs from seven pounds up? True, it is not all wool, for the linings are of cotton or silk. But study the prices of these materials. A $15.00 Suit is a "camouflage." It doesn't pay to buy "cheap" clothes. Three People Successful in Naming the Exact Figures and as a Result Win $20.00 Each—Big Shopping Event Yesterday Was Great Success.

LIST OF THE WINNERS

There were 11,113 Dollar Day estimates dropped into the box in front of the Examiner office yesterday, the biggest total since the first Dollar Day some years ago. Last year's January and August totals were both beaten yesterday, indicating that the merchants who participated in the big shopping event had a splendid day's business.

The estimates were very close, no fewer than three people, Percy Dallin, 606 Water street, Lillian Green, 543 Park street, and Mrs. J. N. Welbourn, 218 Reid street, guessed the exact number, and as a result the three first prizes, $25, $20 and $15 respectively, were pooled and divided among the three, giving each the handsome sum of $20. Mrs. Hutchins, 174 Adeline avenue, was only one out in her estimate, with 11,114, winning her the fourth prize of $10.00. In addition she won seven other prizes, one of $2.00, one of $1.50 and five of $1.00, giving her a total for the day of $18.50, the closeness of the estimates is indicated by the fact that the 50th prize winner was only twenty-seven estimates away from the correct figure.

Following are the winners:

FRIDAY, JAN. 25, 1918

ARE WE CHRISTIANS?

Shall we always have to lament the rascally rapacity of humanity—not Hun humanity, but common, everyday Canadian humanity? In Brantford there is a shortage of coal; and with a laudable desire to meet the emergency, owners of wood lots are bringing in cordwood for sale, to save their fellow citizens from shivering with the cold. Is this the motive, or is the motive implementing a wicked desire to make unholy profit out of the necessities and sufferings of their fellow citizens? The land pirates of the wood lots of Brant are not content with a swingeing price of $15 to $20 or $25 per cord, but they must lie about the measurement of their wood loads to deceive and rob ignorant city buyers. The Brantford Expositor tells of the "cord" of wood ranging in contents, according to the conscience of the seller, from 25 cubic feet to 128 cubic feet, the standard; it tells also of the fraud practised on ignorant and fuel-hungry citizens by the false declaration of sellers as to the cubic contents of their wood loads, whereby the price of a load of wood reached the price rate of $40 per cord.

This is an outrageous thing in a supposedly Christian country, that would shock the conscience of a Turk. Yet we sometimes wonder why Providence permits the scourge of this awful war under which the whole world is suffering. The history of the Divine dealings with humanity, is that national sins are visited with national punishment. The whole world is suffering from the war because "the whole world lieth in wickedness," Canada included, and Canada is suffering with the rest, because, it is feared, Canada is also lying in wickedness to a punishable degree, if the extortion of the wood brigands of Brant, are a measure of the national morality. Loud professions, the landscape studded with churches, pharisaic assumption of righteousness above other countries, are not to be accepted as standards of Christianity in a country when even our humanity becomes denatured, and greed and grasp lie in wait to prey upon the suffering and necessitous.

Canada has come to her own. A few years ago the mildest United States description of this country was "little frozen Canada." To-day the best minds of the United States are regarding the union of the two countries as a summum bonum.

A CHANGE DEMANDED.

Hon. Dr. Pyne, Minister of Education, officially denies the rumours printed to the effect that twelve authorized school books were to be discarded. The Minister explains that the facts are simply that the contract for printing twelve books expire at an early date, and that new arrangements for a supply must be made.

If the twelve books indicated are to be reprinted, the editions should be small; for in the best interests of education, the books should be superseded by others.

Without casting the slightest doubt upon the qualities and characters of the present authorized school text books, which doubtless meet the demands of our school curricula, as at present constituted, these books are not at all adapted to meet the modern demands for more direct and practical educational methods than at present prevail.

The present public school curriculum, while charitably unobjectionable from the point of adaptation to providing a smattering of literary education, is too elaborate, covers too much ground, demands too much dispersion of effort, results in too much educational dilution, to permit of children subjected to its exactions, leaving school with any educational equipment of even literary thoroughness. The majority of children who leave their educational life ended with the public school, are compelled to do so without even the elements of education of a practical character to permit them taking their proper place in life without post public school training in practical subjects.

Industrial and other conditions demand that our whole plan of school work should be modified to the end of giving the "graduates" of our public schools, the great mass of our school population, the educational training required for the highest possible industrial efficiency as workmen, and the greatest industrial success.

It did not need the counsel and plea of a noted Belgian professor who recently spoke in Toronto, for a substitution of science for literature as the dominant feature in our educational scheme, to demonstrate the fact that the demand of the new age, the present age, is for more practice and less theory.

If this demand is to be met, and if we are to have the desirable conditions that meeting it means, our primary educational system should be reorganized, and our curriculum recast in accordance. If this is done only in part, the demand for text books of corresponding character follows as a matter of course.

The Russian "revolution" is a good deal like our present winter weather—it remains about as it began, only a little more so.

THE BULL DOG GRIP.

Hon. Frank Carvell, minister of Public Works, in the Union government, is declaring for rigid economy and the suspension of expenditures on public works during the war. This is the obviously right thing to do when Canada's war expenditures are eating up a million dollars a day. Mr. Carvell was no doubt influenced by the Liberal traditions that cling to him.

Hon. Dr. Reid seems to have still clinging to him with a bull dog grip, the Borden government's traditions of indirectly purchasing political support by broadcast railway expenditures. He is now Minister of Railways and Canals, and should follow the example and policy of Carvell, who is cutting things to the bone. He stopped work on a tremendously important national work, the Welland Canal, during the war. But Hon. Mr. Reid is not following suite. He is still spending war time money like water on the reconstruction of a political—no, not even that, a partisan railway, the Quebec-Saugenay Railway.

This precious, speculative railway, about as necessary in transportation interests as the fifth wheel to a coach, was purchased by the Borden government a year ago for no other apparently earthly reason except to protect the interests of a political magnate and one commercial institution in Toronto. The purchase was pronounced in the House "a wild extravagance in times of peace; but in times of war nothing short of a crime."

The road as a going concern was practically non-existent, being only operated for one-third of its length. A contract was let for the reconstruction of the road, and last season three million dollars were voted for the purpose—against the protest of honest members on both sides of the House, including the Conservative member for Kingston, Mr. Nickle. It is simply shameful that the Union government permits continued expenditure on this work of public money, sorely needed for better purposes than a political-partisan railway. Let the members who are now members of the government, who protested against such scandalous and wicked waste of public money, stop it at once.

The Union government is on trial, and if it is to justify its existence it must bow to the line. Its very name suggests exclusion of partizanship, but we can't believe in it if it permits partizanship interests to waste the public resources in implementing a corrupt act of bargain and sale, not only at the expense of the public resources, but at the expense of Canada's work in winning the war.

When a government is wickedly wasteful the people must compensate by rigid economy.

An American Trench When Foe Rushed It

A letter from an officer who was with the American force that was raided in its trenches by the Germans late in October, calls the suddenness of the German descent "the only reason" why the attack was successful.

This officer asserts that the German barrage opened upon the sector soon after the Americans had taken their positions and that the artillery response to a hurry call for a counter-barrage was not quick enough to halt the hail of German shrapnel and thus stop the raiders.

The letter says there were 210 in the attacking party and 160 defenders He describes the American resistance as "honorable" and discloses casually the fact that the American soldiers had been with the British in Flanders before they took up the position where they were attacked.

The letter, which is dated Nov. 11, and is printed in The Springfield Republican, reads in part:

"Two weeks ago we left this 'rest billet' and by autopobile buses journeyed to our sector. This was supposedly a rest sector for the French. The Americans, just because they are Americans, have changed this. Our first night was, to say the least, rather exciting. About 2:45 a.m. the boches, who were too familiar with our movements, opened up with a strong barrage on our right sector. We called for a barrage off our front from our own artillery. The call was not answered promptly.

"The boches almost with the first shells of their barrage blew up two lines in our wire and came into our trenches like a herd of wild cattle. It was a well-organized, successful raid in which the Boches took eleven Americans away, dead or alive I don't know, leaving one dead Frenchman and three Americans. It took us entirely by surprise, and that is the only reason on God's earth it was successful.

"An Alsatian who was one of the boche raiding party deserted while they were in No Man's Land, just after the raid, awaiting for our artillery fire to lessen This Alsatian came into the lines of our infantry to the left of our sector He said the boches had planned the raid for two months. (that is, in their 'Strasstroff' — a school to train men for raids). Finding us to be the first Americans in the line, why, we were the goats, that's all.

"The raiding posse was 210 men Our company holding the sector was 160 men. Our troops acted in a very honorable attitude Everything goes to show that, after having undergone an extremely violent bombardment, our men fought off an enemy much stronger in number. The killed and wounded were struck by grenade fragments, pistol bullets, rifle bullets, and knives. We later found considerable boche equipment just beyond our wire. They no doubt carried away their dead and wounded with them.

"If I could really open up with a detailed story I could tell you some things the newspapers never hear and never will hear properly Our battalion is the first to have any real fighting We have had what would be called 'hot' where we had been standing.

"You soon get used to the whistle of shells, though I must admit at the start the indefiniteness of their flight gets your goat. My worthy helmet, which looks much like the British, has been rattled with flying mud and stones from a shell burst not too near. Our gas masks are always kept fastened 'at the alert' on our chests.

"We did get a gas scare one evening that resulted in a good deal of comedy. You see, some shells come over and don't explode. These shells are called 'duds.' When gas shells come over they do not explode. They sound like dropping a bad egg."

The writer describes the trench as the muddiest place in the world. He recommends hip boots as the best protection and expresses surprise at how well the men keep. He tells of directing a combat waggon over a road in the daytime in full view of the German lines, when suddenly it upset and spilled its contents in the mud. He says the stuff had just been recovered by hand and the team taken away, when a German "105" shell tore a hole "right where we had been standing."

PERTINENT FACTORS IN THE ADJUSTMENT OF RAILWAY RATES

When the bargain for the construction of the Canadian Pacific Railway was entered into the Government of Canada turned over to the promoters a considerable stretch of completed railway track, and a huge land grant, and later made a large money advance, so that the settlers of the West might have railway facilities. The company, after a period of dark days and varying fortunes, prospered exceedingly. It has been selling its land ever since the completion of the railway at steadily increasing prices. Its latest available statement — that for the period ending December 31st, 1916—shows that the company has still vast land holdings in all the Western Provinces which will yet return to its treasury a sum equal to the entire cost of the original Canadian Pacific Railway. From Schedule B of that report the following figures are taken:

Manitoba—200,859 acres of agricultural lands, valued at $2,008,590.

Saskatchewan — 1,904,712 acres of agricultural lands, valued at $13 per acre—$24,761,256.

Alberta—2,902,208 acres of agricultural land, valued at $13 per acre—$38,508,704.

Esquimault and Nanaimo land grant, 1,059,099 acres, valued at $4,997,960.

Unsold lands in townsites in Manitoba Saskatchewan, Alberta and British Columbia, $21,953,600.

Timber and tie reserve in British Columbia, 552,248 acres, valued at $2,209,392.

Irrigated lands in Alberta, 478,183 acres, valued at $18,538,210.

There are other assets of great potential value, such as the right to collect royalties on coal mines from three million acres of land in Alberta, which right in the company's statement of assets is said to be worth one dollar. Altogether the assets of the Canadiann Pacific, in agricultural and urban land, in mines, smelters, irrigation plants, farms, timber limits, royalties on natural gas, petroleum and coal, are set down as worth $123,442,000, and will undoubtedly bring not less than a hundred and fifty million dollars into the coffers of the company.

This after the Canadian Pacific has been selling land for more than thirty years, and has obtained in the form of net proceeds from lands and townsites the huge total of $71,999,000, while great sums are still to be obtained in deferred payments on lands sold. It is within the mark to say that the people of Canada gave to the promoters of the Canadian Pacific property that has turned out to be worth over a quarter of a billion dollars in return for the construction of a railway the original cost of which was less than, rather than over, a hundred millions.

"A man has a right to do what he likes with his own" is a phrase that is applied to the present position of the Canadian Pacific. It is argued that the promoters of the road took a great risk for a great prize and won. Why, therefore, should they and their successors not be permitted to enjoy their good fortune? If the public aid given to the C. P. R. had been a billion dollars instead of a quarter billion the assets of the road would still be morally and legally theirs, as against all the world besides, so long as they carried out their part of the bargain.

That is precisely where the rights of the people become a factor in the disposal of the vast accumulated wealth of the C. P. R. The grants of completed railway track, of lands and of monies were made to tide the railway over the period when even high rates for freight and passengers might not yield revenue sufficient to pay operating costs and interest on the money invested in the road. It was a major condition of the agreement, and it is a major factor in the railway situation in Canada to-day, that the promoters of the C.P.R. agreed that the tolls on the railway might be reduced at the will of the Government whenever these tolls produced net earnings sufficient to pay ten per cent. dividends upon the money actually invested in the building of the road. The good faith of the intention of the parties to that agreement was that the stockholders of the Canadian Pacific were to be limited to ten per cent. dividends, and that from time to time as the earnings of the railway and the proceeds of its land grants showed a surplus greater than that required to pay ten per cent. dividends the tolls of the Canadian Pacific should be reduced so that the people of Canada might participate in its prosperity by securing railway transportation at a minimum of cost.

Has that part of the C. P. R. bargain been carried out? Most emphatically no! The Canadian Pacific stock holders are getting their ten per cent. dividends, and there is not the remotest doubt of the ability of the company to keep up its dividend payments. Even in this time of extreme stress its net earnings are amply sufficient to pay ten per cent. a year, and to permit the accumulation of a great cash reserve. At the end of 1916 the company had $57,000,000 cash in hand and over eleven millions more in Government and other securities. Its easily realizable surplus of cash, public securities or loans to the Government at the present time cannot be less than seventy-five million dollars.

Yet it has been decided by the Railway Commission that next week an increase of railway rates shall go into force throughout Canada which will add many millions of dollars yearly to that already great surplus. There is need for this increase, it is argued, because the Grand Trunk and the Government Railways have not sufficient revenue to meet the increase in operating costs. As rates must be the same on all lines, the C.P.R. has to be given the benefit of the increase, which it does not need.

The Government must speedily decide upon a remedy for the great injustice to the passengers and shippers who use the railways involved in the granting of this unnecessary increase to the Canadian Pacific. That company should be placed in the position clearly contemplated by the original agreement under which the road was built—that the stockholders should be limited to a return of ten per cent. on the capital invested by them in the railway, and that the public should get a return from their great investment of lands and other assets in the form of the lowest possible transportation rates that can be put in force under the powers reserved to the Government.—The Globe.

WHO IS AMERICAN "MASTER MIND" IN GERMAN EXPOSURE

Nobody Knows, But Many a High Personage Cares Mightily.

WASHINGTON, Jan. 22. —Tucked securely away in a secret cranny of the Government to-day is the mysterious "master mind" who deciphered the prize German code and set the diplomatic capitals of the world by the ears.

The American brain revealed ex-French Premier Caillaux's pro-German political intrigue and put him under a traitor charge before his own countrymen. It brought out the stark skeleton of Germany's Central and South American dominion ambition and rattled it before the world. It has caused the recall of Count von Luxburg as German Minister to Argentina, and caused the populace of Buenos Aires to riot in the streets for war on Prussianism.

It has involved the integrity of the Swedish ambassadors to Mexico and Argentina. It has pictured the machinations of von Bernstorff and his puppets in the United States.

Who is he—or she—to beat German cunning by fathoming the intercepted Luxburg notes? That's the question being asked around the world to-day by premiers, potentates, plenipotentiaries, and other wearers of the political purple.

The Kaiser himself would give millions of marks to know and to get his clutches on this person, for he—or she—is the one who has played ducks and drakes with Wilhelm's dream of world-domination and spilled his pan-German plans all over the international situation. Who this person is nobody knows—for publication. After the war perhaps the story may be told.

The American agents, intercepted the code messages from Luxburg to Berlin some of them via Count von Bernstorff of Washington, it fell to this person to fathom their secrets. Not only were they couched in German, but also in the German code, which the Kaiser's craftiest diplomatic agents spent years in building up. And this American smashed the code. As a result the Kaiser's prize secrets are ours, but this prize secret of ours is not the Kaiser's.

The stranger on a walking-tour came across an "old, old man a-sitting on a gate," and began to ask questions.

"You are a farmer, I suppose?"

"No, not now, I used to be, but I gave it up."

"Well, you don't seem to be very busy. You have plenty of time on your hands, haven't you?"

"Lots of it."

"Ever do any work?"

"Once I did."

"What do you do now, if I may ask?"

"Don't do nothing. Hain't done nothing for nearly ten years."

"So. Why, you're in luck! If I did nothing for half that length of time I should be in the poorhouse."

The old man's face beamed with a glad surprise, and then, as one who knows his rare good fortune and values it at it's just worth, he cried delightedly: "That's where I be!"—Pittsburg Chronicle-Telegraph.

The British Front From Week To Week

By "A. A. M."

(By "A. A. M.")

The name of the General who has really been in command on the western front this week may be given without fear of the censor; it is General Frost.

To frost and snow all military operations have to give way. The guns may still send across souvenirs to the enemy opposite, aeroplanes may still make their daily observations; but the infantry remains glued (unpropitious word when the thaw comes) to its trenches. In the Cambrai sector many a blessing on the conscientious German minds which planned the famous Hindenburg line will rise from British lips this Christmas. The depth, the comfort, the warmth of it! For 6,000 yards we hold it, this monument of German industry, a labour of love spread over many months... and opposite to us, in hastily dug trenches, sit the builders of it, shivering. From now onwards, too, we shall begin to reap the harvest of the terrible fighting in Flanders. This winter will be very different from last winter, for this winter we are on the top of the ridge and the Germans are at the bottom. Yet the weather do its worst in the Ypres sector, it is not we who shall be the chief sufferers. "We know all about the winter at the bottom of the hill. We have had three years of it. Now it is the Germans' turn.

"British Thrusts Failed."

General Frost, one may expect, will have a word to say in Italy also before long. Meanwhile, the British troops are making their presence felt. We have heard nothing of them from our own side yet, but Germany reports that "British thrusts failed." "Failed to get through to Berlin," is what the German generally means by this; no doubt he is right. It must be cold on the mountains above the Venetian plain, and the Austro-German troops there must think longingly of Palestine or Mesopotamia. No doubt the troops in Palestine have had sometimes the same thoughts of France or Flanders.

Strange things happen in Palestine. We have all heard of the wonderful submarine-aeroplane, which can fly through the clouds, dive under the sea, or (if required) take the place of a tank across trenches. It has never actually been constructed yet, but several people have written hopefully to the War Office about it, offering the idea to any member of the Staff who cared to work it out. No, it has not been worked out in Palestine, but several aeroplanes out there were flying 400 feet below sea level last week. One must add, although it spoils the story, that they were flying over the dead Sea, which is itself 1,200 feet below the level of the Mediterranean.

This week we have heard something of the official Allied entry into Jerusalem. It was a simple business, the more impressive for its simplicity. When the Kaiser made his triumphal entry in 1898 (not as a conqueror but as a Cook's tourist), a wide breach in the walls was opened for him, the gate being thought too narrow for the All-Highest. The British Commander-in-Chief did not go in by this way, but on foot by the ancient gate known to the Arabs as "The Friend." And he was received as a friend. Cries of "Bravo" and "Hurrah" came from lips which could never have spoken the words before.

A Jewish woman said to one of the correspondents, "This is our day of liberation," and an elderly man in a black robe, "God has delivered us. O how happy we are." An American worker in the hospital told the story of three wounded Arab officers who had been brought into Jerusalem a few days before. One who could speak a little English said, "I can hip, hip, hurrah for England now." It is curious how this cry has become the shibboleth of the foreign friends of Britain. Every little French boy will great British troops with "Eep, eep, ooray" and feel that he has duly asserted his claim to be elected an honorary Englishman.

General Allenby's guard of honour was no more than a hundred and fifty. Fifty of these were Australian and New Zealand horsemen, dismounted now, who almost since the beginning of the war, have been pursuing or holding up the Turk east of Suez. It will be a memory for them to look back upon; a fitting crown to their three years work for the Empire.

UXBRIDGE MAN CAPTURED EAGLE

Mr. Avery Miller of York Mills, formerly of Uxbridge Township, was in town on Monday. He tells us he had a novel experience not long ago in capturing a big eagle in the Rouge river swamp. He says an eagle has to get a start like a goose or an aeroplane by skimming along the ground before rising and when this one was getting up steam it collided with a cedar, which gave him a chance to throw himself on it. With some binder twine from his pocket he tied the bird and now has it in a wire-fronted pen at home. Most people would be satisfied to let Avery, rather than themselves, tackle the bird. An eagle is not a pleasant thing to come to grips with.

MOST HUMAN ILLS TRACED TO ONE CAUSE

Remarkable Demonstration of This Theory Found in Toronto Woman's Case

Science has discovered that most of the many ills that afflict humanity are traceable to a disordered condition of the stomach and intestines. Keep these organs healthy and active and you will remain strong, sturdy and well, as nature intended you should be.

Then if you are a victim of stomach trouble, or any of the disagreeable symptoms resulting from it, the experience of others in your own city or community who have testified, to the benefits they have obtained from the use of Tanlac, should appeal very forcibly to you.

Among the many strong endorsements recently received, is the following from Mrs. Sarah Pegan, who resides near Stop 26, Long Branch, on the Lake Shore Road out of Toronto.

"I certainly feel grateful to the good people who told me about Tanlac in the papers, for ever since I finished my seventh bottle I have felt like a different person," said Mrs. Pegan. "I had suffered constantly for four or five years from stomach trouble and indigestion. During that time, my stomach was almost always full of gas which would press on my heart, causing intense pain and shortness of breath. I always felt bloated and swollen after eating, and especially at night, I often had to get up before I could breathe good. I sometimes had severe pains in my side, just under my ribs. I couln't sleep except in a doze, and could hardly find a minute's comfort. I was also troubled with what I took to be poor circulation. My fingers, hands and arms would get stiff and numb, exactly like they had gone to sleep.

"By the time I finished my first bottle of Tanlac I was relieved of the gas and shortness of breath, entirely. So I just kept on taking it until my stomach trouble disappeared entirely, my appetite was fine and I could sleep as sound as a dollar all night. Tanlac also relieved me of that numb condition in my hands and arms. And another thing, I had been bothered by sharp pains across my back, but after taking Tanlac a while they also disappeared. My strength has increased wonderfully and I simply feel, oh, so much better every way. I'm going to take some more Tanlac soon as a safeguard, for I know from experience that there's nothing better.

Tanlac is sold in Peterborough by W. B. Warne Drug Co., Ltd., in Havelock by A. C. Denike, and in Lakefield by Tanner Drug Co., Ltd.

Scene from "COME BACK TO ERIN," which comes to The Grand next Monday evening with Walter Lawrence, the singing comedian, in the leading role.

"Come Back to Erin," a comedy drama in four acts, will be the attraction at The Grand on Monday evening next. It is quite a leap from musical comedy to an Irish drama, but Walter Lawrence, who is starring in this new vehicle has long contemplated such a move. He has everything in his favour for his entrance to this new field.

He possesses all the natural qualifications desired for the portrayal of the emotional, witty and easy-mannered young Irishman. Lawrence is also gifted with a singing voice that is second to none, and uses it to advantage in rendering the charming old Irish ballads, during the action of the play.

The theme of the story is unique in its conception, far different to what we have been accustomed. It is a story of true Irish life as we find it today, teeming with heart interest, thrilling situations, and a vein of wholesome comedy. Mr. Lawrence has been surrounded with an unusually clever cast of players, among whom Phyllis Grey, who shares the burden of the play with Mr. Lawrence, stands out prominently, through her appealing interpretations of the role of Kathleen Donald.

LETTER FROM PETERBORO' BOY

Mr. J. Foster has received the following letter from Pte. Ted Holland of Peterborough, who left here with the 39th Battalion, and is now in France with the 5th Brigade Runners, 2nd Canadian Division:

New Year's Day, 1918.

Dear Friends,

I now have the opportunity of writing these few lines, hoping this will find you all at home in the best of health, as it leaves me quite safe and well at present. Well, Jim, I hope you will not be offended at me for not sending you all a card on Christmas, but we were in the line longer than we expected to be, and we just got out in time to spend Christmas on rest, and the place that we are at—well, you can't buy a thing; it's about the worst place we have had yet. You might just as well be out in the woods, about 20 miles from nowhere, but if I ever strike a place when we get on the move, I will send you all a card.

I hope you all enjoyed yourselves at Christmas time, although I don't suppose there was much enjoyment anywhere; but still we all have to have a good time when we get back, which I hope won't be long, for I have had enough of soldiering. I was just thinking, it will be three years to-morrow since I joined up. I'll soon be an old soldier, Jim. As regards Christmas out here, we made the best of it. We had a very nice dinner, and there was lots to drink. That's where I shine, and I drowned my sorrows that day. I hope you are able to go back to work by this time. You certainly had it pretty tough, with all these operations. I have sent you a picture of myself and my old schoolmate whom I met in London while I was on leave from France. It's not up to much, but I guess you don't mind having it.

Pte. E. Holland, No. 412480,
5th Bgde. Runners,
2nd Canadian Div.,
B.E.F., France.

We are just starting the New Year and I am seeing the Old Year out, as I am on duty; otherwise, I would have seen it out in bed. The church bells were ringing here also our famous band of snake charmers (commonly known as the bagpipes) were playing. Well, I suppose Irene is getting quite a big girl now. I won't know her when I get back. Tell her to look after the old armchair for me until I come back. Well, I must close now. Wishing you all the best of luck for the New Year. Hoping to hear from you soon,—I remain,

Your sincere friend,

Ted.

PETERBORO WILL LIKELY HAVE A 32 MILL TAX RATE

What is Being Done in Other Municipalities to Reduce the Rate

A thirty-two mill tax rate is in prospect for Peterborough this year unless the City Council follows in the footsteps of other municipalities and cuts civic expenditures to the bone.

In Preston, Reeve Oaks and his followers, who were elected to this year's council on the ticket of economy and promises that they would curtail expenses, have started right, as was shown at the meeting of the council on Monday night. Their policy, as stated is to dispense with the present town clerk and treasurer, and secure a cheaper man; also to dispense with the town engineer, as his services will not be needed this year. They will also dismiss the two drivers of the fire truck, as the truck cannot be used in the winter, and the men are not earning their wages. The fire team will be brought back into service.

Nearly four hundred ratepayers attended the meeting and two hundred or more were unable to gain admittance to the council chambers. Never in the history of the town has such interest been taken in municipal affairs, and it appears that this year's council intends making a general clean-up.

IN OTTAWA.

At a recent meeting of the Ottawa Board of Control the most interesting matter on the order paper was a letter from one Eric C. Jamieson expressing the opinion that civic salary expenditures should be curtailed. In a somewhat critical letter he gave it as his impression that although there was little work at the City Hall in these war times, officials were being kept in the corporation's employ at the same large salaries as formerly, and in "soft jobs." The works department, he said, was over-manned by high salaried officials, as was also the health department, which was entwined with red tape. Mr. Jamieson offered to take a job in the health department and reduce the salary expenditure by $1,000 a year.

A YEAR OF LABOUR AND SUCCESS FOR MURRAY ST. CHURCH

Annual Meeting Held on Wednesday—$10,216.00 Raised by This Congregation During the Past Year—Officers Are Elected

Wednesday evening was the date set apart for the annual meeting of Murray Street Baptist Church, and the severe weather outside was forgotten as the people listened to the inspiring reports of their year's work. Nearly eighty of the men of Murray Street are absent in the interests of the Empire, and five whose names appear under the flag have laid down their lives for the cause.

During the year the membership and attendance have increased, and the gifts of the people are again in advance of last year.

The annual letter of the pastor, Rev. J. R. Webb, testified to the unity of the membership and the hearty co-operation which he has had in the different enterprises in which he has led his people.

The chairman of the Finance Committee, Mr. R. C. Read, presented in his report a plan for the clearing off of the entire church debt within the next few years, and surprised and delighted those present by showing that while only twelve members of the church had been approached, the sum of $10,700 had already been subscribed for the purpose.

The following amounts have been raised by the different departments during the year 1917. Every year since entering their new building, the people of Murray Street have paid at least $1,000 on the principal, besides the interest on the church debt:

General building fund	763.00
Women's Mission Circle	417.51

LETTER FROM PTE. HOLLAND

The following interesting letter has been received from Private Fred Seymour, a Peterborough member of the 6th Canadian Field Ambulance:

Somewhere in France,
Jan. 4, 1918.

Dear Mother,

Just a line to let you know I am all O.K. and feeling fine. I am doing fine on bully beef and biscuits, and also having some time. You need not worry about me, as we have moved a great many miles behind the lines for a rest.

I spent Christmas doing guard on the supply stores. I have not had my clothes off since I came to France and your would be surprised to know where I have slept. It is certainly some experience to me. I cannot tell you anything of interest, as it is forbidden, only to tell you I am well.

I have not received any letters for a long time. I am at present in the north of France. It is much like Canada. We get lots of cold weather and snow. I hope to get home this year, but when I go back on X-ray work I shall have lots to do.

Well, mother, this is all for this time. Write and tell me all the news.

With lots of love, from your loving son, Fred M. Seymour.

My address is:
Pte. Fred M. Seymour, No. 528613,
5th Can. Field Ambulance Corps,
B.E.F., France.

Presentation To Pte. Joseph McAuliffe Of Ennismore

Speeches Were Given by Father's McAuley, McGuire and Galvin

An entertainment was held at Ennismore to welcome home from the Front Pte. Joe McAuliffe. During the evening Pte. McAuliffe was presented with a purse of gold, and the following address was read by Mr. James McGuire. Fathers McAuley, McGuire, and Galvin delivered addresses suitable to the occasion. Sergt. Dan. O'Brien, of Downeyville, was among those present. Pte. McAuliffe leaves for the Convalescent Hospital in Kingston again on Saturday, and his friends wish him a speedy recovery from his wounds.

The address follows:

To Private Joseph McAuliffe.

'Tis with hearts overflowing with pride and joy that we are met here to-night to pay honour to one who, for the sheer joy of giving, offered his life that in the fiery crucible of this cruel war liberty, truth and honesty might prevail, and to assure him that his presence once more in our midst is a source of real satisfaction.

Not more than two years ago, Mr. McAuliffe, asunder you drew the bonds of early friendships dear, and thankfully, to England's cry for help, came your response, "England, Mother England, we'll come, yes, we'll come," a refrain which, taken up by the four winds, "rolled from soul to soul and grew for ever and for ever." No doubt, with hope, mingled with fear, did you cross the salty sea, but we know, as the scenes of bloody war drew near, there took possession of you the yearning to curb the ruthless hand, against which so many good peoples of the earth are allied in righteous wrath.

Soon, but not for you too soon, did you find yourself in the duguts of Flanders, suffering from wet, cold and mud. You and the other heroes, living and dead, who struggled on gory beds at Vimy Ridge, Lens, Courcelette, have ennobled your names far beyond our poor power to add or detract. How applicable to you, however, are the following lines by Pauline Johnson, you yourself know best:

"Few of you have the blood of kings,
And few are of courtly birth,
But none are vagabonds or rogues
Of doubtful name or worth.
And each has one credential
Which entitles him to brag:
You fought for right and Canada,
And upheld the British flag."

These words, perhaps, the world will little note nor long remember; but never can it forget that for your valorous deeds it will ever remain your debtor.

We here in Ennismore, far from the horrible scenes of the battlefield, who know you well, who know that you fought the good fight that this nation might have a new birth of freedom, that government of the people, by the people, for the people might not perish. We, I say, cannot thank you sufficiently for the heroic sacrifice you made on our behalf; nor can words express our unbounded joy at your safe return.

However, as a token of our sincerity and deep appreciation of your noble efforts, we—though we know full well that your deserts far outbalance all the gold we could accumulate—ask you to accept this purse. With it we must needs enclose for you as you speed onward on life's journey, this little advice, this little prayer:

"If you pause at the City of Trouble,
Or wait in the Valley of Tears,
Be patient—the train will move onward,
And sweep down the track of the years.
Wherever the place is you seek for,
Whatever your aim or your quest,
You shall come at last to rejoicing,
To the beautiful Station of Rest."

Signed on behalf of the Parish and Township of Ennismore.

THE GARBAGE TAX RATE THIS YEAR WILL BE ONE MILL

This year's garbage tax rate will be one mill, an increase of three-tenths of a mill. The estimate of this item in the Property committee's report is placed at $10,200.00. One mill in the taxes will provide $10,057.95, slightly more than the amount needed; but this rate was preferred to nine-tenths of a mill which would supply $9,051.71 or $478 less than the estimated expenses. The one mill rate was decided in a motion by Ald. Edgar, seconded by Mayor Duncan. It was stated that necessary repairs to the furnaces at the incinerator must soon be made and there are other incidentals to be covered.

Choir And Congregation Of Murray Street Church Make Presentations To Mr. Asa Huycke

The Choir and the Choir Committee of Murray Street Baptist Church met at the home of Dr. W. D. Scott last night, the meeting being in the nature of a farewell to Mr. Asa Huycke, the leader of the choir, who leaves in a few days for Chicago to pursue further musical study. Mr. Joseph Wearing acted as chairman, and after speaking of the splendid service rendered by Mr. Huycke and the very great loss his departure would be to the church and the city, announced that Miss Ida Sanderson, whose work as organist has been highly appreciated, has been engaged to act as leader also. Mr. Jethro Graham, of the Collegiate, the president of the choir, read an address of appreciation on behalf of the choir, after which Miss Mary Scott presented Mr. Huycke with a fine club-bag. Dr. Scott then spoke on behalf of the Choir Committee, and Mr. Harding made a presentation of a purse of gold on behalf of the members of the church. Rev. J. R. Webb spoke warmly of the assistance given to him by Mr. Huycke, and expressed the best wishes of the congregation for his continued success. Refreshments were served by Mrs. Scott, Miss Florence Scott and Mrs. Breyfogle, and after a few vocal and instrumental selections by Mr. Huycke, the meeting closed with the singing of "Auld Lang Syne."

The address was as follows:

Dear Mr. Huycke,—When your many friends first learned that you had some thought of leaving Peterborough, we hoped that the rumour was untrue. But since you have decided to leave us we wish to express our deep regret for the loss which we shall sustain.

You have been faithful and untiring in your duties as choirmaster. You have spared neither time nor energy in the fulfilment of your work. You have shown yourself a competent musical director in the few years that you have officiated in that capacity, and you have to your credit a choir that is second to none in Peterborough.

There is not a member of Murray Street choir but feels that he has received valuable training due to your efficient leadership. We have been impressed by your musical ability, your pleasant disposition and your charming personality. You have won a warm place in the hearts of the choir members, and the many good times we have spent together will long be pleasant memories.

We are sorry that you are going from our midst, and we do not want you to forget us. Therefore, Mr. Huycke, as a token of esteem and an expression of appreciation and best wishes for future success, we, the members of Murray Street choir, ask you to accept this remembrance, and if difficulties arise just "pack all your troubles in this old kit bag and smile."

Signed on behalf of the choir,
Ida C. Sanderson, Lillian Eastwood, Florence L. Scott, C. S. Browne, S. J. Graham.

"KATINKA"

Here Next Wednesday—Big Production

With a cast of principals recruited from the very best musical comedy talent Broadway affords, and with one of the largest and sprightliest choruses that ever came out of New York, "Katinka," on its tour of the country, following its sensational success of last winter in the American theatrical metropolis, will be presented at "The Grand" next Wednesday, January 30.

"Katinka" is the work of Otto Harbach and Rudolf Friml, author and composer of "The Firefly," "High Jinks" and "You're in Love," and was staged by Arthur Hammerstein, responsible for the elaborate staging of the other productions. It is credited with eclipsing its predecessors in mirthfulness, tunefulness and gorgeousness.

Russia, Persia and France each furnish a picturesque locality for the development of the plot, which is in three acts. Katinka, a pretty Russian maiden, is being forced into a disagreeable marriage with an elderly statesman, but on the night of her wedding, her lover, Ivan, learns that Boris already has a wife living. He steals Katinka away, and the two, accompanied by an American friend named Hopper, proceed to Persia in search of Mrs. Boris, who is said to be hiding in a harem. After some exciting and ridiculous adventures in the domain of the Sultan they proceed to Paris, where Mrs. Boris is traced at last, and where numerous complications that have arisen are straightened out.

It will be readily seen that such a plot offers infinite opportunities for elaborate stage settings and handsome costuming, and Mr. Hammerstein is said to have missed none of them. Mr. Friml has provided a musical score shifting in themes to meet the requirements of the several localities, and fairly bristling with hits, of which "Rackety Coo!" is the most pronounced.

The cast includes Howard Langford, Eve Lynn, Marquita Dwight, Clara Palmer, Dixie Blair, Eleanor Vincent, Peggy Pates, Nicholas Kovac, Bernard Gorcey, William Schuster, John Roberts, Daniel J. Sullivan and S. Paul Veron.

Say New Rates Will Not Go Into Force

(Special to the Toronto Star and The Peterborough Examiner.)

OTTAWA, Ont., Jan. 25.—It is generally conceded here that yesterday's conference between the government and a mixed delegation of provincial representatives, Board of Trade men and others has gone far toward forcing a definite solution of the Canadian railway problem. Even railway officials conceded yesterday that there was very little possibility of the new railway rates being enforced in their present form at least. More sanguine members of the opposing delegation confidently predict that the new rates won't go into force at all, and that before the date set for a rehearsing of their claims in the middle of March the government will have arrived at a scheme which will render the application of the new rates needless.

BREAD INSPECTOR'S REPORT.

Was Favourably Received by Property Committee.

Police Sergeant Reid's first quarterly report as bread inspector was received last night by the Property committee, who expressed their satisfaction with his work and its results.

EGG PRODUCING HEN FEED

HOW can we produce more eggs? by your help we can do it, there are tons of good hen feed thrown into the garbage collection and taken to the Incinerator and destroyed by fire. Now I am not playing with the horses, but am devoting my time to help produce more food and I want your help. If every housewife in Peterborough and every girl will save me the waste that fowls will eat, my men will call and get it and grind it up. ¶ Save your bones, rind off meat and fat you can't use.

I can grind it up and make Hen Feed, and the people who keep hens will use it and all you have to do is 'phone 1389 and we will be after your scraps and buy all the old rags, rubber, old iron and junk you have to sell.

Those that keep hens can have our hen-feed delivered to them by calling up 1389. Farmers when in town can call at the factory next to the cold storage and take home 100 lbs. or more. Farmers should 'phone their order in so we will have it ready for them when they call.

Let us all get together and do business and lick Germany to a finish by producing food for the soldiers' wives and children. Fathers and Mothers who are here with us, of the Good brave men who will win and bring honour and glory to the flag that has stood the storm for 1,000 years, and, that the sun never sets on the dear old flag, and it will never be beaten or disgraced by beer drinking Germany or any other country on earth; for He who never sleeps and direct all battles will see to it that the flag still flies and the great nation he has created shall not be trodden down. Let us all do our best in our little way and we must win. Don't forget to ring 1389.

With a Union Government a Union people each doing their bit, all pulling together, we must keep the flag flying.

Yours, for Egg Production— GEORGE STEVENS

CANON DAVIDSON TELLS OF No. 3 STATIONARY HOSPITAL

Addressed a Large Audience in London, Ontario—Hospital Town Beautifully Situated

LONDON, Jan. 25.— Canon Davidson, formerly chaplain of No. 3 Stationary Hospital, spoke most eloquently here on the work of this hospital, giving in detail not only the occupation of the boys over there, but their surroundings in a beautiful French town, through which the troops are constantly passing on their way to the front lines. His address was delivered to a crowded and interested audience in the Princess Patricia room of the Royal Bank building. It was on the request of Colonel Reason, who is now O. C. of No. 3 Hospital, that Canon Davidson came to the city to tell the relatives and friends of the boys in that unit something of their life and environment. Canon Davidson spent the morning in visiting as many of the homes of these relatives as it was possible for him to visit.

Hospital Town Beautifully Situated.

"No. 3 Hospital has advertised the city of London in the old land," declared the speaker. "And the men of that unit have lived up to the best that is in the name, London, Canada. Great credit must be given to Colonel Davis for his judgment in selecting such a spot for the location of No. 3 Hospital. This French town has a population of about 35,000 people, and was situated very close to the front line at the time of No. 3's arrival there. At night the whole sky was illuminated with gunfire, and the noise was terrific. However, we had no time to listen, as we were always very busy. Perhaps this hospital is the most beautifully situated in France. The building was once a mediaeval fortress, surrounded by an immense moat, so wide that the men played football in it. All was surrounded by a wonderful wall, which was six feet thick and marvellously well preserved. There were only two entrances, and these by drawbridges. The whole consisted of about four immense buildings, which had been used as barracks for the French army, then later for a school for refractory girls, and still later as a home for lunatics. There were miles of passages down into the very bowels of the earth, under the walls and moat, for the egress of the garrison in times of siege. When the Germans were in possession here at the beginning of the war, the French soldiers were secreted in the passageways.

Express Admiration for Work of the Men.

"The fortress was first handed over to an imperial hospital and finally became the home of No. 3 "London's Own" Hospital. To begin with, when the work was very difficult, there were only fifteen nursing sisters, but later the staff increased to 42. The unit comprised about 180 or 190 men, and the average number of patients was from 700 to 750.

"The work was tremendous, and the chaplains worked in the closest union with the doctors and nurses, whom I cannot commend too much. I felt, as I stood by the bedside of a wounded soldier, that I represented the absent mother and sweetheart, so I cheered them as best I could. Part of my work was to write letters to the friends of the men, and during the time when I kept account I wrote over 2,400 letters. I cannot say too much about the work of the orderlies. I express my enthusiastic admiration for the demeanor of those soldiers of ours.

No. 3 Hospital Separated From Other Canadians.

"Our unit was unique in the fact that it was an absolutely Canadian unit separated from all other Canadians, for almost the whole of the fifth army, to which we were attached, were imperials. That No. 3 Hospital was like a great hand of Canada stretching out there to give a warm grasp of fellowship to all who came within its grasp. You were splendidly represented there in the person of Colonel Davis, who was largely instrumental in getting the unit together in its early stages. He made it like a great home, with all the men as one largely family. All the men were doing hard things and suffering, and it was our work as chaplains to try to cheer them up, and I consider that that was the greatest possible privilege. One extraordinary thing about the life over there was the lack of talk about money. Money no longer counted in life.

Praise For Colonel Reason.

"When the retirement of the Germans placed us 25 miles away, we had not many cases directly from the front, but many came in from casualty clearing stations, and we also had some civilian cases, as there were no men left in the French towns to care for the sick. Then Colonel Davis went to Shorncliffe to take charge there, and Colonel Reason became our O. C. I cannot say too much of Colonel Reason. He certainly is an extraordinary man, with the qualities of leadership most magnificently developed. He has organized and improved the work of the hospital in the most wonderful way, installing electricity, and even a cinema.

A Suggestion to the Red Cross.

"All honour to the Red Cross and I.O.D.E. for the splendid work they have done. There is one suggestion which I would like to make to the Red Cross, concerning one of their rules. This rule says that no special designation be put on the different pieces and bales of work being shipped overseas, but only the Red Cross mark. Now these Red Cross supplies come to us very much like gifts from heaven, like the rain and sunshine, and the men soon begin to take them for granted, as they do their meals, for there is no end of them. The men are not grateful enough for the enormous amount of work which the women are doing for them. However, there are two enterprising places in Canada, Hamilton and Calgary, and the parcels from there are labelled with the name of the city, and all the boys are asking where Calgary is and where Hamilton is. This is an enormous advertisement for Calgary and Hamilton. Girls often put notes in the toes of the socks which they knit, and so start a correspondence with the soldier, who becomes extremely grateful to the knitter of the socks. The only thing which the London Red Cross lacks is personality. I believe that we should make things interesting for the boys, as well as comfortable. Also we should advertise our country so that after the war, when the soldiers of Europe are seeking a place to make a home, they will come back to Canada."

At the close of the address, Canon Tucker moved a vote of thanks to Canon Davidson, and this was seconded by Dean Davis.

DEAF MUTE SAVED SEVEN FROM DEATH

Modest Hero Presented Humane Society Medal By Premier

RESIDED IN PETERBORO'

Ottawa, January 25. — Mr. Wm. A. O'Rourke, formerly of Peterboro, a deaf and dumb employee at the Government Printing Bureau, has been awarded the Royal Humane Society's medal for rescuing from drowning no fewer than seven persons. At Chemong Lake last summer he saved a man from drowning. In 1916, while attending a convention of deaf mutes at Saranac Lake, he saved two lives, and previously he had rescued four persons from drowning. The medal was presented by Sir Robert Borden, accompanied by the following letter:

"Mr. J. H. Burnahm, the Member for West Peterboro, your former home, has honored me with the request that I formally present to you the accompanying medal of the Royal Humane Society, which has been granted in recognition of your splendid achievement in the saving of human life.

"Mr. Burnham advises me that you have been instrumental in rescuing no fewer than seven persons who would otherwise have met untimely deaths by drowning.

"He states further that, with becoming modesty, you declined to lay claim to recognition by the society, feeling the satisfaction of having done your duty was in itself sufficient reward; and that the Humane Society acted on proof submitted by your friends. Truly 'on their own merits modest men are dumb.' Unfortunately this is literally as well as metaphorically true in your case, and the fact that you are handicapped by the loss of the two senses of speech and hearing adds interest to your exploits, and renders your achievements the more noteworthy, not to say remarkable.

"I am proud to learn that you are now a valued employee of the Government Printing Bureau, and I trust that you may long be spared to wear the distinction which you have so heroically earned."

Dangerous Industrial Situation

(Special to the Toronto Star and The Peterborough Examiner.)

NOTTINGHAM, Jan. 25. — Warning that a "dangerous industrial situation is looming upon the horizon," was voiced to the Labour Convention to-day by W. G. Anderson, a Labourite member of parliament. He declared a "dangerous famine was creeping across Europe," and appealed for restraint.

Drastic Action To Rid Streets Of Dogs Suspended Until The City Solicitor Gives Assurance

Before adopting the extreme measure of authorizing the police to shoot unmuzzled and unmuzzled dogs at sight when they run a large, the Property committee last night decided to ask the City Solicitor if the Council had the right to compel dogs to be kept off the streets altogether. This information will be available at the next meeting of the Council and will influence the final action in combatting the outbreak of rabies, the seriousness of which was emphasized recently by an official of the Veterinary-General's Department after a visit to Peterborough and adjoining townships.

The committee had all but agreed to order dogs shot at sight if found wandering the streets, but Ald. Edgar counselled caution, stating that valuable dogs might break loose from their kennels, reach the streets and suffer the fate of the homeless mongrels.

Mayor Duncan suggested engaging a dog catcher for two or three weeks, but the item of expense discouraged that direct plan. A lethal chamber was also passed up on account of financial straits.

Mayor Duncan—We can wait for definite information from the Solicitor, but we must keep at this until we get something that will be effective.

Ald. Saunders—We should give the police power to shoot them on sight.

Mayor Duncan—We wouldn't have any of them on the streets then, and that's just what we want.

Mr. Stapleton—You won't have any pedestrians either. The police shot off a door I had at the incinerator. One of them shot a dog in the morning and it got up and growled at the scavenger when he went to take it away in the afternoon."

A shot gun seemed a more thorough weapon for dogs than a revolver, and there was a passing pleasantry of arming all the constables and turning them loose to exterminate the lovers and Fidos that infest the alleys in spite of the decimating of their numbers last year's desultory campaign caused.

Mr. Stapleton—Give P. C. Wigg that gun. He's the best shot. You wouldn't know what the others might hit.

Of course this reflection upon the marksmanship of the police force wasn't offered in all seriousness. P. C. Wigg is an experienced deer hunter and naturally is assumed to be something of a William Tell.

The failure of the present by-law to control the dogs is due to the refusal of the police to catch them. It was intimated that even tagless dogs recognize the police as friends and that the average Towser knows that he can sniff with impunity the heels of a P. C. or even eat out of his hand.

At any rate the Council's determination to rid the streets of the worthless canines was simply suspended last night. The merchants, it was stated, will regard the clean-up as a boon apart altogether from the consideration of stamping out rabies.

The Scavengers' Problems.

Ald. Saunders presided last night with Mayor Duncan, Ald. Edgar, Ald. Jones and Sanitary Inspector Stapleton present.

The Inspector turned on a reel revealing one side of his experience that left the committee temporarily dumb.

"You donsit know what's going on in this city," he said, and related the details of a visit he had made to a home which refused to pay one of the scavengers a dobt of 40 cents.

"There were the father, mother and five children. The father, remember, is earning $17 a week. When I went there you would scarcely recognize it as a home were it not for the presence of the mother and children. There were a few scraps of junk furniture. There was only one bed and a sofa. The father slept on the sofa and the mother and the five children took the bed. I don't think the bed clothes had ever been washed. They might have been, but it certainly was a long time ago. I asked the woman what had become of the other bed that was there when Mr. Powell called. She said they had run short of firewood and had broken it up and burned it. I asked her why she hadn't burned the other one, and she said it was iron, and one couldn't burn that. These people live on the bank of the river. They could jump into it from their verandah, but all they do with water is drink it. I don't think the mother had combed her hair in six months and the children were covered with real estate (plain dirt.) The wife gets $14 of her husband's wages, but I haven't the least idea what she does with it."

Mr. Powell, agent for the Children's Aid Society, had called at the home left a Bible and believed the family would mend their ways. Since cleanliness was next to Godliness the Inspector had suggested that soap and water would do them a world of good.

And this was only one of a number of examples of unlovely home conditions that the average citizen knows nothing of. They illustrate faintly some of the difficulties the Inspector has to contend with in his endeavour to make Peterborough a clean city.

The committee decided to apply for legislation that will make citizens of the above type pay the fee the Council set for the work of the scavengers. At present they can be reached only through the Division Court, but it is intended to bring them to the police court for failure to pay these small debts.

Police Are After Peterboro' Man

William John Montgomery Accused of Passing Worthless Cheques

LINDSAY, Jan. 25.—Another bogus cheque artist of the Lubin type has operated in Lindsay, a merchant and hotel keeper being his victims.

On Friday last a young man named William John Montgomery, who has been employed by the G. T. R., and whose home is in Peterborough, made a purchase amounting to a couple of dollars at a local store, presenting a cheque on the Dominion Bank at Peterborough, for $57.00. Although Montgomery had made previous purchases at the store, the merchant questioned him closely concerning the cheque. He stated that he had a bank account and that his uncle, Robert E. Taylor, whose name was attached to the cheque, was a well-known resident of North Monaghan, Peterborough County. A few days later the cheque was returned from Peterborough with the information that Montgomery had no account there.

The merchant, learning that Montgomery had boarded at a hotel, lost no time in interviewing the proprietor concerning his whereabouts or movements. He was informed by the hotelman that he, too, was anxious to locate the cheque artist as a bogus cheque had been given by Montgomery on Friday last, when he was paying his board. It amounted to $34, and was made out on the Dominion Bank, the name of Thos. E. Young being signed thereto. This cheque, of course, was returned.

The merchant lost no time in placing the facts before Chief Short. A search of Montgomery's room at the hotel resulted in the finding of a couple of letters which the young man had received from his mother in Peterborough and sister in Southampton. It would appear from the sister's letter that Montgomery was thinking of going to Owen Sound but she wished him to go to Southampton. Two pictures of Montgomery were also secured. Chief Short notified Chief Thompson of Peterborough, and the authorities at Southampton and Owen Sound.

Montgomery, who received his wages from the Grand Trunk the day the cheques were issued, is described as a young man, aged 24 years, height 5 feet 6 inches; weight, 125 lbs., clean shaven, fair complexion.

HELEN SAXE, with the latest New York comedy success, "Nothing But the truth," at "The Grand" to-morrow for two performances.

This is a farce of the riotous laughter kind. In it the boys wagers that without changing his mode of life he can utter nothing but the truth for a certain period. He proceeds to do so and succeeds thereby in disrupting the domestic relations of his partner, brings about his ears the avowal of his fiancee that she will break their engagement, sets a scandal afloat that upsets Wall street, tarnishes a number of spotless reputations and succeeds in involving those with whom he comes in contact, in a seemingly hopeless tangle of complications. It is the making and unmaking of these that form a story of laughter in gales and shrieks. It is the telling of this story that has made "Nothing But the Truth" the synonym of mirth.

HALIFAX ORPHANS FEW AND WILL BE CARED FOR AT HOME

Ex-Mayor Duffus has received the following letter from the chairman of the Halifax Children's Committee:

Halifax, N. S., Jan. 22, 1918.

Dear Sir,—We have had before us for some time your very kind offer to provide a home for an orphan, but owing to the extraordinary conditions prevailing here, it has been impossible to give you a definite or satisfactory reply.

We are now in a position to say that the number of children for adoption is quite small, and as there are a very large number of applications from the people of Nova Scotia, the Committee has decided that no children will be sent out of the Province. In almost every case reputable relatives have claimed the orphan children. In the case of half-orphans every effort is made to keep the family together.

On behalf of the Committee, and for the citizens of Halifax, I thank you for your offer. I believe that under the circumstances you will rejoice with me that we are unable to accept it.

BEER IMPORTS ARE ASKED FOR BY LABOUR MEN

Would Except the Light Brews From Prohibition Regulation.

OTTAWA, Jan. 25.—It has leaked out at Ottawa that the labour men, on the occasion of their recent conference with the Government on the labour situation, seized the opportunity to recommend that the Government modify its prohibition regulations so as to permit the legal importation from one Province to another of light beer. The recommendation was included in the memorandum that the labour men laid before the Government as a result of their recent conference with the War Cabinet. The labour men met the Cabinet first, and then held their own conference, when they drafted their views on various labour questions in the form of a series of resolutions. One of these resolutions dealt with the prohibition question, and asked that the present order-in-council be modified.

Another Conference.

The labour men are returning to Ottawa on January 29 for another conference, and it is presumed that this proposal will then be dealt with. However, there are no evidences that the Government will consider modifying its prohibition war measure.

The labour men placed themselves on record as opposed to Oriental labour, and the conscription of labour. They also were opposed to the use of alien labour. They took the ground that an alien should be either interned or treated as any other citizen of Canada. If he was interned he could be put at work clearing and cultivating Government land. Otherwise he should not be forced to labour at set wages.

The two concrete suggestions of the labour men were the establishment of Government labour bureaus and the creation of committees dealing with problems on which labour were interested upon which labour men would be officially represented. They suggested a shipping board to deal with the whole problem of shipping upon which labour would have representatives.

BADLY HIT.

The Irish Guards were holding a strong position, and flying bullets were the order of the day. The Germans endeavoured to break through, and after a particularly brisk volley, Private Flynn was heard to shout:

"Murder on wars! I'm done now altogether!"

"Why, where have you been hit?" shouted the Captain.

"Not entoirely hit, sir," replied Flynn, "but I've been waiting these ten minutes for a smoke from Sullivan's pipe, and, by the powers, they've just shot it from his mouth."

"THERE WAS A LITTLE GIRL"

Charming Juvenile Operetta to be Produced by Children of All Saints' Sunday School

The juvenile operetta to be produced in All Saints' Parish Hall on January 30th and 31st is based on the old nursery jingle:

"There was a little girl, and she had a little curl,
And it hung in the middle of her forehead,
When she was good she was very, very good,
But when she was bad she was horrid."

The operetta has 23 musical numbers and considerable libretta. The music and text is by Paul Bliss, with supplementary numbers by Lionel Monkton and W. H. Barry. In addition to the operetta there will be some of our best local talent in music and song. The whole should provide a good evening's entertainment, the proceeds being in aid of All Saints' Sunday school, which is one of the largest in the city in point of numbers. The following is the cast:

HOW FRANCE TRAINS HER STAFF OFFICERS

FRENCH FRONT.— A few precise details as to the organization of an Army Staff—that branch of the military body known as "the brains of the army"—show that great care and minute control are necessary in the selection of officers who have in their hands the direction of operations and consequently the lives of the thousands of men engaged in modern battles.

In the French Army, when an augmentation of the number of staff officers was found necessary, a selection was made among the officers of the reserve and those of the regular regimental officers without staff experience. The first category was found to comprise many officers who, although full of energy and martial spirit, lacked in a smaller or larger degree the experience of handling troops; while the second category was unaccustomed to the methodical study of documents. It was therefore decided to form a staff school through which all these candidates for staff work had to pass before undertaking their important duties.

The aspirants first make a study of the various branches of the army—artillery, cavalry, infantry, engineers, and aviation—and with the aid and guidance of experienced officers belonging to each of these arms learn to foresee and provide for the needs of the different units. The next step is a course in the organization of the command of a staff and the working of the various services connected with it. This is followed by study of the preparatory work of a military operation and the mechanism of issuing orders, as well as the employment of troops and the work of a staff during a battle, all of which is explained by experienced staff officers.

A period of about ten weeks is usually sufficient to give a thorough foundation to the aspirants, who are then divided into two groups, the first intended to become divisional staff officers and the second to go to brigade staffs.

Those chosen for divisional work proceed to a course of practical training, the opening stage of which is a period of eight days passed in some other branch of the service from that out of which they have been selected. The second stage is a period of flying lasting eight days. The next step is a period of three weeks in the staff office of an army comprising several army corps, after which they go into the staff office of an army corps for a term lasting a week.

On the completion of this practical work the officers return to the staff school for a month to have the final touch given to their instruction before they are appointed to a divisional staff in the field, the entire training having lasted five months. It is only by the closest application to study that an officer can succeed in mastering staff work in this brief period, even although he has already gone through the ordinary military training of an officer.

Those who are intended for brigade staffs work through the same steps of the preliminary theoretical course, but as their training is intended to fit them to serve with smaller units only, they do not pursue so long a practical course, which in their case comprises a week with a branch of the service other than that to which they originally belonged, a week of aviation and two weeks in a divisional staff.

The work of a staff dealing with operations is divided into five heads, as follows: The study and preparation of the elements necessary to reach a decision concerning an operation; the decision itself; the notification of this decision to the units which are to carry it out; the execution of the plan; the control of the execution. The decision is the task of the Commander in Chief of the troops engaged, while its execution lies in the hands of the troops themselves, thus leaving the three other heads to be worked out by the officers of the staff.

To do this work an army staff is divided into four bureaus. The first has the task of keeping up to date information concerning the effectives at the disposal of the General. The second records all information obtained about the enemy. The third deals with the operations and the movements and instruction of the troops. The fourth is concerned with the food supply, transport, and communications. A further section is responsible for the transmission of orders.

(Canadian Press Despatch.)

TOKIO, Tuesday—Viscount Motono, the Japanese Foreign Minister, in his speech to-night to both Houses of Parliament, announced that the members of the Japanese Mission recently sent to America, had, after a frank exchange of views, established a full mutual accord between Japan and the United States, in regard to military co-operation in the war.

WASHINGTON, Januarly 25.—Based on the short cabled outlines of the speeches of German and Austrian governments to their respective parliaments, the opinion is expressed by the officials here that no substantial advance towards the final peace sought by all belligerents has resulted from these declarations. Although the expressions of Count Czernin, the Austrian Foreign Minister, appear to be more conciliatory in tone than the previous utterances from that quarter.

Confidence In Both Camps Over To-night's Big Junior Battle

Both Teams Are at Full Strength and Struggle at Brock St. Rink Should Be a Memorable One—Record Junior Crowd is Expected To-night

THE LINE-UP.

Referee—S. Burgoyne, Toronto.

Above are the prospective line-ups for to-night's big junior battle at Brock Street Rink, which will decide the championship of this district of the Junior O.H.A. It promises to be a tidy little argument of the calibre that keeps the fans on their toes from start to finish, and by the talk around town this week there will be a grand old crowd on hand to root for the Petes.

Don't make any mistake about it—the Lindsay aggregation are not counting themselves beaten. They have taken no chances this week, and because three or four of the players figure in City League games, the League fixtures have been postponed in order to save the Midgets for to-night's battle. They will be right on edge, and the Peterborough youngsters will have to watch their step all the way through.

Both teams are in fine shape, and with a lightning fast sheet of ice ready, there is every reason to expect a memorable battle. If the Petes get their stride they should win handily; if they don't, it will be anybody's battle.

The game will start at 8.15 o'clock sharp.

BELLEVILLE HANDED OSHAWA A BEATING

Oshawa — Goal, Childs; defence, Bowen and Hambly; centre, Rowden; left wing, Blanchard; right wing, Roenick. Substitute—Jacques.

Referee—R. Hewitson, Toronto.

BASKETBALL

The public are cordially invited to attend the basketball games to be held in the Y.M.C.A. on Saturday night, at 8 o'clock. The first game will be between two teams of young ladies from the P. C. I., and the championship of the Collegiate will be decided.

At 9 o'clock the second game in the O.A.B.A. series will be played between the Collegiate and the Y.M.C.A. teams. In the last game the Collegiate boys won by the narrow margin of one goal. Both sides are confident of winning, so take a tip from one on the inside and come and see the best basketball match of the season.

SEVEN DAYS' LEAVE

With its vivid atmosphere of war, its German spies posing as Belgian refugees, and its dramatic climaxes, "Seven Days' Leave" paid a return visit to the Grand last night, and delighted a large audience. The melo-drama was seen here earlier in the season, and has gained in smoothness and effect since that time although there have been no changes in the personnel of the cast.

Briefly, "Seven Days' Leave" deals with the adventure of Major Terence Fielding, Royal Horse Artillery, on leave from the Front. In a pair of alleged Belgian refugees he recognises two dangerous German spies, whom he succeeds in rounding up, although in doing so he is temporarily estranged from his fiancee, Lady Mary.

The big scene is in the third act, when the latter swims out and gives the signal that brings a German submarine to the surface and to destruction from the guns of two British destroyers. The play abounds with patriotic speeches of the kind that give the audience plenty of opportunities to enthuse, such as "What a German woman can dare, a British woman can do."

W. L. Meehan gave a splendid interpretation of the part of Major Fielding, and Miss Grace Hoyce was delightful as Lady Mary.

Exemptions Are To Be Reviewed

or upon the decision of a Tribunal varying or withdrawing a certificate of exemption, the exempted man, on notice, shall forthwith deliver to the Registrar or Tribunal his exemption certificate. Penalty in default: Fine not exceeding $100, or imprisonment not exceeding six months.

In the order in Council amending the regulations it is stated that review of exemption is useful to ensure the effective application of the labour of the exempted persons in their occupations, agricultural and otherwise, their engagement in which forms the ground for their exemption from military service.

Food Troubles In England Irritate The Poorer Classes

LONDON, Jan. 18.—Increasing attention is being given by the newspapers to food troubles and popular impatience with what is regarded widely as avoidable privations. The Times to-day prominently calls attention to the "persistence of the unequal distribution of food and its offspring, the queue system," which, it says, is beginning to tell on the tempers of numbers of persons.

It refers to numerous protests and to the demands for rationing which are finding an outlet in some instances in outbreaks of disorderliness. It writes sympathetically of people standing in long lines in the bitter weather prevalent in parts of England, including London, and says it would be folly to ignore the obvious symptoms of unrest.

Numerous paragraphs appear in the newspapers recording demonstrations unsatisfatcory distribution, queue sufferings, shortages, precautions for hoarding and allegations of profiteering.

Critical Time Coming.

The labour correspondent of the Times says it is evident that a situation is imminent which will tax the food department to the uttermost. He says there is no occasion for alarm, but a need of complete frankness and prompt action. The writer restates the view of the workers that not only are the wealthy people able to escape queue troubles by the power of their purses, but they are getting all the supplies they require, while the poor stand for hours exposed to the weather, and often often get nothing.

The workers also are convinced that an artificial scarcity has been created by the farmers, dealers and speculators. The unrest, the writer continues, will be allayed only when the food controller convinces the average working man that curtailment is unavoidable.

1,000 P. C. Profit on Fish.

An instance of speculation, which is in no wise isolated, was given at Newport yesterday when Captain Williams, the National Service representative there, declared that he had evidence that a speculator bought a large catch of fish from south coast fishermen at a ridiculously low price and sold it at a profit of more than 1,000 per cent. As a result, he said, the public was compelled to pay more than forty shillings for what had cost three shillings.

In view of the growing irritation the speech which Lord Rhondda, the food controller, is expected to make in London to-day is awaited with the greatest interest. It is understood the speech will cover the general food situation and that important statements will be made by the controller.

A Strong Protest.

On January 28 a hundred thousand workers in the Manchester engineering shops will cease work for a day with the purpose of protesting against the unequal distribution of food, and demanding a general rationing order. The engineers are supported by the Manchester and Salford Labour Council, and simultaneously in Salford, Altrincham, Eccles and Stretford. Leaders of the engineers cite instances of the men having to start work in the morning without food, owing to the inability of their wives to obtain it the preceding day. The feeling is insistent that an immediate compulsory rationing system is necessary, applicable alike to rich and poor.

ROBINSON CRUSOE

REPLIES TO STATEMENTS

(Special to The Toronto Star and The Peterborough Examiner.)

MONTREAL, Jan. 25.—The Right Hon. Sir Frederick E. Smith, British Attorney-General, speaking at the Canadian Club today, made answer to the statement of Colonel Repington, former military critic of the Times, and now with the Morning Post. With reference to political interference with the higher military commands he said: "Colonel Repington makes the criticism that the politicians or Government had interfered with the leaders of the army. I have only been a member of the Government for a little more than two and a half years, but I make this statement in language which I deliberately select and with full knowledge. During these two and a half years, the heads of the army have enjoyed the confidence of the Government completely, and they have been given in my deliberate judgment in all military matters a freer hand than soldiers have ever been given by a government in any war which our country has ever carried on. They have been completely masters alike of the strategy and of the tactics of the war which has been carried on and during that period at least, I say that no civilian has interfered, nor so far as I know has attempted to interfere with the operations of the soldiers."

Would Reclaim Old Tins At Incinerator

Ald. Edgar proposed to the Property committee last night that some effort should be made to utilize the old tins that are piling up at the incinerator. He stated that solder could be melted from them if a practical plan of heating could be devised. The committee will give the problem further thought.

FRENCH SMASHED APPALLING NUMBER OF GERMAN GUNS

STAGGERING FIGURES ARE SUBMITTED BY VON LUDENDORFF.

FRENCH FRONT, Dec. 14 (by mail).—General Ludendorff, regarded by the Entente Allies as the master mind of the German army, pays an unintentional compliment to the accuracy of French artillery men in a memorandum issued to the troops on 4th October, which has just been made available.

In this document, he admits that the French gunners, by their counter battery fire, destroyed in one German army alone in the course of a month 83 German field guns and 72 heavy cannon, while they seriously damaged and put out of action also 282 field guns and 213 heavy cannon, as well as 91 field guns and 59 heavy cannon slightly injured, but capable of being repaired and used again in a short time.

To these imposing figures of artillery losses caused by the French gunners, the same German army in the same period of time had the mortification of adding an almost equally large number of losses brought about by the wearing out or bursting of guns. In this way, 73 field guns and 21 heavy cannon were destroyed; 64 field guns and 129 heavy guns seriously damaged; and 177 field guns and 91 heavy guns slightly disabled.

The memorandum was issued to the German army by General Ludendorff because his artillery officers had argued repeatedly in favour of making counter-battery work secondary to attacks on infantry and communications. They asserted the French artillery directed their guns more generally against the German infantry than against the artillery batteries.

The figures collected by the German general demonstrate the falsity of this argument, and show the French determination to prevent the German guns as far as possible being used on the French infantry lines.

General Ludendorff, in concluding his memorandum, points out that by the counter-battery work not only is the enemy's artillery destroyed or put out of action, but the opponent is forced to a considerable extent to turn his attention away from the doings of the enemy's infantry, which is thus able to manoeuvre with greater ease.

SAYS GERMAN HATE HYMNS HAVE ENDED

LONDON, Jan. 22.—The Times publishes a long report, attributed to a neutral who has made an extended stay in Germany, describing internal conditions. It does not differ to an important extent from similar reports in the past. The writer reiterates that the effects of the food shortage are severe, especially among the children, who everywhere show signs of underfeeding.

It is apparent that tuberculosis is working havoc, especially among the young, while contagious dysentry, which was a serious scourge in the summer, has not ceased with the arrival of winter. It is attributable to bad food. The decline in the birth rate this observer continues, is causing great anxiety, especially in view of the loss of life in the war and the spread of disease.

The shortage of coal in Berlin is another source of trouble. After enumerating the difficulties the correspondent writes:

"Nothing but the iron grip of Prussian militarism restrains the nation from making more pronounced advances to its adversaries than any which have yet been made. The Germans are longing for peace, but they want peace with victory. They no longer abuse their enemies, as in the early days of the war. Doubtless the shortage of supplies has much to do with the change of mental attitude. Frondness of the flesh has given way before the discipline of fasting. This accounts for very much in recent developments of German policy."

Peterboro' Pays For Good Roads Throughout The Province But Refuses To Accept Gov't Scheme

The Provincial Government has already paid $2,800,000 to the counties that have adopted the Good Roads system. Peterborough's share would have been $50,782 estimated on a basis of mileage and population, if this county had taken advantage of the Government's Good Roads policy. Last year alone this county would have received $5,900. These were figures quoted by Mr. G. L. Squire, of the Provincial Highways Department in a brief address to the Council yesterday.

"Peterborough farmers and citizens are contributing to the building and maintenance of good roads elsewhere. They should be participating in this expenditure now. The Government won't worry whether Peterborough County comes into this scheme or not. It feels that you ought to be in with the rest of the province. Only four counties have not adopted the Good Roads policy, and I wouldn't be surprised if three of them decide to come in this year. But we feel that Peterborough will act in its own good time."

Mr. Squire stated that the highways have to be maintained whether the war continues or not. Thirty-four counties have taken up the Good Roads policy, are getting good results, and are not finding it burdensome. If the scheme is good for all these counties, it must be equally beneficial to Peterborough, Mr. Squire argued.

An Example of the Operation.

If this county were to levy 1-1-2 mills for Good Roads, it would provide $13,500. The Government would grant $9,000 and the city would contribute $15,000, a total of about $40,000. Mr. Squire stated that this sum would be sufficient to build at least eight miles of road each year. The average cost of macadam roads was less than $5,000 a mile. The Government did not specify the standard of road to be built, but required only that it should support the traffic of this district. Some roads have been built at $1,000 a mile. Mr. Squire believed that Peterborough could build from 10 to 15 miles of good roads yearly. The cost would be shared by the county, city, and Government in proportions that would not prove onerous to either municipality, and gradually a net work of modern roads would be completed throughout the county, connecting with inter-county and provincial highways.

Mr. Squire had to confine his address to an inadequate fifteen minutes. The Council had to catch the noon train for Ottawa, and there was no time for detailed explanation to the new members nor for a discussion of the features of the Government's scheme.

METAPHOR BECOMES A REALITY.

New Yorkers who are approaching the status of old, if not oldest, inhabitants remember the days when one of the most popular ditties sung by Tony Pastor, down on Fourteenth Street, depended for favour, at least in part, on what then seemed to be its exaggerated appreciation of a commodity now for good reason counted among the objects of heart's desire by us all. The verses began—or perhaps it is that the chorus ran—something like this:

Down in a coal mine, underneath the ground,
Digging duty diamonds all the season round.

In those times of low prices—a very Golden Age, in comparison with present-day prices, though of course its joys were not realized then—there was more than a pleasing alliteration to the phrase "digging dusky diamonds". It was distinctly amusing, so absurd was it to call coal by the name of the most precious jewels.

This winter we would take that almost as a plain statement of fact—of sad fact, too, for though everybody with money can now get diamonds, hardly anybody is rich enough to get coal, and those who sit in the seats of the mighty and must be obeyed are telling a good many of us that for a while, at least, we can't have any at all at any price.—New York Times.

A Dog Outwitted the Germans.

If you place the tip of your finger on a map of the world, and run it along the Equator, writes an Australian officer, in the Wide World, you will discover the island of Naura. This pinpoint of an island is perhaps the richest spot on earth, being composed almost entirely of phosphate, of which it is said there is nine hundred and fifty million dollars' worth actually in sight. Prior to the war the Germans had erected an immense high-power wireless station on this island, the lofty mast of which is visible a couple of hours before one sights the land from a steamer.

Very soon after the struggle commenced the British authorities "rushed" the place in order to silence the voice of the great station. On the near approach of our warships the Huns in charge tried to render the station useless to us by hiding all the essential parts in a big cave, the existence of which was unknown to anyone but themselves.

When the station had been thoroughly dismantled, and all parts stowed away in their subterranean hiding-place, the mouth of the cave was closed and hidden with rubbish.

Alas for the Germans! An old black dog was an interested onlooker during certain phases of the concealment, and the old saying that "for want of a nail a shoe was lost" might be re-written to read "for want of a bullet a radio-plant was found." When our men seized the place, they found that the working parts of the precious "wireless were missing, and started a careful search for them; the dog, like the Vicar of Bray, joined the side of the victorious party, and led our boys to the concealed mouth of the cave, where she commenced to dig vigorously. There were cute fellows looking on, and the excited animal was soon assisted by a band of helpers who were missing nothing. They soon made the earth and rocks fly, uncovered the cave—big enough to hold a platoon—and, to their huge delight, located the missing parts. As a result, in a few hours more we were in communication with British warships, and the Pacific knew the Hun no more.

HOME HEALTH CLUB

By DR. DAVID H. REEDER

SELF-HELP: In a recent article in these columns I called your attention to the dangers of ignorance regarding self-help in the treatment of various ailments, and I pointed out the fact that while fully 20 per cent. of the practicing physicians of this country have volunteered for war service, there is still a great cry for more doctors, more surgeons and more nurses.

Now comes the famous Dr. Bayard Holmes, a distinguished surgeon and alienist, and in a deeply thoughtful way, points out the seriousness of the situation in an article of his published in the North American Journal of Homeopathy, and taken from the ocial bulletin of the Chicago Medical Society, after showing why the attendance at Medical Colleges has been cut down, even before the war started, at the rate of about 1,500 per annum, because of the trust-like tactics of Medical Societies and Colleges, he goes on to say:

"Thus in the United States, with a total of 100,000,000 and 130,000 practicing physicians and an annual increment of less than 4,000 new licentiates, we are called upon by the draft to give up all of our medical students, to the number of 15,000, and at the same time to lose all of the fit young men between twenty-one and thirty-one from whom new students should be recruited.

"It is possible that some of the losses in our medical students and the young medical men who are going across the seas can be made up from those rejected as lame, halt, or blind, or as alien enemies of our schools admit on academic qualifications only. But we believe that it would be a serious handicap to the medical profession of the future if the sources of its recruits were limited to those unfit for military service, now matriculated or preparing the study of medicine in college or scientific school.

It is inevitable that a large number of theoretically prospective medical students will be diverted to the more inspiring fields of aviation, engineering and other activities of war. The enrollment of medical schols is likely to fall off, or be recruited from the unfit, from alien enemies, and possibly from "slackers" (if medic l students become exempt).

"We ought to cut off, in the second place, all red tape, all the academic fol-derol and the titled and hooded frumpery which have fastened themselves on our medical faculties and our state examining bodies." Medical students should be accepted before their intelectual and moral enthusiasm has been fagged out by agnostic collegiate disciplinarism. Until the end of the war a high school education, with the urge that goes with it to do, is a better equipment for a medical student than the bachelor's or doctor's degree, with the intellectual fag with which it is ordinarily sealed."

Now that things are facts, and if the war continues for several years the old-fashioned neighbourhood midwife will be an absolute necessity, while the home apothicary shop will again make its appearance.

The Home Health Club, bok rol. 5, entitled "Medicinal Plants of America," and the instructions for their use in treating the milder ailments, should be in every home, and every neighbourhood should have a local Home Health Club where these articles should be read and discussed, and the simple method of home treatment described in the other club books should be taught, so that it may not be necessary to call the overworked doctor for the various ailments that you can as well treat yourself.

I would recommend all of you to study and apply the suggestions given in my last article for the cure of appendicitis and for sore throat.

CLUB NOTES.

Dear Doctor: Would be pleased to have you advise me on whooping cough. I have lost the article on same. My boy contracted it in school right before Christmas. Thought it was only a cold until a couple of days ago when he began to whoop. I have a little baby and therefore want your help especially as it is so hard for the little ones to have it. A lot of the neighbours' children have contracted it, and would all be glad for your advice in the matter, both for its cure and prevention of spreading.

J. B.

(Answer).—The method of cure which I have given several times in my articles is to procure a reasonable quantity of garlic cloves or roots, remove the skins, the outer dry skin, and then chop the cloves up with a meat chopepr. Make a thick poultice of the chopped garlic and bind it on to the motoms of the feet at night when you put the child to bed. It is then best to draw a light stocking on over all so that the cloves will not the cloves will not get out and into the bed during the night. In every report that I have had from various parts of the country, this treatment has proved to be perfectly satisfactory and very effective. You must be especially careful with your baby as it frequently goes very hard with little ones, and if you were financially able to do so, I would advise you by all means to take the baby and go South. Get near to the salt water, possibly in Florida on the Gulf Coast, but if you use the garlic every night you probably will be able to avoid serious danger for the baby.

After having applied the garlic to the boy's feet several times you will notice that the skin will peel off, and his feet will be more or less tender. It will be wise not to make any remarks about this because that will increase the difficulty if the boy happens to notice it. Otherwise he may not pay any attention to it. You will also notice that after you have put these poultices on for two or three nights the odour of garlic will come from the boy's breath and for two or three months after he gets over the whooping cough you will notice the odour of garlic from his body. The remedy is quite powerful and very effective, and I trust that you and your neighbours may all be greatly benefitted by it. The only prevention is isolation—the disease is spread by contact.

I am going to suggest, by the way, that the expenses of the Home Health Club are kept up through the sale of its books, and I would appreciate very much an order from you and your neighbours for a club membership and at least some of the books.

The Fuel Question

In discussing the general need of fuel conservation in the boiler rooms, Van. H. Manning, Director of the Bureau of Mines, Department of the Interior, has issued the following statement:

There is one phase of the present coal situation which may put an entirely different light on the supposed increased production of coal of the present year. In round numbers, there was produced 600,000,000 tons of fuel last year. Statement has been made that 50,000,000 more tons will be mined this year. The preparation of this increased quantity of coal has not been as good as in times past.

COMPLAINTS OF ASH.

Analsis of samples show in many cases a greatly increased quantity of ash. Repeated cases are brought to the attention of the Bureau of Mines where coal which would run from 6 to 8 per cent. ash in normal times is running from 1 to 18 per cent. of ash in these abnormal times. Complaint about the preparation of coal is very general and it is not at all improbable that five per cent. more ash is included in this year's coal than in previous years. If such a figure is true, it means that 32,500,000 tons of the estimated output of 650,000,000 tons is nothing but increased ash. If we can imagine over 600,000 carloads of ash being added to the present burden of transportation, the evident effect on car supply and transportation troubles would be seen.

DECREASE IN EFFICIENCY.

If this were the end of the matter, it would not be so bad, but there is another factor well known to engineers which is apt to be overlooked by the non-technical user. The extensive experiments carried on by the Government at the St. Louis Exposition showed that with the coals used there was a decrease of about 1 1-2 per cent. in efficiency for each 1 per cent. addition to the ash content of the coal. The inclusion of five per cent. more ash in the fuel, therefore means a reduction in efficiency of the remaining good coal of about 7 1-2 per cent., which, added to the 5 per cent. useless ash, makes a total reduction in effectiveness of 12 1-2 per cent.

According to this point of view, we have then, instead of an increased production as compared with last year an actual decrease of effective coal of about 30,000,000 tons.—U. S. Official Bulletin.

AMERICA LEADS IN DYES.

Product is as Good as Germany's — $12,500,000 Exported Last Year.

WASHINGTON, Jan. 22.—The United States is the only country that has succeeded in establishing a successful dyestuff industry since the war began, and it has been found that American dyes are as good as the German product, according to the Bureau of Foreign and Domestic Commerce.

Formerly importing annually as much as $10,000,000 worth of aniline dyes alone, this country exported during ten months of last year $12,500,000 worth of dyes to twenty-one foreign countries, and exports are growing rapidly. The largest purchaser last year was Great Britain, which used more than $8,000,000 worth of dye in ten months.

Great Britain is now congratulating herself on the recent capture of the recipes of 257 German dyes. It is asserted that these were obtained with great danger and difficulty by British textile firms assisted by the British Foreign Office. Professor Philip B. American Embassy in London, who cabled the news to the United States Bureau of Foreign and Domestic Commerce, says it is reported that all the recipes have been tested in Switzerland by F. M. Rowe, of the Manchester School of Technology, and certified by a British Consular officer. The recipes will be given to the British Government, which will establish a dye industry.

BIG EATERS GET KIDNEY TROUBLE

Take Salts at First Sign of Bladder Irritation or Backache

The American men and women must guard constantly against Kidney trouble, because we eat too much and all our food is rich. Our blood is filled with uric acid which the kidneys strive to filter out, they weaken from overwork, become sluggish; the eliminative tissues clog and the result is kidney trouble, bladder weakness and a general decline in health.

When your kidneys feel like lumps of lead; your back hurts or the urine is cloudy, full of sediment or you are obliged to seek relief two or three times during the night; if you suffer with sick headache or dizzy, nervous spells, acid stomach, or you have rheumatism when the weather is bad, get from your pharmacist about four ounces of Jad Salts; take a tablespoonful in a glass of water before breakfast for a few days and your kidneys will then act fine. This famous salts is made from the acid of grapes and lemon jtice, combined with lithia, and has been used for generations to flush and stimulate clogged kidneys; to neutralize the acids in the urine so it no longer is a source of irritation, thus ending bladder disorders.

Jad Salts is inexpensive; cannot injure, makes a delightful effervescent lithia-water beverage, and belongs in every home, because nobob- can make a mistake by having a good kidney flushing any time.

"THE CLUE IN THE AIR"

A DETECTIVE STORY—Isabel Ostrander

"Moreover, I got no paper for well I knew I'd have no chance to read it now, with you haverin' around, and I cut myself shaving because Brian himself is sick, and I'll not have that German feller there leaning over me with a razor and me with my two arms tied down under a towel—not after the views he's heard me express about neutrality! And is that the way the celebrated Mr. Terhune works?"

"It is. Wait till you hear!"

He described his own experience of the morning and Dennis listened gravely, is skepticism shaken.

"Did he tell you that you've the scar of Nick the Wop's knife on your back or that you voted Republican once, being drunk?" he asked with interest.

"He did not, but I've no doubt he would if I'd given him time," responded McCarty solemnly. "He took me to the Glamorgan after, in a scooting devil of a car that'd give dust to your fire chief's, and what he did there was fair amazing."

His description of Wade Terhune's accusation of Mrs. Doremus and her collapse left Dennis round-eyed, and short of breath.

"She admitted it!" he gasped. "When she came to, she broke down and confessed?"

"Not so that you could notice it," McCarty replied grimly. "The girl, Mary, brought her around with smelling salts, and she was thundering mad at first, then tried her long suit, hysterics. She said that whether George Allen had ever been her husband or not was no affair of Mr. Terhune's; that the people in the house who said that he'd called there before were mistaken; that he had left at ten o'clock, and that she could prove it by Mary.

"Then she began laughing and crying and declared she didn't know what she'd said, and wasn't responsible; everybody had confused her so with questions and trying to trap her, when she knew nothing whatever about the murder, that it was a wonder she didn't lose her mind. That was when Mary showed her claws.

"'It doesn't matter what you said, Mrs. Doremus,' she butted in, respectful, and if she were soothing a child, but with a kind of meanin' tone as though she might almost be coaching her. 'You're not under oath, and they can't make you swear unless they bring some sort of a charge against you, and you know that's impossible.'

"The girl shut up quick when Terhune told her, but what she'd said got to Mrs. Doremus all right, and from that minute on she was just acting, going off into worse hysterics if you so much as looked at her, let alone asked a question. Terhune saw there was no more to be got out of her then, and he let her go."

"Go!" repeated Dennis, unable to keep silent longer. "When he had her in the hollow of his hand! What did he do that for?"

"Oh, she'll not go far! She will have been shadowed from the time she sets foot out of the house, and the girl, too. Besides, she was sticking to the story that the man Allan left at ten, and nothing would shake her. If you want to know my opinion I don't think that Terhune wants to break her down in that; I think he purposely told her what he knew, and let her go to see what move she would make next, and maybe trace this man through her if she tried to communicate with him. It's the girl, Mary, that's got me going."

"How I'd say she was just one of them pert, impudent things that has been over here long enough to think she is as good as the next one, and if"—Dennis chose his words with unusual care—"if Mrs. Doremus is the kind of a lady I am thinking, the girl could hardly be expected to keep her place."

McCarty shook his head.

"There's more than that back of it. She had a look like she was laughing in her sleeve at the two of us, and a kind of a way with her as if she knew just what she was doing, because she had been told how to act. If you ask me, I think she is following instructions from somebody higher up—the man who was there that night."

"How do you suppose Mr. Terhune found out all that about the Doremus woman, if it's true, to say nothing of the rest of it?"

"Sure, he told me. He's trying to teach me his way of working, he says, but I am too old a dog to be learning new tricks. After his first talk with her yesterday he looked up her record and found that she'd come on from the west about five years ago, claiming to be a widow, and broke into some sort of society. She married this man, Doremus, and a matter of two years ago he divorced her, a put-up job, according to her. Terhune wired to where she said she came from, traced back, and got the dope that her maiden name was Thompson, and she'd married and divorced this George Allen long before ever she hit New York."

"She must want bygones to be bygones to go giving him a fine dinner the other night," observed Dennis. "From what you said of her I should think she'd be the kind to hold it against you to her dying day, if you so much as trod on her skirt."

McCarty eyed him significantly.

"Do you think it a man once got foot-loose from a woman like that he would be after coming around again?" he demanded. "It is my belief that when Terhune faced her all of a sudden and asked her the name of the man who had been there, and her not thinking till that minute it was known she'd not been alone; that she answered with the first name which came in her head so as not to give away the truth.

"The elevator boys and the superintendent gave her the lie about his not having been there before, but they'd never heard his name, because he wasn't announced over the 'phone, and he's the only visitor of hers that wasn't. She put it off on Allen because he's away out west, or dead, maybe, and she had no idea her own record would be traced. She is not clever, that Mrs. Doremus, but she's as stubborn as a mule, and she has good reasons, whatever they are, for keeping the real man out of it. Unless she's fool enough to try to get in touch with him and so give Terhune a hint, he'll have to go after the other end of the string and locate Allen."

"Much good it'll do him if Allen's not the man." Dennis paused in refilling his pipe. "Was that just a wild guess of his that the fellow was there after the girl was killed, or did he know? It's a fine joke on the inspector, and you, too, if he was there under your noses and you never spotted him!"

McCarty's jaw set.

"'Twas not my investigation, I'll be reminding you, Denny."

"But you smelled the smoke of his cigar."

"He might have gone before ten, for all that would matter. A cigar with the body to it that one had would leave the smell of it for hours with all those flimsy draperies around—especially as the windows were closed. Nobody saw him go out that night, and Terhune, with his spy glass and his little measuring stick, found out something mighty curious."

"When he was snooping in the garbage?" A trace of skepticism had returned to Dennis's voice.

"No. I've told you that the drawing room in Mrs. Doremus's apartment is on the corner, with the library opening out of it on the side street, but next the drawing room on the avenue side is the dining room. It is a kind of an old-fashioned house, the Glamorgan, with exposed radiators, and in that room there is one in the corner between the window looking out on the avenue, and the folding doors leading to the drawing room.

"Catacornered across it is a great tall cut-glass closet, with just enough space for anyone not too portly to squeeze in, and it was a tight fit, too, for they had torn their dinner coat! Terhune found a bit of fine, black broadcloth hanging to the little valve near the top of the radiator on one side. And more than that.

"The closet in front of it is higher than your head, and glass all around, sides and back. There were marks on it—the print of a man's fingers, and in one or two places of a whole hand where he had pressed against it, pushing his way in and out. It seems that yesterday, after he'd talked to them, Terhune got Mrs. Doremus and Mary and the cook—who'd gone to-day—out of the way, and he went over that apartment inch by inch, until he came on that. He took impressions of those finger prints, and if he ever gets hold of the man who stood there, he'll know him."

"Maybe it was the janitor, moving the glass closet to get at the radiator if it leaked," suggested Dennis hopefully.

"Radiators don't leak in July," McCarty retorted. "Nor do janitors wear fine, black broadcloth coats at work to say nothing of mother-of-pearl vest buttons."

"Mother of what?"

"Pearl. Something like what you got to wear at Molly's wedding, only real. Terhune found one under the glass closet, where the man had rasped it off him squeezing through, the same as he'd torn his coat in the back. He got it coming and going."

"It's funny he wouldn't have hid in a cupboard, where he'd have had room enough," Dennis reflected.

"Afraid, maybe, we'd look there."

"But wouldn't he know he'd be seen behind that thing if it was all glass?"

"Not if you'd cast your eye over it once. It's so full of junk it would dazzle you, with big platters tilted against the back and sides, filling up the space from one shelf to another. Besides the light is low in the dining room, just one centre drop over the table."

"And you're thinking he was there putting it over on you and the inspector?"

"I don't know what to think about that," confessed McCarty frankly. "I have a mind to look up the inspector later. 'Twas him that first suggested getting Terhune on this job, too."

"He's a wonder, all right," Dennis acknowledged. "I didn't think much of his methods when you tried them on me, but you have got to hand it to him. He must be a great man."

"And he's having a great little time with his microscope and foot rule, to say nothing of his psycho—whatever it is reasoning."

Something in McCarty's tone made his friend look up swiftly.

"Well, he found out about the man in the corner, didn't he?"

"He did, and it was good work. I have no doubt that if he goes through every apartment in the house the same way he'll find something in each one that the family are not advertising; things, maybe, just as queer as this. But that don't say that any of them had a hand in murdering the girl."

"To my mind, there's nothing in what he doped out in Mrs. Doremus's apartment to connect her, or the man either, with the death. There's nothing to show they even knew her, let alone a motive; and what would she be doing there in the first place? The funeral is to-morrow and the inquest the day after. Maybe Mrs. Doremus will talk then."

Dennis's sudden access of admiration for the genius of Wade Terhune, and his evident approbation at the ease with which the detective had discovered what the inspector had overlooked, jarred upon McCarty's mood, and rankled in the face of his loyalty to his former superior. But Dennis was disposed to argue.

"I should think it was pretty clear that the two of them had something to do with what had happened, from their actions. Why should Mrs. Doremus take so much trouble to keep him out of it, and lie and get in Dutch about it herself if they was as innocent as she makes out? And look at him! 'Tis not a parlor diversion except for children, to go hiding behind furniture. You're bound to admit that!"

"What if he was a prominent man—married, too, maybe—and couldn't afford to have it known he was calling there, murder or no murder? If he was there when the girl fell past the window, as Mrs. Doremus said she did, he mightn't want to take a chance of trying to walk out through the crowd he must have known would collect, and perhaps being stopped and questioned by the police. The fact that he never gave his name down stairs when he came looks as if he was trying to keep his visits secret."

"Say, Mac!" Dennis twisted abruptly about in his chair. "How did he get out, anyway? After, I mean. Wasn't the house surrounded and watched?"

"It was, and there's been men at both entrances ever since." McCarty's face was a study. "The inspector even had the roofs watched all night, until he made a second search in the morning into every hole and corner of the building from the cellar up. I never thought of that, Denny. I wonder if Terhune did? There's one thing sure. If it was him, I'd keep an eye on the flat above, the one where that playwriter and his wife live. I'd get hold of the girl that went away and ask her a few questions, and I'd find out a little about Marion Rowntree. A line on her friends, and what she had been doing handy."

History of the "Tanks"

Proves the Great Value Of Having Many Advisers

NO one man or one department of the British Government can take credit for "inventing" the "tanks" — they came into being as the result of a long period of study and coordinated effort by many men acting under three separate departments, the War Office, the Admiralty, and the Ministry of Munitions.

In the autumn of 1914, when the belligerents on the western front had settled down to trench warfare, it became obvious that some means of parrying the danger of well-directed and well-protected machine gun fire from the German trenches must be discovered if the British infantry was to carry out assaults with success.

One of the first proposals put forward was for a machine 100 feet long, 46 feet high, and 80 feet wide, weighing some 300 tons, propelled by an 800 horse-power engine, and with driving wheels 40 feet in diameter. Another early suggestion, and the one which led most directly to the "tanks," was made by Colonel Swinton in October, 1914, to build armored cars on a tractor system, an American invention. Experiments with various tractors were made on behalf of the War Office and by a small expert committee of the Admiralty under Winston Churchill, then First Lord. Through the medium of the Committee of Imperial Defence the various efforts for the solution of the problem were coordinated, and certain conditions were laid down which had to be fulfilled by the proposed car.

From among the numerous types of tractor inspected the most satisfactory was found to be a caterpillar with an endless self-laid track, over which internal driving wheels could be propelled by the engines.

In February, 1916, the first "tank" was completed and taken down to a farm near London. Here pits, trenches, and ramparts had been constructed. The tests were so satisfactory that an order was given on the spot for 100 machines. The Ministry of Munitions became responsible for the speediest possible construction of the order. Many improvements were made during this period of construction, and the first delivery was made in July, 1916.

The new machines were of two slightly different types. One was called the male type, and was armed with two Hotchkiss quick-firers and a subsidiary machine-gun armament. These were designed for dealing at close quarters with the concrete emplacements of German machine guns. The other, or female type, was armed only with machine guns and was more suitable for dealing with machine gun personnel and riflemen.

At the end of July, 1916, the "tanks" and their crews had become so proficient that it was possible to hold two exhibition combats over a prepared trench system reproducing a line of German defences.

At the end of August, fifty "tanks" were loaded at night and sent to France. When delivered in France, the "tanks" only travelled at night, and during the day were covered with a huge tarpaulin and strictly guarded.

The first "tanks" were all painted in camouflage style for purposes of concealment, and each "tank" had its own name, like a ship. A whole series of them were named after various drinks, such as Cafe-au-Lait, Chartreuse, Chablis, Cognac, Champagne, Creme-de-Menthe. Another series bore names of Scotch clans—Clan Cameron, Clan Ruthven, Clan Gordon, Clan McTavish.

The "tanks" first went into action in that portion of the Somme offensive which began on September 15. The object was to drive the Germans out of some high ground running east and south of Thiepval. The effect was as exhilarating on the British troops as it was dumbfounding to the Germans. It is recorded that many of the British infantrymen were so overcome with laughter at their ungainly antics that they were scarcely able to keep up with the procession.

There is no doubt that the element of surprise had much to do with the extraordinary success of the "tanks" on their first appearance. But their achievements proved that they had more solid qualities than the gift of surprise. Later in the year "tanks" were sent out to Egypt and were in action at Gaza.

Hated the English.

In their antipathy to England and to everything English, or supposedly English, the Germans have apparently undertaken to eliminate from the spoken and written tongue language of the day all words of known or suspected English origin, and they go to the extent of making themselves ridiculous in this effort to punish perfidious Albion. There comes, for instance, at first hand, this episode reported by Professor F. Sefton Delmer, who was instructor of English in the University of Berlin when the war broke out, and who, from that time until May 23rd of this year, was either a civil or an interned prisoner. Wishing to sting him, at a police station one day a portiertrau, who knew his nationality, rebuked her departing companion for using the word adieu. "Ach was," she called after her, "adieu sagt man nicht mehr. Das ist englisch."

The Beer of Borneo.

Beer as made by the natives of Sarawak, in the north-western region of Borneo, varies in its ingredients according to the different tribes who make it, the most intoxicating being that made by the Bisayahs of Limbang. These people make their beer by boiling rice, adding yeast, crushed wild chili, and a large lump of wood ash. This is all put into a jar till the jar is two-thirds full, and covered over with leaves which are held down with bamboo supports; water is poured on till the jar is full, and the beer is then ready for drinking. The drinking is performed by pushing bamboo tubes down to the bottom of the jar and then sucking up the liquid. So that no one shall have more than his fair proportion at a time, a system of floats is arranged whereby the amount of drink consumed by each man is registered.

Expert Testimony.

The black sheep of the regiment stood before his commanding officer charged with being drunk. He stoutly denied the offence, and there was only one witness, a sergeant, to prove it. Still, the records showed eleven previous convictions for the same offense.

"You are a hardened and habitual offender," said the captain, sternly; "I can't take your denial against the sergeant's word."

The prisoner then turned to the sergeant witness, and asked, "Have you ever been drunk?"

On receiving an emphatic negative, he turned to the captain again, "Sergeant says I was drunk. I says I wasn't. I ask yer, sir, which is like to be right, 'im wot's 'ad no experience of wot being drunk is, or an 'ardened and 'abitual like me?"

Armageddon.

The Manchester Guardian of England indulges in a little mild irony at the expense of the Sunday Observer's unscriptural attitude. "Armageddon," said the latter recently, "has happened. It will happen again, unless," and so on. And the Manchester Guardian replies: "After Armageddon, as defined in the Apocalypse, one seems to remember that a great voice from heaven declared 'It is done.' It is rather pleasant to think of a still greater voice from the Observer office, rising clearly above the final uproar and insisting gently but firmly that, on the contrary, the whole business may have to be done over again."

Remarkable Prophecy.

The capture of Jerusalem has led to the discussion of a remarkable prophecy uttered when the Kaiser made his theatrical entry into the city on a white charger, dressed to look as much like a crusader as possible. It was said then, according to an ancient prophecy, that the liberator of Jerusalem would enter it, not on horseback, but afoot, and would represent Allah and God.

Now that Gen. Allenby has entered Jerusalem afoot, his name with very little straining, combines those of Allah and "Nebby," which means God in the Islamic tongue. The discovery has given the necessary touch of fatalism to his victory to make it more impressive than ever to Eastern minds.

READ THE EXAMINER

"OVER THE TOP."

A Nerve-racking Experience Known to the Soldiers.

"Over the top" is a phrase that is now of household currency, says a writer in The London Mail. It expresses in terse soldier language one of the most nerve-racking experiences it is possible to undergo. But that "over-the-top" feeling is nothing compared with the slow agonies—the prolonged nervous strain—of an expected enemy counter attack.

Before the attack is delivered the imaginative man undergoes moments of acute terror—terror not unlike that of a child cowering in darkness. He can feel the pounding of the enemy's barrage long before it crashes across the parapet. He suffers that sensation of paralysis so familiar in dreams. He stands riveted to the spot till the scorching bayonet, a gray ghost of his brain, is tearing through his flesh. . . . And yet the same man with calm courage will unflinchingly expose himself and open rapid fire when the actual attack begins.

It is a curious point in psychology. I have faced several counter attacks, and my sensations were precisely the same on each occasion. There was first a waiting period of acute tension—of unconquerable nervous impotence and agony—which held me in its grasp, then vanished utterly, it gave place to a quaint sensation of excited curiosity and detachment from the events that were happening.

I recall the evening as if it were yesterday. The details are stereotyped on my brain. The sky was fleecy with white clouds. There was nothing in the sun-baked stretch of the enemy's lines to indicate that he was massing with fixed bayonets, four deep in his front line. But suddenly his guns opened, and shells of all calibres rushed through the air toward us, bursting close at hand and covering us with earth, small stones and sulphurous fumes.

For the next half hour my eyes were glued to my periscope. I shall never forget that half hour of vivid expectancy. I prayed for something to happen that would break the spell. My heart was thudding in my throat . . . . Should I be able to keep my legs firm when they came over? . . . How would it feel when the bayonet was pushed into my body? . . . And, above all, what would happen if I lost the line? . . . What would the men say, and the captain and the colonel and the general? These were the thoughts that coursed through my excited brain.

Then the first wave of the expected counter attack scrambled over the enemy's parapet. A thread snapped in my brain. I rapped out a fire order.

A movement rippled down our line. My men were manning the parapet. I dropped my periscope and stood up on the first step. I felt no sensation of fear; only a vast and consuming curiosity as to whether the Huns would reach our trench.

The first wave advanced fully thirty yards before one of them dropped.

A machine gun crackled its staccato rat-tat-tat-tat . . . rat-tat-tat . . . rat-tat, and several others picked up the crisp chorus. The leading wave still ran toward us. But in their centre a wide gap suddenly yawned. In this gap the ground was strewn with figures; some of them squirmed and wriggled; others lay placid in death. . . . The wave of men still rushed on. A second wave poured over the parapet of the enemy's trench.

Then our own artillery burst forth. It was a stupendous salvo. It rumbled overhead like gigantic engines thundering through the air. In front of us the attackers wavered. The detonation of bombs sounded further down the trench.

I turned my periscope sidewise. Hun bodies were being flung over our parapet. . . . My sergeant appeared. "Cleared 'em out with bombs, sir," he remarked. "Look, sir!" He pointed to our front.

"Cease fire," I ordered, for the attackers had disappeared. What was left of them had retired.

"That's the end, sir!" chuckled my sergeant.

I thrust my hands into my breeches pockets. I did not want him to see they were trembling.

Protecting Plants.

The law in Switzerland protecting rare plants is so strict that to be found in possession of specimens illegitimately collected is a penal offense.

When Stanford University begins its next academic year, October 1, it will have a new printing plant in operation.

Children Had Whooping Cough

Whooping cough, although specially a disease of childhood, is by no means confined to that period, but may occur at any time of life. It is one of the most dangerous diseases of infancy, and yearly causes more deaths than scarlet fever, typhoid or diphtheria, and is more common in female than male children.

Whooping cough starts with sneezing, watering of the eyes, irritation of the throat, feverishness and cough. The coughing attacks occur frequently, but are generally more severe at night.

On the first sign of a "whoop" Dr. Wood's Norway Pine Syrup should be administered, as it helps to clear the bronchial tubes of the collected mucous and phlegm.

Mrs. George Cooper, Bloomfield, Ont., writes: "It is with pleasure I can write and tell you that there never was a better cough medicine made than Dr. Wood's Norway Pine Syrup. Our children had whooping cough last winter, and that is the only thing that seemed to help them. It loosens up the phlegm so that they could raise it easily. I will never be without it."

"Dr. Wood's" is 25c. and 50c. a bottle; put up in a yellow wrapper; three pine trees the trade mark; manufactured by The T. Milburn Co., Limited, Toronto, Ont.

Skin On Fire With Eczema

The Most Torturing of Skin Diseases —Few Doctors Have Satisfactory Treatment to Offer, But This Ointment Cures.

ST. THOMAS, Ont., Jan. 12.—Eczema's itch is torture, the skin seems on fire with the burning, stinging humour; at times it becomes almost unbearable, and in desperation you could tear the skin to pieces. You dare not exercise for fear of aggravating the itching, neither can you sleep, for no sooner does the body become warm than the trouble begins, and instead of restful, refreshing sleep, it is scratch, scratch, scratch all night long. There is scarcely a moment's respite from this maddening malady at any time. Of course you have tried nearly all the washes, salves, lotions and medicated soaps, but, like thousands of others, have been disappointed and disgusted.

Mrs. Alex. Perry, 18 Ross St., St. Thomas, Ont., writes: "I cannot recommend Dr. Chase's Ointment too highly, as it cured me of a very bad case of eczema. For six years I was ashamed to go near my door when anybody called, my face was so affected with this terrible disease. I consulted several doctors, but they could not help me at all. When I heard of Dr. Chase's Ointment being good for eczema, I tried it, and before I had used two boxes I could see it was helping me. Now, since my face is entirely healed, they want to know how I was cured, and I certainly recommend Dr. Chase's Ointment. I cannot speak too strongly in its favour, as I paid out many dollars for doctors' medicines, but did not get any relief until I used Dr. Chase's Ointment."

You may be skeptical regarding the ability of Dr. Chase's Ointment to cure you. Most people are, after trying in vain to get relief from a host of remedies, but Dr. Chase's Ointment will not disappoint you. You will be surprised at the marvellous control which it has over all itching, burning inflammation of the skin, and the wonderful healing powers which it possesses. It takes time to thoroughly cure eczema, but Dr. Chase's Ointment will do it. You will find relief after a few applications, and gradually and naturally the cure will follow. Besides being a positive cure for eczema, Dr. Chase's Ointment comes useful in a hundred ways in every home for every form of skin irritation and eruption, chapped skin and chilblains.

A STORY OF SCOTT.

Famous Novelist Heard Some Highland Boat Songs.

"The Laird of Staffa promised to look in on us this evening," wrote Sir Walter Scott in Edinburgh, to Miss Edgeworth, "for the purpose of letting us hear one of his classmes sing some Highland boat songs and the like, and if you will come, as the Irish should to the Scotch, without any ceremony, you will hear what is perhaps more curious than mellifluous."

"As the coach stopped," Miss Edgeworth says, in describing the visit, "we saw the hall lighted and the moment the door opened, heard the joyous sounds of loud singing. . . . The room was lighted by only one globe lamp. A circle was singing low and beating time. All stopped in an instant, and Walter Scott in the most cordial and courteous manner stepped forward to welcome us: 'Miss Edgeworth, this is so kind of you!' . . . His countenance even by the uncertain light in which I first saw it, pleased me much, benevolent and full of genius without the slightest effort at expression; delightfully natural as if he did not know he was Walter Scott or the Great Unknown of the north, as if he only thought of making others happy."

"On my saying, 'Do not let us interrupt what was going on,' he immediately rose, and begged Staffa to bid his boatman strike up again. 'Will you join in the circle with us?' He put the end of a silk handkerchief into my hand, and the other into my sisters'; they held these handkerchiefs all in a circle again, and the boatman began to roar out a Gaelic song to which they all stamped in time and repeated the chorus, which, as far as I could hear, sounded like 'At am Vaunt at am Vaunt' frequently repeated with prodigious enthusiasm. In another I could make out no intelligible sound, but 'Bas! bas! bas!' But the boatman's dark eyes were ready to start out of his head with rapture as he sang and stamped, and shook the handkerchief on each side, and the circle imitated."

"The impression left on my mind this night is that Walter Scott is one of the best bred men I ever saw, with all the exquisite politeness which he knows so well how to describe, which is of no particular school or country, but which is of all countries. . . . As I sat beside him at supper, I could not believe he was a stranger, and forgot he was a great man."

Cobbett and the Potato.

William Cobbett, the English economist, was firmly convinced that the potato and prosperity could not exist side by side, and he quotes with approval the opinion of Sir Charles Wolseley that on the continent "in whatever proportion the cultivation of potatoes prevails the working people are wretched." He is indeed constantly girding at the vegetables, and in his "Rural Rides" recounts noting with satisfaction in the course of a journey from St. Albans to Cheshum that he did not see "three acres of potatoes in this whole tract of fine country."

USE YOUR DRIVING POWER.

If You Want a Thing, Want It Earnestly Enough to Get It.

Just wanting something will rarely obtain it for you. You've got to go out and get it for yourself. In an article called "Increase Your Driving Power" in the American Magazine a writer quotes an authority as saying:

"After all, a man does what he wants to do. Therefore he must be taught as a child and he must learn in adult years to teach himself to want to do the right thing and the big thing and to want it so hard that he is bound to arrive at the wished for goal. Anybody can sit down and say, 'I'd like to be the head of my company or the president of the United States or the best salesman in the world.' That much is easy. It is exactly what the baby does when it sits on the floor and squalls for a piece of candy. But it is a very different thing from wanting something so much that it is willing to set about it and undertake at once the doing of the impossible.

"The trouble with the average man is that he does not want things hard enough. And one reason for this is that he has not been taught the value of this 'wanting.' He has not been shown in his schools and in his life that man has tremendous resources for wanting and for willing and that as he continues to will and will he will find in himself unknown and unsuspected layers of energy. There is always enough energy to supply a man's desires for success if he will tap the source of it."

KEEPING COOL IN ADEN.

Coolies Pull the Ropes and the Ropes Work the Big Fans.

Electric current for fans is not generally available in Aden, Arabia, and the old fashioned punkah system is the only relief from the almost unbearable heat and closeness of the atmosphere which prevails at certain seasons of the year. A punkah is a large ceiling fan operated by a cooly, who pulls a rope attached to it. This rope generally passes over a small pulley though a hole in the wall, so that the cooly may work unseen by those in the room to be ventilated.

Often a series of fans is operated by one cooly, this system prevailing in hotels, clubs and other places where there is a large space to be cooled. The actual cooling effect is usually considered more satisfactory than that of an electrically operated fan in the respect that the air currents are more gentle and much more evenly distributed.

A punkah walla, as the cooly who operates it is called, receives in Aden an average wage of $3.50 per month for working from eight to nine hours a day. However, during the hot season, when it is desirable to have the punkah in operation night and day, a force of three punkah wallahs, working eight hours each, is necessary, and the punkah becomes somewhat expensive

Increase in Muskrats.

As an illustration of how rapidly the muskrats increase in some districts, the Bavarian commission which reports on the matter says in Schlusselburg in 1911 there were ten muskrats—we don't know who counted them—while in 1913 the number had increased to about 300, and in 1916 to more than 1,000. In some places it is said the energetic muskrats had driven away the water birds, "after destroying the eggs and young had taken possession of the floating nests and converted them to their own use."—Farm Life.

Raises Alligators.

There is money in raising alligators. One man near Los Angeles is said to have grown rich from the enterprise. It is a lucrative and practically uncrowded field for the man who has sufficient business initiative combined with physical courage to enter. Anyway, the matter is well worth looking into by the man who has decided that he would like to raise something and has concluded that chickens are the only possibility.

STOP HEADACHES BEFOREHAND

You never had a headache when you were well.

To keep well is to keep clean, inside.

To relieve headache, and to prevent it, keep the liver active and industrious and the bowels as regular as a clock.

Two generations of healthy, vigorous people have done this by taking one pill at bedtime, regularly—a larger dose when nature gives the warning.

The "English Lord" of Our Stage.

England, which has given to the stage Shakespeare, Sheridan, Congreve, Goldsmith, Colman, Farquhar, Milman, Bulwer, Barrie and Pinero, does not contain in all its literature such a character as the "English lord" of the American theater. No one in England has ever seen a lord with any likeness to the American caricature. But he "goes his way," and it has proved a profitable one for the actor who specializes, so to speak, in stage English lords. Will the procession ever end? Can any one halt it? Can the silly ass lord change? It does not seem probable, and I can hear him now in reverie as he calls out, "Come, now, my bally old top, and watch me making love to the blooming heiress, and, my word, it will be ripping!"

Austrian Criticism of Germany.

The Vienna correspondent of the Hamburgher Nachrichten, in an angry article about the renewed activities of Austro-Hungarian pacifists and democrats in behalf of a speedy peace, speaks of "an influential political current in Austria-Hungary that cherishes the illusion of terminating the war at any cost by a speedy compromise." He refers to an article in the Neue Freie Presse of Vienna, by the eminent jurist, Prof. Lammarsh, who attacks Dr. Michaelis, and suggests that Austria-Hungary should use its influence to procure the entry of her allies into an association for the peaceful settlement of international conflicts and the limitation of armaments. The correspondent also refers to an article in the Vienna Sonn and Montagszeitung complaining of the slowness of the democratization of Germany prevents the conclusion of peace, and asking why the imperial chancellor does not unambiguously proclaim that Belgium shall remain free and independent.

The Harvest in Saxony.

The Magdeburgische Zeitung receives from its Dresden correspondent the following report, derived from an authoritative source:

The great expectations at first held of the harvest have unfortunately not been fulfilled. The great drought in May and June did considerable harm. Oats and barley have failed; rye and wheat reach a medium harvest. Particularly unfavorable is the harvest around Leipzig; in the hilly districts it is better. The potatoes offer the best prospects, so that they will cover the deficit in corn. The kohlrabi crop is bad; the fodder harvest in general is also not specially good.

The Bang Boys.

The somewhat disconcerting inability of the Londoner to take things too seriously, especially when he is intended to, was aptly illustrated, the other evening, by a street market gardener in Westminster. The harvest moon, resplendent in all her glory, was bathing London with her unwelcome light, when he, anticipating that his hours of doing business might possibly be curtailed, chalked above his stall, "Shop early! The Bang Boys are coming!"

AUTO-INTOXICATION OR SELF-POISONING

"FRUIT-A-TIVES" Absolutely Prevents This Dangerous Condition.

The chief cause of poor health is our neglect of the bowels. Waste matter, instead of passing from the lower intestine regularly every day, is allowed to remain there, generating poisons which are absorbed by the blood.

In other words, a person who is habitually constipated, is poisoning himself. We know now that Auto-intoxication, due to non-action of the bowels, is directly responsible for serious Kidney and Bladder Troubles; that it upsets the Stomach, causes Indigestion, Loss of Appetite and Sleeplessness; that chronic Rheumatism, Gout, Pain In The Back, are relieved as soon as the bowels become regular; and that Pimples, Rashes, Eczema and other Skin Affections disappear when "Fruit-a-tives" are taken to correct Constipation.

"Fruit-a-tives" will protect you against Auto-intoxication because this wonderful fruit medicine acts directly on all the eliminating organs.

PETERBOROUGH, SATURDAY, JANUARY 26, 1918

BIG FIRE IN BUSINESS SECTION

HALF OF GEORGE ST. BLOCK IS RUINED

FIRE DESTROYS HALF A BLOCK IN HEART OF CITY'S BUSINESS SECTION

Blaze Which Started in Neill's Shoe Store at 5:30 o'clock This Morning Completely Destroyed That Building and Gutted Top Stories of Dominion Bank and Royal Theatre Buildings---Loss is Conservatively Estimated at $500,000---Firemen Make Heroic Fight in Zero Weather Against Worst Fire That Business Section of the City Has Experienced.

ASSISTANCE FROM LINDSAY BRIGADE

Half the block on the east side of George Street, between Charlotte and Simcoe Street, was practically destroyed to-day by a fire which broke out about 5.30 o'clock this morning, at the rear of the big Robert Neill Shoe Store. Before the blaze was finally gotten under control after a heroic fight in zero weather by the Peterboro firemen assisted by a contingent from the Lindsay Fire Brigade, the Neill store with its huge stock had been completely wiped out, and the fire had spread both north and south, gutting the top floors of the Dominion Bank Building, the Royal Theatre Building and practically ruining the Dominion Bank quarters, and the Matthews-Blackwell Company's retail store, and badly damaging with smoke and water the Union Bank offices. The property owners who suffered the chief loss were: Mr. Robert Neill, owner of the building occupied by his shoe business, the Bradburn Estate annex of the Dominion Bank Building, and Mr. M. Pappas, to whom the Royal Theatre Building belongs. The tenants affected are the Dominion Bank, the local Masonic Lodges, whose quarters were completely destroyed; Dr. Preston, dentist; Mr. Harry Rush, whose offices were ruined; Matthews-Blackwell Company and the Union Bank.

The fire was probably the worst that the business section of Peterboro has ever experienced. It is thought to have originated from an explosion in the heating apparatus of the Neill Store and certainly the big start that the conflagration got before the alarm was sent in justifies this theory. Mr. George Sturmer, employed at Shortly's Store was the first to see the fire. He was busy clearing the snow off the side walk when his attention was attracted by a crackling noise and looking down the street saw dense clouds of smoke pouring from the Neill Store. He at once sent in the alarm and the brigade responded promptly.

When they arrived the blaze had made rapid headway. The interior of the Neill Store was already a mass of flames and it could be seen at a glance that there was little or no chance of saving the building.

The big store which is the distributing centre for the chain of Neill Stores throughout the Province was heavily stocked, the second and third floors being jammed with shoes. The contents burned fiercely and belched out dense clouds of heavy black smoke which hindered the efforts of the fire fighters. Chief Grange soon had all his available hose in action with streams playing on the blaze front and back. Engineer Pammett got the engine working quickly and the difference in the pressure was noticeable.

However in spite of the utmost efforts of Chief Grange and his men to localize the blaze it was a losing fight. Until 7:30 o'clock it looked as if they might be successful in holding the flames to the Neill Store but then the fire ate its way under the mansard roof of the Dominion Bank and once inside the blaze made terrific headway. In a few minutes the top floor was a furnace and when the flames broke through the roof the situation was very serious. Only a narrow lane separates the Dominion Bank Building and the City Buildings and there was grave danger that the fire would spread in that direction. However, the brigade managed to hold the blaze in the bank building. Meanwhile, however, it had spread southward into the rooms over the Royal Theatre and the fire fighters had a terrible battle on their hands to keep the flames from breaking through into the Victoria Hall Building in which case the whole block would have gone. By 11 o'clock Chief Grange expressed the belief that the blaze was under control, but it required tons of water to hold the fire in the Royal Building and this afternoon the fire fighters were still flooding the blaze.

SOVIETS ORGANIZED IN AUSTRIAN CITIES

PETROGRAD, January 25.—Delayed via London, January 26.—Bolsheviki newspapers to-day printed reports that Soviet organizations had been formed by workmen in iVenna, Budapest and Warsaw "for revolutionary purposes."

This report follows the United Press despatch of Thursday from Joseph Shaplen reporting the receipt by the Smolny Institute of wireless reports indicating a revolution in Vienna. The Russian word "Soviet" means council. Under the Russian revolutionary government, there are "Soviets" of workmen, soldiers, peasants, etc., all elected and who are supposed to represent the public opinion of their respective classes.

MUST ANSWER FOE WITH BOMB AND BAYONET

More Allied Forces on the West Front Will Be Necessary to Put Conciliation Into the German Leaders Is the Opinion of United States Leaders

MORE WAR PREPARATIONS

(Special to the Toronto Star and the Peterborough Examiner).

(By Carl D. Groat).

WASHINGTON, Jan. 26.—The United States and her allies must answer Count Hertling with the bayonet and bomb, according to the view of most diplomats and army men to-day.

While seeing in the peace terms reply of Hertling and Czernin, a more conciliatory spirit than anything heretofore manifested by the Teuton, the general thought here was that Hertling's address thinly masked the militarist views of Germany. Czernin, on the other hand, showed symptoms of nervousness over internal problems, and appeared more sincerely desirous of peace than his colleague. But on the whole the authorities felt that stronger war preparations must be the answer for the time being.

More Allied and American forces on the Western front, they contended, will faster put more conciliation into the German tone. Army men in touch with the internal and military problem of Germany and Austria have felt for a long while that the way is being paved for peace negotiations. They still feel the same saying in every statement with any sort of concession is a step nearer peace.

RUSSIA WILL REPUDIATE DEBTS IT IS ANNOUNCED

All Russian Congress of Soviets Have Approved This Step Although It das Not Been Officially Accepted by the Government

LENINE'S ADDRESS

(Special to the Toronto Star and The Peterborough Examiner.)

(By Joseph Shaplen.)

PETROGRAD, Jan. 25, 11 p.m. (delayed via London, Jan. 26).—The All-Russian Congress of Soviets, called into being by Bolsheviki as the lawgiving body of Russia, to-day announced its approval of a repudiation of all Russia's departments. The decision, however, has not yet been officially accepted the Lenine-Trotsky Government.

The Bolsheviki steam roller is sure [illegible] the Soviet Executive. At to-day's second session there was never any doubt as to the overwhelming Bolsheviki strength. There was a lonely group of about 75 opponents, whose main activity was in demanding immediate consideration of the peace negotiations at Brest-Litovsk. In view of the critical results of those conferences, the disintegration of the army and internal troubles, the group was regularly voted down.

One proposition fostered by the minority was immediate declaration of a holy revolutionary war against the Central Empires. The Bolsheviki declined to accept such a suggestion, and held the convention to the slated order of business.

LENINE'S SPEECH.

Nicholas Lenine, in a lengthy speech, reviewed the Bolsheviki administration and predicted the complete defeat of General Kaledine and the Ukrainian Radas revolters. He said both moves were doomed to die out as a result of a revolutionary movement from within Ukraine and the Cossacks.

Delegate Svordloff read the so-called "Rights of Man" revolution, which was rejected by the constituent assemblies by an anti-Bloshevik majority. The Bolsheviki delegates greeted it with uproarious applause, particularly its proclamation of a Russian republic.

It was noticeable that Lenine spoke firmly as a complete victor over the Mensheviki, but he took pains to ridicule the minority's cry that he was a dictator.

The announcement was made today that French Socialists Dumas is to confer with Foreign Minister Trotsky on Saturday.

THE PEOPLE RULE.

From conversation which the United Press staff correspondent had with the Soviet delegates from all parts of Russia, there seemed to be a general belief that the people themselves through an intricate network of city and provincial Sovies and co-operative organisations, were seeking to solve Russia's problems, and were not in the least concerned as to who actually rules in Petrograd.

The people of Russia, judging from the Soviet's delegates, will accept Petrograd's decrees and orders according to their local needs. Otherwise, they will not be accepted. It should be understood that Russia is now trying to build a government fom the bottom up. The form of this structure is not clear. One thing appears certain, however, and that is that no central authority will be able to dictate. It can only inspire a great and plain people to do thie building themselves. In other words, it appears most likely that thee soon will be a state of dictatorship in Russia—only, the peasantv and the wokmen will be the dictators.

FRENCH PREMIER WILL RESPOND TO FOE'S DECLARATION

Clemenceau to Voice to the World a Joint Re-statement of the Allied War Aims—Several Points of Differences

SOME BIG PROBLEMS

(Special to the Toronto Star and The Peterborough Examiner.)

(By Lowell Mellett.)

LONDON, Jan. 26.—Premier Clemenceau of France will likely be the allied spokesman responding to outlines of Germany's and Austria-Hungary's war aims.

More than that, he will probably voice to the world a joint re-statement of the allied war aims— the very thing for which President Wilson has been contending since Pope Benedict's peace pro-offer.

From authoritative sources to-day it was learned this framing of a joint allied list of war aims will be the principal problem before the forthcoming allied conference in Paris. The matter was discussed at the Paris meetings of the allied statesmen. There were several conflicting opinions as to certain planks in that war platform.

Since the Paris meetings these points of differences have been cleared away. The recent visit to Paris of Premier Orlando of Italy has resulted, it was understood here to-day in Italy's alignment with the ultra-Liberal programme endorsed by Premier Lloyd George and President Wilson. Italy, it was authoritatively reported, is now willing to abandon her claim for Dalmatia.

Alsace Lorraine will be a big problem which the forth coming conference must settle. France is the only one of the big powers in the allied camp which has not recently formally pledged explicit acceptance to a Liberal democratic programme. France's adherence to such a programme has been expressed in votes in Chamber of Deputies, but Premier Clemenceau himself has been the one allied Premier not to speak. In some quarters here to-day it was hinted that Clemenceau's silence had been designed that the allies have foreseen necessity of having a great leader's speech in reserve to answer Germany's statements. Certainly a speech from Clemenceau—"the tiger"—would be of extraordinary timeliness at the present moment. It would serve as a vehicle through which to announce complete and unchanged allied solidarity in the face of the artful attempt of Hertling and Czernin to create a division and it would serve also to record this combined joint war aspirations and terms for peace which Germany must accept.

NOTHING CAN BRING ABOUT A CHANGE IN HUNS BUT DEFEAT

"Now Let's Go On With the War" is the Keynote of the Comment of the British Press on Speeches of Chancellor Hertling and Foreign Minister Czernin of Austria---Germany is Still Unrepentant.

A SUMMARY OF TO-DAY'S WAR CABLES

(Special to The Toronto Star and The Peterborough Examiner.)

LONDON, Jan. 26—"Now let's go on with the war" epitomized the unanimous chorus of to-day's London newspaper comment on a speech of Chancellor Hertling, of Germany and Foreign Minister Czernin of Austria-Hungary. It was London's view that Hertling's remarks showed an unrepentent Germany, that nothing can bring about a teutonic heart except defeat.

The more concillatory speech of Count Czernin was regarded with suspicion in most editorials. The Daily News alone speculated on the possibility of its more liberal terms being dictated by Internal pressure and evidencing a sincere desire for peace. All other editorials hinted that Czernin's attitude was the result of collusion with Hertling—merely another of the numberless German schemes to deceive the world into belief of a breach between the two nations.

"Neither of the spokesmen disclose the least readiness to make any of the concessions which the Allies have declared indispensable" The London Times summarized. "The joint attack is intended to shake the solidarity of the Allies.

"President Wilson is manifestly a chief objective of these converging forces." Other editorials discerned an attempt to insert a wedge between the United States and the Allies.

(Special to The Toronto Star and The Peterborough Examiner.)

ROME, January 26.—The Vatican to-day counted Count Czernin's speech as another positive step toward peace.

In official circles many points of agreement between the speech of the Austro-Hungarian statesman and President Wilson's fundamental peace aims were pointed out as evidence of the gradual building of a basic structure on which peace might later be erected. That there should be the omissions and reservations was to be expected, according to Vaticana offirials. Their attitude was distinctly optimistic. The Italian press comment, however, reflected the view of Italian oficialdom—that there was no genuine or sincere desire for peace to be found in either Czernins or Hertling's speeches. It was the Vatican's opinion that Count Czernin especially addressed the German people in his speech practically warning Germany "though we support you, there is a limit." Under this construction Vatican officials hold the address embarrasses the Pan-Germans greatly. Moreover, they pointed out that the speech was made under more normal and more natural political circumstances than that of Chancellor Hertling, and therefore, should be judged more important and more significant.

(Special to The Toronto Star and The Peterborough Examiner.)

HELSINGFORS, Finland, January 26.—The Finnish Senate forced the Russian Government to promise not to repeat the furnishing of arms to Finnish revolutionists, according to an announcement to-day. The Senate sent an ultimatum to Petrograd threatening the declaration of a state of war immediately "unless Russians ceased supply rioters with arms." Russia replied promising to reclaim "borrowed arms."

(Special to The Toronto Star and The Peterborough Examiner.)

LONDON, January 26.—An Exchange Telegraph despatch from Petrograd dated Friday, asserts that Austria has declared her readiness to conclude a separate with Russia without Germany. The message declared Austria "accepts the democratic programme except the paragraph relating to the self-determination of peoples."

(Canadian Press Despatch.)

LONDON, January 26.—The official statement issued to-day by the British War Office says "we took a few prisoners last night in patrol encounters southwest of Cambrai. Hostile artillery was active early in the night against our positions in the Scarpe Valley."

(Canadian Press Despatch.)

LONDON, January 26.—"After heavily barraging our position the enemy raided one of our posts this morning east of Loos," says to-night's official statement.

"Four of our men are missing. We captured positions in patrol encounters south of Lens. Hostile artillery has been active in the neighbourhood of Flesquieres, Bullecourt, Baileul and Poelcappelle."

AIRDROME BOMBED

Aerial Activity on a Large Scale on Thursday Is Reported in British Official Statement Issued To-day

MACHINES BROUGHT DOWN

Canadian Press Despatch:

LONDON, Jan. 26.—The Admiralty announces that naval aircraft bombed a German airdrome at Varssenaere on Friday, making direct hits. All the machines returned. In patrol fighting on Wednesday, the announcement says, two enemy aircraft were destroyed and two were shot down out of control. One British machine is missing.

Aerial activity on a large scale on Thursday, owing to favourable weather conditions, is recorded in the British official statement issued to-day. The statement says: "More than 300 bombs were dropped on the Courtrai, Ledeghem and Douai railway stations, the airdrome near Courtrai and on the German billets west of Cambrai. The enemy hangars at Douai and other ground targets were bombarded by airplanes. Seven hostile machines were brought down fighting and five others were driven out of control. Two British machines are missing."

LIKE A GREEN BAY TREE.

We were told—largely, perhaps, a matter of assumption, that the change of political policy and attitude of some newspapers was due to practical "influence" of the "big interests." In these cases, if such existed, the harm was confined to the influence upon these papers in dealing with debatable subjects, and chiefly concerns those journals themselves. If these assumptions had any foundation the result was only to influence a few newspapers. But the big interests—the "paper combine," has secured a victory which not only prejudicially influences the whole press of the country, but helps to throttle it. The "big interests" have again won at Ottawa; and their victory means that the newspapers of Canada will be "soaked" to the tune of hundreds of thousands of dollars to pay the increased price for news print—from $2.50 to $2.85—which Commissioner Pringle's decision will put into the pockets of the paper-making interests. The margin of profit of newspapers due to war conditions was reduced to a very fine point; it was refined still further when Finance Minister White advanced the price of news print from $2.10 to $2.50 per hundred pounds. The paper makers was not satisfied; and was able to persuade the government to appoint a special commissioner, Mr. R. A. Pringle, whose partial and obviously one-sided "investigation" made him unable to arrive at correct figures for the cost of production of paper—by rejection of evidence that might have settled the point; but nevertheless he was able to arrive at a decision in the interests of the makers and contrary to the interest of the newspapers and the public to which they supply a service indispensable in a civilized country. Apparently the "combines" still flourish like a green bay tree.

In spite of the drafts made upon the savings of the people by the Victory Loans, the latest statements show a big increase in bank and savings bank deposits.

A LITTLE DILEMMA.

During the recent election, Mr. Hall, the Liberal candidate, was made the subject of continuous criticism, and even reproach, because he insisted that conscription was not the only issue, but that increased food production was of, at least, tantamount importance. He was characterized as disloyal, and his contentions laughed to scorn, at a great public meeting in the approving presence of Premier Borden, not to speak of the somewhat crude jibing of a local newspaper.

But Mr. Hall was right, and hardly was the election over than the new government and its champions began to insist upon the importance of food production. The change of front went so far as to demand that the "supreme" issue, getting soldiers, must yield to the interest of food production, represented by the exemption of farmers' sons from military service, in the interests of the greater production, which Mr. Hall demanded as a prime duty of the government. The Unionist member for West Peterborough is so fiercely obsessed with the idea that he has persuaded the, perhaps, easily persuaded, County Council to go to Ottawa to persuade the Prime Minister to interfere with the law by which appeal tribunals are guided. The law is the law, and must be carried out. The appeal tribunals act on facts, not sentiment, and Sir Robert Borden, nor anybody else, has authority to interfere with the deliberations or decisions of the appeal tribunals, even into justify he solicitous action of the member for West Peterborough in procuring the appointment of the East and West Peterborough Farmers' Tribunals—except possibly hastening decisions.

The exemption of farmers' sons, so as to insure greater certainty of production, is eminently desirable, if not imperative, as is filling the ranks with soldiers, so that military necessity comes to the same level of importance as greater food production whose advocacy but a short month ago was pronounced treason and folly by the very persons that are now seeking to exploit it for—some purpose.

EDUCATION OR COERCION.

When educational effort and appeal fail to arouse the spirit of response to help win the war, coercion must come. This was applied when appeal to patriotism failed to fill the ranks with voluntary recruits; and in a score of other ways it has been found necessary to provide compulsory discharge of duty.

In nothing else perhaps is this compulsion more needed than in economy of food. Our Food Controller has fairly talked himself black in the face in order to impress upon the people the necessity of economy in food; but waste still continues, and the ill response to the Food Controller's appeals, perhaps, explains why he throws up the job in disgust, if that is the reason he has retired.

We are asked to save food of three kinds that are as urgently needed as munitions of war, indispensable necessities for the victory of our soldiers, and those of our allies. These three foods are beef, bacon and bread, or its equivalent, wheat. Yet we find appalling waste of bread, and have direct proof of it. Our city garbage collector finds in the garbage tins direct evidence of this waste. He finds in garbage tins large quantities of useful bread thrown away, and in some cases, whole half loaves.

The daily waste from this source must be tremendous. It is not confined to Peterborough, for, in general, no other cities or towns are more thrifty or careful than we are.

A simple calculation shows the immense aggregate of waste. An ounce of bread wasted every day by the eight million population of Canada—and the waste averages that—represents a waste of seventeen ship loads—in one year—1750 tons of good bread—more destruction than, according to records, there would be done by three of the luckiest German submarines.

This shows the importance of saving and not wasting every scrap of bread. Bread is a food in which there is absolutely no waste necessary. Crumbs and fragments saved can be used in a dozen ways to make palatable and nourishing dishes.

It seems we can't, by persuasion, get many persons to save food which is just as essential to war winning as enlisting soldiers, and providing them with munitions. When we can't get soldiers by persuasion and appeal, we employ compulsion. If we can't get people to save food for export by persuasion and appeal, why not employ the other way, and deal with offenders pretty firmly? Such cases as throwing a whole half loaf into the garbage tin should be penalized as a lesson and warning to others.

The garbage man can be made useful by checking this waste. If he is given authority and reward for reporting every case of the wanton and wicked waste described, and furnishes evidence, the offending parties should be strictly dealt with. Such a course may seem tyrannical, but it is necessary if we are to bring the urgently necessary war measure of food saving to the fullest development of usefulness.

The saving of exportable foods has been tremendous, amounting in the case of wheat, according to estimates, of ten million bushels. But the results can be increased many fold by the whole population entering, or being brought to enter, in thorough-going saving of food.

One cause why people do not take more earnestly and effectively to food saving, is because they do not realize the necessity, nor danger, of famine conditions coming without greatly increased production and more intense economy of foods. Well-to-do people standing in the "bread line" in England, waiting for their dole, indicates the critical character of the food supply; and when the British people are confronted with the necessity of eating horseflesh, some of us who don't, might realize the tremendous importance of Canada contributing to the food supply; and realize that even small savings put together will mean a great total saving. The Food Controller's custody of the dieting of hotels and restaurants has reduced the consumption of beef in Canada fifty per cent., bacon, fifty-seven per cent., and other essential commodities in proportion.

Let us do closer thinking and economize in food saving, and let us realize that waste of food, so badly needed by our allies and our armies, is as wicked and helpful to the Hun as placing a bomb in a munitions factory.

Let us hope that Col. Repington's criticism of the British War Cabinet is only an outbreak of the incurable British habit of grumbling.

PROGRESS REPORTED.

The annual statement incidental to the report of the thirty-third annual general meeting of the Toronto Loan and Savings Company, indicates another successful year of operation. The net earnings amount to $150,554.38, which permitted the payment of four quarterly dividends totalling $100,000—at the rate of 10 per cent.; strengthening the reserve fund by the addition of $50,000, bringing this important account up to a total of $1,050,000, and carrying forward to credit of profit and loss, $36,701.44. As indicating the prevailing prosperity, payments upon the company's investments have been promptly met, as well as the rentals of its property.

With a record of results of profitable operation, evidencing careful and judicious management, it is natural that the great confidence the public have reposed in the Toronto Loan and Savings Company should be strengthened and a prosperous future guaranteed.

A CITY OF COLOR.

Italians Desire to Possess Beautiful Trieste.

The combination of old customs and traditions with much that is extremely modern, makes the city of Trieste a delight to the tourist, Francis Kinsley Hutchinson says in "Motoring in the Balkans." "We knew from our faithful Baedker that our hotel here stood upon the quay, but no guidebook could prepare one for the fascinating picture which the window revealed as we entered our apartment. Black-hulled steamers from Palermo, from Dalmatia, from France, England, and even from America, lay at anchor on the glittering sea, while bright-hued Venetian boats unloaded their queer cargoes at the near embankment."

"Freighters arrived and trim passenger boats, their masts and yards so much more picturesque than the huge funnels of the modern steamer. A ferry from Capodistria came jauntily to the dock and unloaded her passengers, who walked ashore with brisk businesslike, almost American, alertness, apparently heedless of the rare and beautiful sight presented by this hill-encircled city, brilliant with the brief sunshine of the early spring. From the distance a big liner signaled with flying colors, calling a tiny tug that slowly guided the monster to her berth amidst the moving craft.

"But no steamer, big or little, can compare in picturesqueness or in grace with the gayly colored cargo boats from Chioggia, their orange and brown sails patched in varying tones, their stripes of green or red or blue around the clumsy hulls, their big round eyes and slanting yards, their billowy sails, spread to the soft south wind or hanging limp against the mast or draped in wonderful folds to dry.

"The morning light only strengthened our pleasing impressions. From a market-boat at an adjacent quay, marched a long procession of women with baskets on their heads. In the distance appeared a sailing vessel, her shining canvas turned to silver in the glowing sun. A forest of masts and funnels extended on either side of my vantage post; but my particular interest lay in the doings of the fascinating port shut in by the Molo San Carlo, and the more prosaically named Number Four."

"A gray coasting steamer with a beautiful green water line poked its sharp nose deftly between the larger craft in the crowded water, and ran alertly alongside the quay, bearing an interesting group of humanity. 'It must be market day,' I thought, and, seizing my kodak, I plunged into the busy throng. It was market day, and the market was beside a wonderful canal lined with gayly-painted ships. The heaps of oranges and lemons repeated the colors of the sails, and country folk in full short skirts, with shawl and knitted scarf, completed the picture. A trio of brilliantly costumed men flashed by me from the quay. 'Dalmatians,' I heard, as I turned to follow them.

"A quaint old lady stepped into the market place looking as if she had come out of a picture frame. Her dark blue skirt had no gores taken from its gathered fullness, her black velvet cape was trimmed with a deep netted fringe, over which was draped a black neckerchief brocaded with green flowers, and on her head she wore a black kerchief whose large magenta peonies outshone the blossoms of every booth."

The Onion.

There is nothing particularly poetical about the onion, but Shakespeare has several references to this "edible biennial bulbous root," defined by Johnson simply as "a plant." The bard's comments are, however, mostly concerned with the lachrymal properties, and Swift refers to it in a cookery book manner, advising that it be well boiled if we do not wish our kissing to be spoiled. Beaumont and Fletcher, however, in "The Mad Lover," make a direct reference to its medicinal virtues:

"The plague."

"I'll cure it with an onion."

Maddening.

"They really fear she will become insane. You see, she found a diary he kept before he married her."

"Oh, I see! And the awful revelations"—

"Revelations? No. It was all in cipher, and she couldn't read a word of it."—London Tit-Bits.

Soap Economy.

When a cake of soap is worn nearly thin enough to break stick it to the new cake by putting both in quite warm water, then press firmly together. When cold it will be one solid cake. This does away with small pieces of soap and there is no waste.

"ROBINSON CRUSOE"

Spectacular Pantomime Coming to "The Grand"

To give something bigger, better and altogether more worthy each year is the policy outlined by F. Stuart-Whyte, and judging from advance indications his forthcoming production of the super-extravaganza-pantomime, "Robinson Crusoe," his offering for this season will establish a criterion which will be hard to emulate.

The new offering will be divided into two parts and eleven swiftly moving scenes and requires enough scenery and properties to fill two large baggage cars. The costuming will be a delight to the eye and the tuneful melodies interspersed throughout the action will prove pleasing to the ear, thus all the senses, including your sense of humour, will be gratified.

Miss Zara Clinton, the star of "Aladdin and His Wonderful Lamp," will be seen in the name part supported by a cast and chorus of fifty people all of them chosen for their individual abilities in pantomime and musical comedy work. This cast and chorus will be augmented by the introduction of several vaudeville features, including the Jean Van Vlissingen Dancers, big time headliners of the principal circuits in Europe and America.

"Robinson Crusoe" will be the offering at the Grand theatre for two days, starting Friday, Feb. 1st, with a matinee on Saturday.

Poison Gas Like Absinthe.

Having fitted on a clumsy gray flannel gas helmet with talc eyepieces and a hideous snout in front, and being duly instructed to breathe out of the mouthpiece, which acts as a kind of exhaust, the writer was brought to an opening in the hillside. "Beyond the yawning doorway," he writes, "I saw a thick, greenish-yellow mist, a fog exactly the color of strong absinthe; and then we were in it. K's tall figure blurred, indistinct, faded utterly away, and I was alone amid that awful, swirling vapor that held death in such agonizing form.

"I will confess I was not happy; my throat was tickling provokingly, I began to cough, and my windpipe felt too small. I hastened forward, but, even as I went, the light grew dimmer and the swirling fog more dense. I groped blindly, began to run, stumbled, and in that moment my hand came in contact with an unseen rope. On I went into gloom, into blackness, until I was presently aware of my companions in front and mightily glad of it.

"In a while, still following this invisible rope, we turned a corner, the fog grew less opaque, thinned away to a green mist, and we were out in the daylight again, and thankful was I to whip off my stifling helmet and feel the clean wind in my hair and the beat of the rain upon my face.

"'Notice the ticklin' feeling'?' inquired our sub as he took our helmets and put them carefully by. 'Bit tryin' at first, but you soon get used to it. Some of the men funk tryin' at first—and some hold their breath until they fairly well burst, an' some won't go in at all, so we carry 'em in. That gas you've tried is about twenty times stronger than we get it in the open, but these helmets are a rippin dodge—till the chemical evaporates; then of course they're no earthly good.'"—Everybody's Magazine.

The Great Problem.

You cannot have it both ways. Professor Meinecke, in the Frankfurter Zeitung, speaks of Alsace-Lorraine as "the firm brace that Bismarck laid round the south and north of Germany," and further insists that any interference with it would "shake the German people's trust in the Bismarckian policy." And yet, was it not Bismarck himself who, speaking in the Reichstag, in 1887, claimed he would have been "content with the language frontier," that he himself had not wished to take Metz, but that Moltke had said it was worth 100,000 men? "Then did he not, in a conversation, the authenticity of which is well established, declare: 'One does not mutilate with impunity.' To take Metz and a part of Lorraine was the worst of political blunders?"

Samples Wanted.

"Is this your advertisement in the paper for the recovery of a black-and-tan terrier?" a gentleman asked his friend. "Yes," was the reply. "But you never had a dog to lose?" "I know," said the advertiser, "but I want one now, and I think I can make a good choice from the animals that will be brought to me!"

How Austria Treats Prisoners

AN Italian soldier, Palumbo Vargas, formerly a lawyer, who volunteered for the period of the war, has given a description of the terrible conditions prevailing among the Italian prisoners in the camp of Mauthausen in Austria, and a summary is published in the Corriere della Sera. He describes the different treatment accorded to the Italian prisoners just after their capture on the battlefield by men of the different nationalities among their captors. The Bohemians and the Poles were gentlemen, he said; they would give the prisoner a drink of water and a word of comfort; the Austrians insulted and ill-treated them, and the Hungarians with an absolutely unmovable appearance, would walk round the prisoners and use them as targets for revolver practice. There were several cases of prisoners who had been unhurt during the battle and who had been wounded by the revolvers of the Hungarian officers. The foregoing declaration should not, says the narrative, be taken as "establishing exact principles," but if it can be shown that the prisoners were treated in this way immediately after capture, it serves as an introduction to what follows.

The narrative goes on to give a description of the sufferings of the prisoners on their way to the camp and on their arrival, and of the hardships suffered by them from violence, cold, and harsh treatment. He then describes how on one occasion a caricaturist on the staff of Simplicimus came to the camp and how, in spite of the strongest protests on his part, a prisoner was made to pose for him. At another time two Hungarian officers, seeing a newly arrived group of prisoners, had two loaves brought to them and amused themselves by throwing down small pieces on which the men who had had nothing to eat for four days threw themselves. After their arrival at the camp those who, on account of their rank or their social position were unsuited to hard work, remained in camp, while the others were placed in huts, guarded by sentinels, and were ready to start at the first demand for their services. The prisoners' food consisted, in the morning of a beverage made from mallows which was called tea, at mid-day they were given 200 grams of bread made of acorn mast and pea flour, together with a bowl of hot water in which floated a few pieces of pumpkin or carrot, and in the evening they had another bowl of hot water mixed with a certain kind of grayish flour of unknown origin and composition. For more than a year they ate bad herrings and stockfish daily. This fare was supplemented by the food sent by the prisoners' families, but this was not universally the case, and a number of prisoners worked in places where their provisions could not reach them. It was true that some means of amusement was provided, but an iron discipline prevailed and most brutal punishments were inflicted. The description of one of these known as "the stake" (palo) is given in the account.

Austria is alleged to have flagrantly violated international law by using prisoners of war for military purposes. It is stated that Italian prisoners are working in arms and munition factories throughout Austria-Hungary. The military roads in Galicia, Poland, Serbia, and Albania, the entrenchments and the semi-permanent fortifications made in readiness for a possible retreat were the work of Italian prisoners of war. Proof of the truth of these assertions was found in the testimony of those who returned from such work. If other proof were needed it was to be found in the fact that last year the Russians in Galicia not only captured a number of Austrian prisoners, but freed 500 Italians who were working within the range of the guns. It is also stated that Italian prisoners wounded by Russian shot were to be found in nearly all the hospitals in Hungary. The doctor in the camp at Mauthausen had said that from time to time Italian prisoners were brought in who had been severely wounded behind the Austrian lines.

READY!

In the newspapers there recently appeared articles telling of the arrival of the American fleet at Queenstown—telling how the Officers of the English Navy had gone to Vice-Admiral Sims and asked him when he would be ready for action Every American thrilled with pride at his answer—

"WE CAN START AT ONCE."

"READY TO START AT ONCE"—What a wonderful motto for every man, and yet how many of us realize that at any moment we may suddenly be called away from Business, from Home and Friends, from this world of ours to pass in to the Great Beyond.

Are you Mr. Reader, "READY TO START AT ONCE?" Have you made provision for those dependent on you should the call come?

"READY TO START AT ONCE." No man can do more—we cannot afford to do less.

If your loved ones are not already protected against such an emergency you had better act while you have the opportunity. To-morrow may be too late.

The Sun Life Assurance Company of Canada will protect your Dependents providing you do your duty while the opportunity is yours.

World Grows Smaller.

The world is indeed "shutting up like a telescope," and the fact must have been brought home with strange force to those who were present, the other day, when Signor Laureati's famous "Turin to London" aeroplane was presented to the British people. Turin to London, without a stop, in just over seven hours! What immediate possibilities it opens out—an express letter, for instance, dispatched from Italy at midday, could be in London and in the hands of the consignee on the same evening. It is changed times indeed since Colonel Cody, in his "bus," labored round the Doncaster Course, at that first flying meeting in England, eight years ago. How the crowd cheered when he completed a circuit some twenty feet from the ground.

New Fodder.

Dr. Van Calcar, professor of bacteriology at Leiden university, is reported to have invented a new feedstuff, and also a machine which will produce twenty tons a day. Albumen and fat are obtained from slaughter-houses and fishing centres; fecula is obtained from potato and fruit refuse and the necessary salt may be derived from refuse of vegetables. The fodder is mixed so as to contain a sufficient percentage of fat, albumen and carbohydrates, with an admixture of straw, heather, reeds, and mussels. The new fodder is not recommended as feed for milk cows, as it gives a peculiar taste to the milk.

Even-Toned Wood.

Small splinters of the wood of old Cremona violins, when vibrated with a bow, have been found to give invariably the same note; and that note is always a tone higher when the wood is taken from the belly of the instrument than when it comes from the back.

GAMES HELP FIGHTERS

SOLDIERS AT THE FRONT ARE CHEERED BY PLAY.

Several Officers Testify to Good Morale of Men at the Front, and One Canadian Makes Astounding Statement: "There's Lots of Fun Over There."

LT.-COL. PERCY GUTHRIE, commander of the Canadian Highlanders, wounded many times and now back from the front, says that war is not all hell and hardship. "There's lots of fun over there," he said the other day, and denounces as part of German propaganda much of what we hear about the intolerable and unremitting suffering of the men in the Canadian army. Evidence on this point is also given by Captain David Fallon, M.C., late of the British and Australian armies, who writes in The New York Herald about the play side of war. He says that the fighting is best done by the men who can take their games seriously, who laugh at death and make a joke of their sufferings. He tells of men deeply engrossed in card games when awaiting the signal to go over the top, of football games played with enemy aeroplanes circling overhead.

One of the most remarkable incidents of the war was surely that of the East Surrey regiment, which went over the top in the face of a rain of shrapnel on July 4, 1916, dribbling a football. This is the sort of spirit that is also exemplified, according to Captain Fallon, in the remarks the Tommies make to each other as they leave their trenches to charge. One often hears some wag shouting, "Keep in step! Left! right! left!" or "I had a good job and this is what I left it for"; "Keep your distance, Bill; I'm not your little bit of fluff." When a man falls someone is sure to say, "Poor old Tom; his day's work is done." As they pass a wounded man they shout, "Cheer up, old dear; I'll soon be joining you!" or, maybe, "Keep a place for me in the next bed in the hospital." Running through the Boche trenches they will throw bombs while singing, "You Made Me Love You, I Didn't Want to Do It," and "Take My Compliments to Paralytic Bill." As Captain Fallon remarks: "Never can such spirits be beaten; such morale never can be destroyed."

Different, indeed, is the German morale. "I have never seen a smile on a Hun's face, have never heard a humorous remark from one of them," says Captain Fallon. Even when they are taken prisoner they bring their kultur and their beastliness with them. After some very heavy fighting round the Ancre the writer ordered four Hun prisoners to pick up a sorely wounded British soldier and carry him in. They refused, saying, "We will not carry the English dog." What happened to them is not recorded, but those of us who are most humane will trust it was something swift and comparatively painless. On another occasion a Boche officer was captured, and one of the Tommies, seeing him looking downhearted and hungry-looking, offered him some cigarettes. The officer knocked them out of his hand and spat in his face. Captain Fallon concludes this incident: "I never saw a quicker bayonet-thrust in all my life, and I have been in a few hand-to-hand melees myself."

Men must be cheerful to fight well, and one of the reasons why the men are regularly taken out of the trenches and sent back to rest is to give them a chance to laugh and be as foolish as they like. Just what kind of levity and foolishness the men require they will find out for themselves. Amateur theatricals are great favorites, and it is said that the men take women's roles with particular delight. Then there are foot-races, steeplechases, obstacle races, races with gas masks, and catch-the-ring-on-the-bayonet races, the latter an improvised game probably suggested by the old merry-go-round and memories of the time when someone speared the brass ring and got a free ride. Some men prefer when they are back in the rest camps to devote their leisure to cultivating a little flower or vegetable garden. Others will dress dolls, carve figures out of wood, practice on a musical instrument, or model in clay. Whatever form of relaxation they prefer they go in for it wholeheartedly. The man who slacks at his play is not unlikely to slack at his work.

It is an everyday occurrence to see men playing football over some recently-captured territory, with the spectators madly cheering while shells whistle overhead. In one case while a boxing tournament was being held a bomb dropped and killed the principals in the bout and the referee. The others were for continuing until forbidden by their commander. Card games are particularly popular, and Captain Fallon says that you will find Tommy's favorite game of "House" in progress in the midst of a German "strafe," the players paying more attention to the banker than to the shells. By means of these games Tommy's souvenirs are likely to change hands very often, as captured helmets, iron crosses, and such like junk are the first thing wagered, cigarettes being reserved as the blue chips. It is plain that there is another side to war than the horrible side, and that it is not as bad as going to jail, for instance, where there is perfect safety and perfect monotony.

Man's Means and Wants.

It is not the ampleness of a man's means that makes him independent so much as the smallness of his wants.

The Offender.

Peterborough As An Industrial Centre

How a One-Time Backwoods Lumbering Settlement Has Developed of Recent Years, by Virtue of Natural Advantages and a Progressive Promotion Policy, Into a Busy Manufacturing City.

BY W. A. CRAICK

In certain respects, the City of Peterborough owes its development as an industrial centre to causes similar to those which have contributed to the advancement of Welland. These are briefly; Plentiful hydro-electric energy developed close at hand, competitive rail routes radiating in several directions; and an alternative water route by means of an extensive canal system. If with these, one couples a satisfactory labour supply, drawn to a considerable extent from a large surrounding agricultural population, and attractive residential features, which make the city a pleasant place of abode, then practically all the elements needed to attract and hold industry are present. The location of Peterborough is referred to as a point in its favour also. It stands midway between the prosperous cities and farming communities of Western Ontario and the thickly peopled sections of Quebec and is thus in a position to reach both east and west with equal facility. Its rail and water routes also place it midway between Georgian Bay and Lake Ontario and on the through line of traffic between the Northwest and the seaboard.

Peterborough's history dates back to the early years of the nineteenth century. As a setting for the founding of the city one must recall the coming to the neighbourhood of officers and men from the British regiments disbanded after the Napoleonic wars. These hardy pioneers made their way into the backwoods and started to open up the country. There followed them up the Otonabee River in 1819 a number of men from the lake front who proposed to build saw and grist mills at some favourable spot to supply the needs of the newcomers. A site was picked out where Peterborough now stands, and the following year—1820—Adam Scott and his son, from Cobourg, returned and built a sawmill.

From 1820 to 1827 the place was known as Scott's Plains, but in the latter year it was named Peterborough, in honour of the Hon. Peter Robinson, brother of Sir John Beverley Robinson, Chief Justice of Upper Canada. Mr. Robinson had in 1825 paid a visit to England, with a view to promoting emigration to Canada, and one result of his efforts was to bring a considerable party of Irish settlers to Peterborough and its vicinity. These people formed the nucleus of the population of what was destined to become the future industrial centre. Growth now became comparatively rapid. The settlement was splendidly located for the prosecution of the lumbering industry, and as the years passed this business became of increasing importance. By 1838 there were 1,500 people in the village, and its industries numbered two flour mills, seven saw mills, five distilleries, two breweries and two tanneries. By 1850 the population exceeded 2,000 and Peterborough became a town. By 1860 the population had nearly doubled this figure.

It was, as indicated, the lumbering industry that gave the place its early start. In the sixties, the Otonabee was lined with sawmills, some of very large capacity. The Nassau mill was one of the finest in the province. It had a record of 90,000 feet in twelve hours, and its challenge to any other mill to beat this record remained unanswered. Perry's mill had a capacity of 60,000 feet in 24 hours; Snyder's mill could produce as much; the Blythe saw mill cut 20,000 feet per day; Dickson's steam mill and Ludgate's mill had each capacities of 50,000 feet per. day; Austen's mill could cut 15,000 feet and Boswell's 25,000 feet per day. And there were thirty-four other mills in the district.

But lumbering had its day. One by one these once busy mills disappeared, and for a time a sort of industrial stagnation set in. Eventually a new era dawned, and, with the advent of cheap electrical power and other facilities, industry revived. To-day Peterborough has expanded into a city of 25,000 inhabitants, with a long list of flourishing manufacturing establishments.

Statistics Tell Tale of Growth.

The growth of the city is clearly reflected in the statistics of assessment, bank clearings, building permits, etc. The assessment has expanded from $4,721,320 in 1903 to $13,273,710 in the present year. Bank clearings, which were $1,768,868 in July, 1914, when the clearing house was established, reached a total of $2,998,126 in October, 1917. Building permits started at $238,963 in 1908, expanded to $517,958 in 1910, receded to $92,110 in 1916, but this year approach the million dollar mark, with $945,933 to the end of October.

For many years after its foundation as a backwoods settlement, Peterborough was without rail communication with the outside world. In summer access to the lake front at Cobourg or Port Hope was secured via the Otonabee River and Rice Lake by boat and thence by waggon road. After awhile a regular line of stages started running. The first railway to enter the place was the Cobourg & Peterborough line, which was completed in 1854. The severe winters of 1855-57, however, put the Rice Lake bridge out of commission and this road was never a real success. In 1858 a branch from Millbrook gave a much needed connection with the Port Hope & Lindsay Railway, and Peterborough's place on the railway map was established. Later, lines were finished to Lakefield and Belleville and, with the completion of the Ontario & Quebec Railway, now the C. P.R., Peterborough became an important railway centre.

The Famous Lift Lock.

As far back of 1833 a project was advanced for the canalizing of the Trent and Otonabee Rivers, and in 1833 a survey was made for a canal from Peterborough to Lake Simcoe. Out of this early proposal there has since developed the Trent Valley Canal, which is nearing completion from Trenton on the Bay of Quinte to Georgian Bay. The canal passes through Peterborough, and at this point there has been constructed one of the unique engineering features in connection with the work. This is a lift lock of huge proportions, containing 26,000 cubic yards of cement, the largest monolithic mass of concrete in the world.

The lock consists of two chambers constructed of steel plates, which move up and down between huge concrete guide towers. These chambers each measure 140 x 33 x 9 ft. 10 in, and have a rise of 65 feet. The guide towers are 100 feet high and measure 26 ft. 6 in. x 40 ft. 8 in. at the base. The operation of conveying a ship from one level to the other is performed in 12 minutes, the actual movement being completed in 90 seconds. The lock, which cost $500,000, was finished in 1904.

From the power standpoint Peterborough is strategically located in the centre of a district full of excellent water-powers, and as yet the potentialities of these powers have scarcely been touched. On the Trent River, the Otonabee River, and higher up the Trent Valley at Burleigh, Buckhorn and other points, there are numerous falls, some of which have been harnessed and some have not yet been developed. The Hydro-Electric Power Commission of Ontario now owns three powers, and through the Peterborough Utilities Commission the local needs are supplied. At present there is ample power available, but just as soon as the demand begins to catch up to the supply one or more of the undeveloped powers can easily be brought into action.

LOW COST OF ELECTRIC POWER

The consumption charge for the first 50 hours per month is 1.3 cents per kilowatt hour; for the second fifty watt hour and all additional consumption per month .1 cent per kilwatt hour, with a local discount of 10 h.p. per month. It will be found that these rates compare most favourably with those in force in other industrial centres in Ontario. More than that, it is to be noted that as power is derived from several points, there is much less danger of interruption of service than if the power came from a single source.

The city's water supply is secured from the Otonabee River and is taken from the river at a point well above the city. The pumping station has a captcity of 10,500,000 gals. per day, but the average required last year was only 2,970,888 gals. There are 44 miles of mains and the water is pumped direct.

A street car system is operated by the Hydro-Electric Power Commission of Ontario, supplying a service to outlying sections of the city. It is a paying utility and will presumably be eventually taken over by the city itself and operated by the Utilities Commission.

From the residential standpoint, Peterborough has much to offer both manufacturer and artisan. Apart from being physically attractive by reason of its undulations, its parks, its waterways and broad, shaded streets, it is on the threshold of one of Canada's finest lake regions, where it is possible to enjoy outdoor life to the full during the summer months. Many citizens own cottages on the Kawartha Lakes, while it is a common thing for an artisan to camp for the summer on the banks of the Otonabee and run in and out each day in his own motorboat. The pleasures of motoring and picnicing can also be enjoyed in great variety by residents of Peterborough.

NUMEROUS PARKS IN THE CITY

The city is especially well provided with parks. In the heart of the city are to be found Central Park, on which front the Collegiate Institute and the armouries; and Victoria Park with the court house and county buildings overlooking it Both of these parks are well looked after by the local Horticultural Society. On the outskirts of the city are to be found Jackson Park, East Nicholls Park, West Nicholls Park, King Edward Park and Riverside Park. Three of these parks have been gifts to the city by the Nicholls Estate and all are fine, large stretches of ground of great value to the growing city. Educationally the city is blessed with no less than nine public schools and a collegiate institute, all fine modern, buildings.

Peterborough is also fortunate in being the location of one of the new provincial normal schools. There is an excellent public library, which is the special care of a number of public-spirited citizens, and a conservatory of music. The local opera house is on one of the best theatrical circuits and there is no lack of moving picture theatres.

THE CANADIAN GENERAL ELECTRIC CO.

Of Peterborough's present-day industries, the largest and most important is that of the Canadian General Electric Company, of which Lt.-Col. the Hon. Frederic Nicholls is president and general manager. This company had its origin in a syndicate of ten Toronto citizens, formed in 1887, with a capital of $10,000, to inquire into the feasibility of establishing in Toronto electric light and power by means of underground wires. Organized in 1892, the Canadian General Electric Company took over the Toronto Construction and Electrical Supply Company, which had been formed by the syndicate the previous year, and had made an alliance with the Thomson-Houston Electric Company of Boston, and it also purchased the Canadian interests and property of the Edison Electric Light Company including the factory they had established at Peterborough.

At the time of the formation of the Canadian General Electric Company, the capital assets consisted solely of the land and buildings at Peterborough, whereas to-day it owns ten manufacturing establishments, the head office in Toronto, and seven branch office buildings. The factories comprise: The main Electrical Works at Peterborough; the Electric Porcelain Works at Peterborough; the Canada Foundry Works at Toronto; the Architectral Bronze and Iron Works at Toronto; the Canadian Sunbeam Lamp Works, Toronto; the Bridge and Structural Steel Works at Bridgeburg, Ont.; the Canadian Allis-Chalmers Works at Montreal; the Tungsten Electric Lamp Works at Montreal; and the Flour Mill Machinery Works at Stratford, Ont. In the more important centres, the branch office buildings occupied are owned by the Company and have been constructed to suit its own requirements. Each district has an adequate staff, and carries a stock of merchandize suitable to the needs of the local customers.

In the twenty-five year interval an immense expansion has taken place, which is well illustrated by the growth of the industry in Peterborough. Building has followed building and enlargement enlargement, until to-day the plant occupies a site of about thirty-five acres and employs over 2,000 hands. The principal output consists of generators, motors, transformers, switchboards, wire and cable and the heavier kinds of electrical apparatus, while an adjoining factory makes the porcelain appliances required for electric purposes. The company derives its power from its own power plants, located on the Otonabee River. In 1901 a valuable site was acquired, four miles from the works, where a power plant was installed and again, in 1910, the company secured a twenty-year lease-hold of a part of the Peterborough waterworks dam, where additional power is developed.

The company has now a paid up capital of $10,000,000, a surplus of over $4,000,000, assets of over $25,000,000, and has a total of 5,000 to 6,000 employees.

The Quaker Oats Co.

Second in importance to the works of the Canadian General Electric Co. must be ranked the huge plant of the Quaker Oats Company, now nearing completion. This industry was originally established in 1900 as the American Cereal Co., a branch of the Quaker Oats Co. It was an immense concern, shipping and receiving forty carloads a day. Burnt out over a year ago, the Company decided to rebuild in Peterborough and a second and larger plant is now under construction. It will be ready for partial operation on March 1 and for full operation on July 1.

The new plant consists of mill, nine stories and basement; dry house and cleaning house, the same; packing house, eight stories and basement; flour mill, feed plant and puffed goods plant, each nine stories and basement; and two ware houses, each eight stories and basement. The elevators adjoining will have a capacity of 1,500,000 bushels. Outside of the elevators, there will be a floor space of 600,000 square feet. Sixty thousand bushels of grain will be used every day and 100 cars, both in and out, will be required to handle each day's business. At least 3,000 h.p. of electric energy will be consumed.

Peterborough Lock Mfg. Co.

Peterborough possesses in the Peterborough Lock Mfg. Co., Limited, probably the oldest lock manufacturing industry in the Dominion. It was established in 1885 and has enjoyed a steady growth. Its product has been used in practically all parts of the Dominion in building operations. Since the war commenced, the company has branched out into the manufacture of military hardware, that is, buckles and brass equipment for soldiers' uniforms, and has during the past year manufactured a large quantity of ship hardware for the various ships being built in all parts of the Dominion. It has also turned out large quantities of shell box bands and plug castings.

The Canoe Industry.

Peterborough has long been famous for its canoes and there are to-day at least two flourishing industries making canoes and other craft. The older of the two is the Peterborough Canoe Co., which was founded in 1879 by the late Col. J. Z. Rogers. This company has grown to considerable proportions and now operates a plant with a capacity of 3,000 craft per annum. This consists of the main factory, comprising three buildings, with a total floor space of 38,000 sq. feet, and several storage warehouses, with 30,000 sq. feet floor space. The factory is equipped with up-to-date woodworking machinery and with all necessary plant for manufacturing boats of all kinds. In addition to canoes and small boats, the company also manufacture motor boats of all sizes, and steamboats, and it has turned out quite a few special boats, ranging from 45 ft. to 100 ft. It also manufactures toboggans. Prior to the war the average yearly production ran about 2,200 boats.

The other boat and canoe manufacturing plant is that of the Canadian Canoe Company, which was organized in 1892. This company occupies a three-storey building, erected in 1911, and having a floor space of 14,500 sq. feet. The company's output runs to 1,000 craft a year, these including wooden and canvas-covered canoes, outboard motor skiffs and all small pleasure craft.

Bonner-Worth Co., Limited.

Peterborough was selected by the Bonner-Worth Co., Limited, in 1911 for the location of its plant, because it was centrally located between Quebec and Ontario, because it looked to be a good place to secure plenty of female help, and because the water supply was found to be suitable for dyeing, which was a very important consideration. The company manufactures all kinds of worsted yarns (supplying the knitting factories, making sweaters, hosiery and fancy knit goods), weaving yarns, carpet yarns and also hand knitting yarns, which it sells to the retail trade. The business has grown rapidly and several enlargements of plant have been made. About 275 hands are employed.

The De Laval Co., Limited.

The De Laval Co., Ltd., is the cumulative result of the business activities, first, of The De Laval Mfg. Co., which began in Montreal in 1899, and The De Laval Separator Co., which began in Toronto in 1901. The company was interested purely in a sales way at that time, of developing the organization for the distribution of its De Laval cream separators and other special centrifugal machinery. After several years of effort in Ontario, and having well organized that province, the company removed to Montreal for the purpose of giving better attention to eastern territory and being more centrally located on the whole. The company's western activities were looked after by its Winnipeg offices currently with those of the eastern offices. Having, after a matter of some ten years, well organized the entire Dominion in a sales way, and having acquired several business

NO ALCOHOL IN GIN PILLS

Many have wondered how the famous old household remedy, Gin Pills, derived its name, since obviously there could be no spirits contained in pill form.

The origin of Gin Pills can be traced to Gin, which has for a great many years been recognized for its medicinal qualities, particularly its beneficial effects on Kidney complaints.

But in the first place there are many who have conscientious objections to taking alcohol, even as a medicine. Secondly, the curative agent of Gin operates in spite of the alcohol, not because the alcohol is a help to the cure.

Investigations were made to determine just what it was in Gin that tended to relieve Rheumatism, Lumbago, Sciatica, Backache, Swollen Joints, Constant Headaches and all disorders arising from the kidneys, bladder and urinary system.

This active agent, separated from the alcohol, was then combined with other diuretics and given the name of Gin Pills, for which a demand has grown greater than for any other medicine in Canada. Gin Pills have a wonderful record of success and anyone applying to the manufacturers can obtain copies of many of the testimonials received.

Gin Pills are sold by all dealers everywhere on a strict guarantee of satisfaction or your money back. They are 50c. a box or 6 boxes for $2.50. A free sample can be obtained by writing to the National Drug & Chemical Co. of Canada, Limited, Toronto, or to the U. S. address, Na-Dru-Co Inc., 202 Main St., Buffalo, N.Y. 129

HOW can we produce more eggs? by your help we can do it, there are tons of good hen feed thrown into the garbage collection and taken to the Incinerator and destroyed by fire. Now I am not playing with the horses, but am devoting my time to help produce more food and I want your help. If every housewife in Peterborough and every girl will save me the waste that fowls will eat, my men will call and get it and grind it up. ¶ Save your bones, rind off meat and fat you can't use.

I can grind it up and make Hen Feed, and the people who keep hens will use it and all you have to do is 'phone 1389 and we will be after your scraps and buy all the old rags, rubber, old iron and junk you have to sell.

Those that keep hens can have our hen-feed delivered to them by calling up 1389. Farmers when in town can call at the factory next to the cold storage and take home 100 lbs. or more. Farmers should 'phone their order in so we will have it ready for them when they call.

Let us all get together and do business and lick Germany to a finish by producing food for the soldiers' wives and children. Fathers and Mothers who are here with us, of the Good brave men who will win and bring honour and glory to the flag that has stood the storm for 1,000 years, and, that the sun never sets on the dear old flag, and it will never be beaten or disgraced by beer drinking Germany or any other country on earth; for He who never sleeps and direct all battles will see to it that the flag still flies and the great nation he has created shall not be trodden down. Let us all do our best in our little way and we must win. Don't forget to ring 1389.

With a Union Government a Union people each doing their bit, all pulling together, we must keep the flag flying.

In Selecting her corset—

IN SELECTING her Corset, let the stout woman see to it that she buys her corset in a size large enough, and that she adjusts it to her figure without tightening it too much at the waist. It is a great temptation to the large woman to draw up her corset, as much as she can. The flesh, however, may be compressed just so much and no more. After that, it goes up or down, as the case may be, causing ugly lines, a red face and an extremely awkward walk. The corset may be made quite tight about the hips, but it must be left easy at the waist line and around the top.

If your figure is stout, or regardless of its requirements, there is a particular Corset model which will supply your needs. Prices range

$1.00, $1.25, $1.50, $2.00, $2.50, $3.00, $3.50, $5.00

THE ANNUAL MEETING OF ST. ANDREW'S PRESBYTERIAN CHURCH

Successful Year has Been Closed—Annual Statment of the Session—Message from Rev. James Rollins

The annual meeting of St. Andrews' Presbyterian church was held on Thursday night, and the reports submitted indicated that an exceedingly prosperous year had been passed. The Session report expressed thankful acknowldgment to God for his goodness during the past year, and prayer for His blessing and guidance in the days that are to come.

The hand of death had been very heavy during the year and a number of devoted and faithful members had been called away. Special mention was made of Mrs. Hugh Waddell who by her personal efforts and generaus liberality had done much to promote the cause of Christ, both in the congregation and in the wider field of the church's home and foreign missions. Sympathy was extended to all those who had suffered loss.

During the year 17 were received into the membership of the church by profssion of faith, and 13 by certificate, making a net gain of 20 to the communion roll.

MANAGING BOARD.

The report of the Managinng Board was especially satisfactory. Despite the war and the many calls upon the liberality of the people, the financial statement was very satisfactory, and a deficit which has existed for a number of years was completely removed.

The congregation is now in the happy position of having a fine property, well situated in a good residential district, entirely free of debt. A number of the members gave voice to the feeling that the congregation should now give more largely for missions, and that a special effort should be made to increase the givings of the people for the larger work of the church in our great home and foreign fields.

The total amount contributed for all purposes during the last year was $8,078, of which $2,066 was given to missions.

MILITARY SERVICE.

The Military Service Committee reported that there were 64 names on the honor roll of the church, and of these 7 had fallen, and 6 had returned, and been honorably discharged.

An honor roll book for the church is being prepared, in which will be entered the names of all those who have gone from the church to serve their country, with a brief statement of their services, and any honors that may have been given them.

A recommendation was adopted by the congregation that at the close of the war a tablet should be erected in the church on which would be engraved the names of those who had fallen.

ANNUAL STATEMENT.

In looking over the year that is past and planning for the one on which we have just entered, it is the desire of the Session that, as a congregation, we should render to God our thankful acknowledgment of all the goodness He has shown us in the year that is gone, and look to Him with full confidence for guidance in the days to come. For whatever may have been accomplished, and for the blessings that may have come to us, we give Him praise. Our prayer is that He may make us stronger, more earnest and devoted for the coming duties, in order that, through us He may do greater things than in the past.

To many the year brought sorrow and bereavement. Among the number of those called away by death, were Mr. D. Thornton, and Mrs. Waddell, both of whom had long been devoted and faithful members of the congregation. The latter, not only by her personal efforts, but by her generous liberality, did much to promote the cause of Christ, both in the congregation here and in the wider field of the church's home and foreign missions. The sympathy of the Session is extended to all who have suffered loss.

THE WORKERS.

To the officers and teachers of the Sunday school, who throughout the year rendered such faithful, unselfish and devoted service, we tender our tribute of thanks and appreciation. We express our sense of indebtedness to the leader and members of the choir for the pleasant, efficient and inspiring manner in which they have lead in the service of praise. The Ladies' Aid Society, the Patriotic Society, the various missionary organizations, and all others who have helped by their efforts to make the congregation an effective force in promoting the cause of rigtheousness and Christianity, we desire to thank, and encourage.

A break in the work took place in the early part of the year when a call to wider sphere came to Rev. T. H. Mitchell, minister in charge. The place that Mr. Mitchell had made for himself in the hearts of the people led many to fear that it would be hard to find one to replace him. It was with feelings of thankfulness therefore that after a short vacancy the services of the present minister were secured, and that under his leadership the work has gone on so pleasantly and prosperously.

A REMINDER.

The continued absence of the pastor is a reminder (were any such necessary) that the shadow of the war still hangs over us. As is probably well known to most of the congregation, Mr. Rollins was some time ago transferred to the chaplaincy of a Forestry battalion licated at Sunningdale, near London. It is his expectation to be moved to France with the battalion very shortly now. That he and his family may be kept safe and strong is the hope and prayer of all.

Complying with the request of the General Assembly, a Military Service Committee was appointed to take charge of matters connected with the welfare of members of the congregation who are serving at the front and to deal with all matters concerned with the relationship of the congregation to the war.

The office of Roll Clerk was created and Mr. W. G. Read chosen for it. The care of the membership roll has been given over to him.

The statistics for the year are as follows:

Members on roll, January 1st, 1917 530.

Added during the year: By profession of faith, 17, by certificate, 13 total 30.

CABLE FROM REV. MR. ROLLINS.

A cable which was received this week from Rev. Mr. Rollins, pastor of St. Andrews, wishing the congregation all success during the coming year, was read by Mr. Richardson.

RESOLUTION OF THANKS.

A resolution of appreciation for the splendid work of Rev. Mr. Rowand acting pastor of the church, was passed. Hearty appreciation was also expressed for Mrs. Rowand.

Meeting Emergencies: As with the individuals composing it, so it is and must be with a family, a city, county, state or nation.

Are you resourceful and quick to apply new remedies to new conditions or even to old conditions that are seriously wrong?

The most serious difficulty that I have had to contend with in my quarter of a century of educational work for good health has been carelessness. The second next difficulty has been the habit of running to the drug store for pills and other dope that has been made to sell and not to cure. The third trouble has been that so many people that are really sick and need prompt attention in order to save them from a more serious condition, are afraid to go to the doctor for fear that he may find them to be suffering with an incurable disease. When the ostrich hides its head in the sand it has not in the least reduced the danger and the mere fact that the doctor correctly diagnoses the disease does not increase the danger, instead it enables you to take timely precaution and the fighting chance for a cure. I believe there is no disease but what can be cured if taken in time. Many very desperate cases have been cured and health fully restored simply because the sufferer had the good sense to fight hand in hand with nature, which in the last analysis is scientific treatment applied with practical good sense.

The most scientific men of the day are those that use the most practical and effective means to accomplish the desired results. The mere fact that a certain prescription was written by a famous physician does not make it equal in value to a hot compress applied properly for certain conditions.

It has been my desire always to teach you how to apply the best means available to the case in hand. The many thousands of letters I receive tell me of your success. The reports of failures come from those that are careless, that took at the same time liberal doses of some patent medicine or they waited too long before they applied the treatment.

Every family should have my Home Health Club Books. They tell in simple, easily understood language just how to apply home remedies in the most effective manner to insure satisfactory results, that is relief during the emergency without danger of bad after effects.

CLUB NOTES.

I will gladly answer all inquiries for information on health subjects from readers of this publication, if the same are addressed to Home Health Club, 5039 Cottage Grove Avenue, Chicago, Ill. Send full name and address with 4 cents in postage.

Dear Doctor: The enclosed clipping is from your newspaper article of last March. Can you give me any information regarding Medicago Sativa, mentioned in "Food and Medicine," under the Home Health Club? A druggist here says it is a patent medicine advertisement. Is he right? Thanking you for any information, I am, W.S.P.

(Answer): The herb which you inquire about, Medicago Sativa, is nothing more than Alfalfa, as stated in the article itself, and the druggist who told you that it might be the name of a patent medicine, was certainly not very well informed. He should have looked in his medical dictionary for the medicinal name of Alfalfa, and I think he would readily have found it. Undoubtedly there are near you drug mills which could easily grind the alfalfa for you if you decide to experiment. You can do so with perfect safety. Medicago Sativa is Alfalfa. Farmers use it with which to feed their cattle and hogs. It is an excellent food and has a faculty of increasing the flow of milk in cows and of fattening hogs and cattle quite readily, and when used as a drug in the form of tinctures or extracts, gives the user greater ability to digest his food. It also increases the appetite so that one who uses it is quite likely to increase in weight.

Dear Doctor: Will you please tell me through the columns of the Home Health Club the symptoms of blood pressure, high or low, and what it should be at fifty years of age?

—J. L.

(Answer): High blood pressure is due to a variety of causes, chief of which are mental or physical overwork, overeating, drugs and alcohol, acute and infectious diseases, syphilis, etc. You can therefore readily see that it is caused by an auto-intoxication of some kind.

Low blood pressure is also associated with a variety of conditions, and is found in tuberculosis, general debility, under feeding and sometimes in the acute infectious diseases, chronic tobacco poisoning, where a large amount of fluid is withdrawn from the circulation, Neurasthenia, shock, hemorrhage, diarrhoea, chronic toxemia, etc. The blood pressure varies at different times of the day, is affected by position, exercise, excitement, digestion, etc. At 50 years the blood pressure should be about 128, generally 10 lower in women. I may further say in this connection that the age has a great deal to do with it and that what is known as Arteriosclerosis or old age, will influence this considerably. As already stated much lepends upon each individual case and if you had a special purpose of asking these questions I would suggest that you explain the matter to me fully. I will then be able to give you further suggestions and advice.

Health is a state of physical, mental and moral equilibrium, a normal funcitionating of body, mind and soul. It is a pleasure when the world looks good and beautiful, and the battle of life seems worth while. Health is the anithithesis of disease, degeneracy and crime.

Do you know Twenty-five years ago the man who cared for his health was considered a crank. To-day we find practically the reverse true and a greatly lowered death rate. Upon personal health depends personal efficiency, the capacity to earn, the capacity to enjoy life and the ability to live long. No man knowingly sacrifices many years of his own life, yet through ignorance thousands of useful citizens are lost to their families and to the commonwealth each year.

Nuxated Iron Makes Strong, Vigorous Iron Men, and Beautiful Healthy, Rosy Cheeked Women

Former Hospital Physician and Medical Examiner says that in three weeks it Virtually Revitalized His Whole System.

Gee! That there stuff (Nuxated Iron) acts like magic. It certainly puts the ginger of youth into a man.

In a recent discourse on the subject of iron deficiency in the blood of American men and women Dr. R. B. Vail, formerly Physician in the Baltimore Hospital, said: "Throughout my experience on Hospital Staffs and as Medical Examiner, I have been astonished at the number of patients who have vainly doctored for various diseases when in reality their delicate, rundown state was simply the result of lack of iron in the blood. Time and again I have prescribed organic iron — Nuxated Iron—and surprised patients at the rapidity with which the weakness and general debility were replaced by a renewed feeling of strength and vitality. I took Nuxated Iron myself to build me up after a serious case of nervous exhaustion. The effects were apparent after a few days and within three weeks it had virtually revitalized my whole system and put me in a superb physical condition. It is not surprising that millions of people annually are now taking Nuxated Iron and physicians everywhere are prescribing it. Dr. James Francis Sullivan, formerly Physician of Bellevue Hospital (Outdoor Dept.), New York, and the Westchester County Hospital, says: "For want of iron you may be an old man at thirty, dull of intellect, poor in memory, nervous, irritable and all run-down, while at 50 or 60 with plenty of iron in your blood you may still be young in feeling, full of life, your whole being brimming over with energy and vital force."

Former Health Commissioner Wm. R. Kerr, of the City of Chicago, says: "I am well past my three-score years and wan to say that I believe my own great physical activity is due largely to-day to my personal use of Nuxated Iron, and if my endorsement shall induce anaemic, nervous, run-down men and women to take Nuxated Iron, and receive the wonderful tonic benefits which I have received, I shall feel greatly gratified that I have made an exception to my life-long rule in recommending it. From my own experience with Nuxated Iron I feel that it is such a valuable remedy that it should be used in every hospital and prescribed in every physician in this country.

Nuxated Iron, recommended above by Drs. Vail and Sullivan and Former Health Commissioner Kerr, is for sale by McIlree Bros. & Jory, and all good druggists on an absolute guarantee of success and satisfaction or your money refunded.

SPANDAU

In Suburb of Berlin Was Stored French Indemnity.

If there is one name which will always be associated with the idea of indemnity, so much discussed to-day, that name will be Spandau, a city in Brandenburg, Germany, some seven miles north-west of Berlin, of which it is now practically a suburb. Spandau, which had its origin far back in medieval times, has always been a kind of stronghold of the monarchy in Prussia, and it was in the Julius Tower, of the Castle of Spandau, that the Germans, after the war of 1870-71, decided to establish a great emergency treasure chest. This chest was to contain nothing but gold, which was to be at the immediate disposal of the imperial military authorities, without any reference to votes or like slow expedients. As a nucleus for this treasure, Bismarck used the remnant of the great indemnity which he exacted from France by the treaty of Frankfort, and although no official statements have been made on the subject, it was generally understood that there was accumulated in the Julius Tower not less than £6,000,000 in bullion. The "Tower of Spandau," therefore, has become almost synonymous with indemnity, with Bismarck's whole political conception of reducing France to impotency by crippling her financially.

Spandau, as has been said, dates its history from early medieval times. It was, indeed, one of the most important cities in the Altmark, and was for a long time one of the favorite residences of the Hohenzollern electors of Brandenburg. It first obtained civil rights in the first half of the Thirteenth Century, and later on was strongly fortified; but it was not able to withstand the Swedish onslaught in 1635, and during the Napoleonic wars it succumbed to France. The most interesting feature, indeed, of the history of Spandau was its fate after the disastrous German campaign against Napoleon, that culminated in the battles of Jena and Auerstadt. It was after Auerstadt, when Scharnhorst had failed, just when he was on the point of succeeding in carrying through his forlorn hope against Napoleon, when the King of Prussia, accompanied by General Blucher, rode for fourteen hours in momentary danger of capture, that Spandau capitulated. One of the most remarkable features of that remarkable campaign was the extraordinary rapidity with which the morale of the German forces changed. One day they were full of arrogance, going to sweep the usurper of France away from German territory, and then, after Jena and Auerstadt, their sentiments were entirely reversed. One fortress after another capitulated, with hardly any resistance. The first to go was Erfurt, surrendering 11,000 men and vast stores of material. The next was Spandau.

In recent times, the city has been largely developed as a great German arsenal. Before the war, some 6,000 men were employed there, and since August, 1914, although little is known about the matter, there can be no question that vast developments have taken place. Lying, as it does, on naturally swamp ground, at the confluence of the Rivers Haved and Spree, it is already practically a part of Berlin, for there is town all the way. Charlottenburg being, of course, the connecting link. Spandau is an interesting place, too, in the matter of surroundings. Four or five miles north-east of the town, for instance, is the Castle of Tegel, the home of the famous brothers Humboldt; Alexander, the great naturalist and traveler, and Karl Wilhelm, the diplomatist, philologist, and man of letters. Then, ten miles to the south-west, is Potsdam, one of the principal residences of the Kaiser.

projects closely related to its own line of manufacturers, the company's name was changed to that of "The De Laval Co., Ltd." and its various businesses in a manufacturing way were concentrated in the City of Peterborough in 1912.

The Company's line of manufactures include the De Laval cream separators and other centrifugal machinery, the Ideal green feed silos, creamery and milk plant machinery, including pasteurizers, churns, coolers vats, pumps and various other related accessories of use in the creamery cheese factory and milk plant industries.

The company is capitalized at $1,000,000, fully paid up. Its factory in Peterborough was referred to by Industrial Canada some time ago as being a model of convenience and general arrangement. The factory buildings are of one story, saw-tooth roof construction. The creamery factory wing is approximately 110 ft. by 58 ft.; the warehouse is 110 ft. by 220 feet., and the separator factory, with the tin shop is, 110 ft. by, approximately, 250 ft. The entire plant is constructed of concrete and steel with buff brick facing, and is fully sprinklered throughout. Fire protection has been amply provided for in all details. The company's ground space covers approxmiately sixteen acres.

The Company uses, approximately, 4,000,000 feet of lumber per annum in its various manufactures of wood. The office building is generally regarded by those who have visited it as being as fine as anything that Canada has to show in all of its appointments, the company believing that those who are engaged in its business do better work by reason of a pleasant environment.

ESTABLISHED MANY YEARS.

A Peterborough industry which dates far back into the last century is the Peter Hamilton Co., Limited, manufacturers of farm implements. It was established in 1848 by the late James Hamilton. The company employs about eighty hands and produces all the lighter lines of implements such as cultivators, drills, harrows mowers, rakes, etc. These implements have always enjoyed a good reputation and considerable export business, especially to Australia, has been done in them.

The name Hamilton is a well-known one in Peterborough for there are two manufacturing establishments with this name. The second is the Wm. Hamilton Mfg. Co. This company was founded in 1857, when it took over the foundry of James Harvey. The joint stock company was formed in 1888.

COLONIAL WEAVING CO.

An industry which has been displaying originality of effort since the war started is the Colonial Weaving Co. This company, which was organized in 1903, specializes in woven silk and cotton labels for the use of garment and hat manufacturers. Starting with six machines, it is now operating fifty, and giving employment to about eighty hands. In addition to labels, the company is now making cotton non-elastic webbing, dress belts tapes, trimmings and embroideries. It has succeeded in producing several lines of embroidery formerly made in Germany and is meeting with success in marketing them.

ADAM HALL, LIMITED.

Peterborough possesses an old-established stove and range industry in the manufacturing establishment of Adam Hall, Limited. As originally started, the output of the plant was limited to ranges and heaters for use in lumbering camps, where primitive conditions then prevailed, and for thirty-seven years Adam Hall products figured prominently in the equipment of lumber and construction camps throughout the timber districts of Canada. The success of these lumberman ranges and heaters led later to the manufacture of household lines, these being known as the "Topics."

B. F. ACKERMAN, SON & CO.

One of Peterborough's expanding industries, which has now been located in the city for a quarter of a century, is that of B. F. Ackerman, Son & Co. This firm have long specialized in saddlery, harness and general leather goods. The industry was started in 1871 in Port Perry by Mr. B. F. Ackerman, but in 1892 was removed to Peterborough, where at first rented premises were occupied. With the growth of business, however, the large three-story building at present occupied by the Company was erected in 1899. Later a branch established was opened in Regina. The company has recently demonstrated its virility by commencing the manufacture of boots and shoes, in addition to the established lines.

A recent addition to the list of Peterborough industries is the Vermont Marble Co., which was established in 1813. It engages in the manufacture of marble for building purposes, and when the building business is good in the neighbourhood of fifty men are employed. The company's head office is located in Proctor, Vt.

J. J. TURNER & SONS, LIMITED

A certain amount of personal interest attaches to the manufacturing establishment of J. & J. Turner & Sons, Limited, in that it has been built up from small beginnings by a father and four sons. It was started originall in 1870 by the late J. J. Turner, and was devoted exclusively at first to the making of sails. Later its scope was extended to include tents, awnings and flags, while more recently horse blankets have been added to the list of products. The firm now consists of the four sons of the founder and about 150 hands are employed.

MATTHEWS - BLACKWELL LTD.

The Peterborough plant of Matthews-Blackwell, Limited, was established in the early eighties by George Matthews, of Lindsay, and later under the management of his son, T. E. Matthews, the business expanded very considerably. The present company is the result of a merger of the original Matthews Company with the Lang Packing Company and other concerns.

SOME OTHER INDUSTRIES.

The Brinton Carpet Co., who manufacture Wilton, Brussels and Axminster carpets, located in Peterborough in 1905. They employ about 80 hands at present and operate 36 Brussels and Wilton and 10 Axminster looms.

Among other industries located in Peterborough are Henry Hope & Sons, a branch of an English firm, who manufacture metal sash and doors for factories and public buildings and other fire-proof materials; G. Walter Green, Limited, who make sawmill machinery and castings; the Peterborough Lumber Co., whose saw mills produce from eight to nine million lath and shingles per annum; the estate of A. McDonald, manufacturers of lumber, lath, shingles, boxes, box shooks, etc.

Could this be Said of Any Talking Machine?

Christine Miller

ONE of the most celebrated of concert contraltos is Miss Christine Miller. Miss Miller is also one of the celebrated Edison artists. It is not by mere arrangement that Miss Miller continues recording for The New Edison. It is due considerably to her great joy in her art and the perfection consummated only in Mr. Edison's "Re-Creation" of her voice. The actual living voice of Christine Miller and Thomas A. Edison's "Re-Creation" of it are identical.

Christine Miller's recent letter to Mr. Edison, expressing her appreciation of The New Edison, is significant of the wonder of The New Edison in view of the fact that Miss Miller is listed as a talking machine artist and formerly sang for talking machine records.

CHINA'S NEW "EMPEROR."

Latest Claimant of Title Has Named Haokung as Capital.

News was recently received of serious disturbances on the Szechuan frontier, in China, caused by the appearance of an aboriginal priest, who claims to be the "emperor" both of his tribes and of the nation. The priest's name is Tuchs, and he has been accustomed to eat the flesh of tigers, wolves, leopards, and also the human heart.

The priest fixed the twenty-eighth day of the fifth moon of this year to raise his standard, and on that date all Mohammedans in his district might be murdered. He is alleged to have murdered already more than 2,655 Mohammedans at Chang-teng.

He has issued a decree to erect pagodas of the heads of the murdered Mohammedans. The pagoda at Menku Hill, says the report, was constructed out of 5,000 human heads. On the day of his coronation 2,000 cattle and 800 jars of wine were used for the feasting of his followers. He appointed a consort and several concubines, and organized a grand secretariat, which gave appointment of viceroys to various provinces.

The "Board of Punishment" has issued a proclamation fixing curious ways of punishment. When an opium smoker is found, his lips shall be cut; when a person is found to spread rumors, his tongue shall be cut; when a man is found swearing, a tooth shall be taken out; and thieves shall have their hands cut.

Lately a decree was issued by the priest making Haokung city his capital. The policy of his Government is to prohibit opium, to allow people to work mines, to organize relief work, and to enforce a system of compulsory education.—Tit-Bits.

Prussian Primaries.

In Prussia the selection of the popular half of the legislative body is carried out in two successive operations. For electoral purposes, the state is divided into Zirkel, or electoral districts, subdivided in turn into Urwahlbezirke, which correspond to our primary districts. In the primaries every male citizen over twenty-four can vote, not, to be sure, for a deputy, but for an elector, or Wahlmann, who represents the voter and 249 of his fellow-citizens. The vigor of the popular vote is still further emasculated by the division of the electorate into three classes based on taxes. Though the classes differ greatly in number, each possesses an equal share in the vote.

On the day of the primaries the voters goes to the polls. The polling place has no ballot box, ballots, or mysterious voting machine, nor any other of the arcana to which the Canadian voter is accustomed. On the table before the chairman of the polls lies a large book filled with the names, occupations, and addresses of the voters. Presenting as identification the card which summoned him to the polls, the voter is asked to designate his choice for Wahlmann, which he must do orally and in a loud voice. The chairman is not the only one who takes cognizance of the choice; for among the interested spectators is likely to be the agent of his employer, if the voter is a laboring man, or of his landlord, if he is a peasant. They have attended to observe the docility with which this member of the proletariat follows his patron. Like other German institutions, the elections are always orderly and are conducted with scrupulous honesty.

On the eighth day thereafter the Wahlmanner who have thus been chosen by absolute majority at the primaries are summoned to the chief place of the Zirkel to ballot publicly for deputies to the Landtag. The results of the votes in the electoral colleges is a House, to which all Prussians thirty years of age are eligible, but of which about a half is of noble birth.

A Russian Landscape.

One day as I was returning home, I accidentally strayed into a place I did not know. The sun was already sinking, and the shades of evening lay across the flowering rye. Two rows of old, closely planted, very tall fir trees stood like two dense walls, forming a picturesque, gloomy avenue. I easily climbed over the fence and walked along the avenue, slipping over the fir-needles which lay two inches deep on the ground. It was still and dark, and only here and there on the high tree-tops the vivid golden light quivered and made rainbows in the spiders' webs. There was a strong, almost stifling smell of resin. Then I turned into a long avenue of limes. Here, too, all was desolation and age, last year's leaves rustled mournfully under my feet, and in the twilight shadows lurked between the trees. From the old orchard on the right came the faint, reluctant note of the golden oriole, who must have been old too. But at last the limes ended. I walked by an old white house of two stories with a terrace, and there suddenly opened before me a view of a courtyard, a large pond with a bathing house, a group of green willows, and a village on the further bank, with a high narrow belfry on which there glittered a cross reflecting the setting sun.—Anton Tchehov (Tr. from the Russian by Constance Garnett.)

Feast of All Saints.

The Feast of All Saints, of which observance of Hallowe'en is the precursor, was instituted in the fourth century by the Greek church, which appointed the first Sunday after Easter for the observance. The modern festival was not instituted by the Roman church, however, until the ninth century, by Pope Gregory IV. It was introduced because of the impossibility of keeping a separate day for every saint, and also to give a Christian character to the autumnal festival, which was a relic of pagan times. The lighting of bonfires at nightfall by the members of each household was long the principal feature of the Hallowe'en observance.

When Cowboys Marry.

There is a story in American Magazine in which several cowboys who have adopted a young child decide that one of them should marry so that a woman would be on the ranch to care for Little Red. Here is part of the situation:

"We argued explosively and long, but decided, awful as it was, we would do it for Little Red. Earnestly we went over the list of eligible women whom we knew. They were mighty scarce in the Topa Topa country. We were not particular about a lot of things, but our wife had to have one attribute—she had to be good. No one could be too good for Little Red's foster mother. As the boys named them off I wrote them down. It was a mighty short list. When Jake spoke of Miss Eliza Squires, Tom protested.

"'Now you jest wait,' he began, 'that piece of dried beef is darn well cured, but—'

"'Don't you go knockin' no women here, Tom,' interrupted Dave. 'We only got a few of the critters to pick from, an' how'd you feel if you said a lot o' low-down things about one, an' then had to cut her out an' marry her?'

"That silenced all unfavorable opinion, except in very obvious cases. Pretty soon somebody mentioned the school-teacher.

"'Don't put her down,' argued Tom. 'She ain't the kind that marries the likes o' us, an' I think too plumb much of her to marry her, anyways.'

"'We, too!' we chorused in agreement.

"The list was complete mighty quick, because we knew only three women who might fill the prescription. One was the widow Bolton. She was about forty, and there were two hundred pounds of her. As Jake said, she was a real woman. Next came Sim Blake's cousin, Miss Hanly. She was a drooping spinster of thirty-five or that vicinity. Miss Eliza was last. Just hearing her name made us nervous."

The power was shut off in the early stage of the fire, and was still off at 3 o'clock in the afternoon, with the result that the street cars were out of commission. PODOLIA A RICH REGION.

Facts About Most Fertile Province in Russia.

When the Austro-Germans, following the disorganization of the Russian armies on the Galician front, crossed the Zbrucz river, which separates Russia from Austria-Hungary, they entered the province of Podolia, which next to Moscow is the most densely populated in the empire.

Podolia is one of the richest and most fertile regions in all Russia. It lies entirely within what is known as Little Russia, with South Russia bordering it on the south, and West Russia on the north. The Bug river, which crosses the province from north-west to south-east, runs parallel to the Dneister, which forms the western boundary. The railroad extending from Lemberg to Odessa crosses the province midway between the Bug and the Dniester.

The valley on the Bug is somewhat higher than that of the Dniester, and for a great part of its course the river is bordered by swamps and woodlands largely impenetrable to armies. Another railroad crosses the province at right angles to the Lemburg-Odessa road, while in the south-eastern section there are several other lines.

The climate of the province is rather cool in summer and cold in winter.

Sugar is the leading product of the province, no other state in the empire except Kiev having a larger output. A great deal of grain is grown and much flour is manufactured. Spirits and tobacco also are produced in considerable quantities.

The population of the province is approximately 4,000,000, and there are some 5,000 manufacturing establishments, having 40,000 employes with an annual normal production valued at $40,000,000. Stock raising is also an important industry, and before the war there was a very large trade in horses, cattle, and sheep with Austria-Hungary.

The history of the province is full of interest. The days of the Romans are kept in memory by the wall of Trajan which passes through several of its districts. When Poland became one of Europe's principal nations, Podolia was annexed to it and formed a part of the Polish empire until the last partition, which occurred in 1796.

The menace of the invasion of the soil of Podolia and Bessarabia by the Austro-German is probably more apparent than real, at least so far as the predicted drive on Odessa is concerned. It must be remembered that it is more than 250 miles, as the crow flies, between the present battle line of the Austro-Germans and the city reputed to be their objective. A line of communication stretched that long at a time when fighting men are more than at a premium, would either have to be so thinly defended or draw so many troops from other points, that the geographic difficulties involved would be many. The Lemberg-Odessa railroad is not in good condition, it is said, while the highways of both Podolia and Bessarabia are by no means comparable to the macadam highways of the west. In wet weather the roads have practically no bottom, and are next to impassable for heavy guns and wagon trains.

Birds' Nests for Soup.

The birds'-nests from which the Far-famed Chinese soup is made are built by a species of swallow that abounds on the coasts of Java, Ceylon, and Borneo, and consist of a gelatinous substance obtained from marine plants. The nests are boiled either in chicken-broth or in milk of almonds, and the result very much resembles vermicelli soup, except that it is far more costly.

The County Council this morning granted $30,000 to the Patriotic Fund in monthly installments of $2,500. This year it is proposing $10,000 for the British Red Cross and $2,000 for the Canadian Patriotic Fund.

Chamberlain and Dragon.

Lady Jeune once asked Joseph Chamberlain why, in his opinion, so many men fall short of their ambition. And Mr. Chamberlain answered: "They come to the place where they turn back. They may have killed the dragon at the first bridge, and at the second, perhaps even at the third; but the dragons are always more formidable the farther we go. Many turn back disheartened, and very few will meet the monsters to the end, but those who do have won forever."

WHERE BERNADOTTE FOUGHT.

Armies in Italy Are Battling on Historic Ground.

The territory of Northern Italy through which the Tagliamento, Livinzia and Piave rivers flow and which has now been crossed by the Austro-German forces, is known as the Venetian Plain and is dotted with Italian towns of great historic and art interest.

The Tagliamento river, whose flooded banks served as a rampart for the retreating Italians for only a few days is a stream of no value commercially. It is one of many small rivers rising in the Carnic Alps and flowing through the Venetian Plain into the Adriatic. Its headwaters are near Mount Clapsavon, about 65 miles northwest of its entrance into the Adriatic, but the course of the stream is meandering, flowing first to the east and then south, through a marshy valley, thus traversing a distance of 100 miles.

Just 120 years ago the Tagliamento figured prominently in another great military campaign in northern Italy. It was during Napoleon's campaign of 1797 that reinforcements were greatly needed by the French. Bernadotte, who afterward was placed by Napoleon on the throne of Sweden as Charles XIV., led his army with signal dispatch from the banks of the Rhine to his commander-in-chief, and at the passage of the Tagliamento, won enduring distinction.

The Tagliamento flows past no important cities of Venetia. The most important of the small towns that squat upon its marshy banks are Venzone 20 miles by rail from the Austro-Italian frontier; Spilimbergo, and Latisana. The last named place is equi-distant from Venice and Trieste on the 100-mile railway which connects those two important cities.

The Tagliamento flows 15 miles to the west of Udine, the first Italian city of importance to fall before the onrushing Teutonic forces in the present offensive.

In ancient times the Tagliamento was known as Tilaventus.

The Livenza river, to which line the Italians fell back after having been driven across the Tagliamento, is not more than 75 miles in length, but it has numerous tributaries, chief among those on the east being the Meduna, the Giume and the Sile, while the Monticano and the Meschia are affluents of the west bank. The point at which the Livenza mingles its waters with the Adriatic is only 28 miles north-east of Italy's priceless jewel city, Venice. Chief among the Italian towns of historic interest are Portogruaro, San Vito, Azzano, and the ruins of Concordia Sagittaria, the ancient Roman military station. It is probable that Venice is now wrapped in darkness at night from necessity as well as from military policy. The city receives its electricity through a high-tension current generated at the falls of Cellina, which are midway between the Tagliamento and Livena, some 50 miles north-east of the Mistress of the Adriatic. This wire was undoubtedly severed by the advance guard of the Austro-German forces.

Doctoring Wounded Trees.

Of all the restoration work done in France, I do not know of any more ingenious or more interesting than the doctoring of wounded trees. The French soldiers are taught first aid to injured trees, and it is necessary, for the retreating Germans show an absolutely fiendish efficiency in ravishing the orchards and forests and shade trees in the villages. When they had time they would fell the trees, but when the close pursuit of the Allies forbade this, they set their kultur to work to girdle the trunks, cutting off a circle of bark in such fashion as to kill in a few days a fruit tree which might have been a half-century attaining its productiveness. But the French armies, hard on their tracks, would bind up the wounds—first with a special grafting cement, and, when the supply of that gave out, with tar, and finally with loamy clay. Red Cross ambulance drivers and stretcher carriers assisted and often bandages from their store were used. Lately it has been found that moss twisted and tied about the dressed wound was as effective as the bandage.

THE MIND OF THE HUN

GERMAN CHILDREN ARE TAUGHT THAT WAR IS SUBLIME.

The United States Government Has Compiled an Interesting Volume Showing the Philosophy of the Teutons Which Prepared the Way for Their Cruelties in the War.

"CONQUEST and Kultur Aims of the Germans in Their Own Words" is the title of a book of 17 pages issued from Washington by the committee on public information. This book is designed to make clear the ideals of war and conquest that have been cultivated persistently in Germany, but are so unlike the thinking and teaching common in either the United States or the British Empire that they have not been conceived as possible to the thought of any people in this age of enlightenment. The book shows how these war ideals have been entertained by all classes of Germans from the Kaiser down, including philosophers, teachers, as well as preachers, as well as the military leaders.

"There has been no dearth of material for this collection," says Guy Stanton Ford in a foreword. "The compilers collected three times as much as has been used, and could find new passages of similar import as long as they had library facilities."

The first section is headed "The Mission of Germany." It is given over to such quotations as "We are the salt of the earth," from the Kaiser; "If you ask me 'How shall I build up the Kingdom of God?' my answer is: Be a good German,' from a religious newspaper; "We feel ourselves to be the bearers of a superior kultur," from the Kaiser's pastor; "The German nation leads in the domains of kultur, science, intelligence, morality, art, and religion in the entire domain of the inner life," from a sermon by another pastor.

The Kaiser is quoted as declaring that the war's "meaning and aim is the unification and purification of Germany in order that it may be qualified for its historical task, to be the heart of Europe and to prepare for the realization of the hopes of European humanity." A distinguished professor of law declares that the more German kultur "remains faithful to itself the better will it be able to enlighten the understanding of the foreign races absorbed and incorporated into the empire, and to make them see that only from German kultur can they derive those treasures which they need for the fertilizing of their own particular life."

The foregoing are only small fragments of the quotations declaring the divine leadership of Germany. The second section, "World Power or Downfall" is devoted to German expressions of the idea that Germany must dominate the world or be crushed. The third section displays "The Worship of Power" shown by typical German utterances. Section 4, headed "War as a Part of the Divine Order," is full of expressions that must make peace-loving Canadians gasp. Perhaps the most impressive of the extracts are two that gain interest from the fact that they were from publications addressed to young people in 1913, the year before the outbreak of the great war. One is from a weekly paper for juvenile readers, the Jungdeutschland-Post, in the issue of which on January 25, 1913, the following appeared:

"We Germans and Christians are also taught by honor and duty that there can be no peace for the souls of the dead or the living until a conflict is settled by the victory and triumph of our arms. . . . Pagan belief and Christian faith alike teach us that we should give our lives for our brothers, for our fatherland, for our Kaiser and his empire, for the victory of our arms, in order that there may be peace for the living and rest for the dead. Therefore, war is the most sublime and the most holy expression of human activity."

The second extract is from the organ of Young Germany, Jungdeutschland, showing the kind of doctrines taught to boys of about the same age as our Boy Scouts. It was printed in October, 1913, as follows:

"War is the noblest and holiest expression of human activity. For us, too, the glad, great hour of battle will strike. Still and deep in the German heart must live the joy in battle and the longing for it. Let us ridicule to the utmost the old women in breeches who fear war and deplore it as cruel and revolting. No; war is beautiful. Its august sublimity elevates the human heart beyond the earthly and the common. In the cloud palace above sit the heroes Frederick the Great and Blucher, and all the men of action—the Great Emperor, Moltke, Roon, Bismarck, are there as well, but not the old women who would take away our joy in war. When here on earth a battle is won by German arms and the faithful dead ascend to heaven, a Potsdam lance corporal will call the guard to the door and 'Old Fritz' [Frederick the Great] springing from his golden throne, will give the command to present arms. That is the heaven of Young Germany."

After reading this kind of doctrine, preached to the youth of Germany many months before the war, it is hardly surprising to find the following from a pamphlet by a German pastor, B. Baumgarten, commenting on the sinking of the Lusitania:

"Whoever can not prevail upon himself to approve from the bottom of his heart the sinking of the Lusitania, whoever can not conquer his sense of the gigantic cruelty to unnumbered perfectly innocent victims . . . and give himself up to honest delight at this victorious exploit of German defensive power—him we judge to be no true German."

Novelty voiles are printed on dark grounds.

Gray is emphasized in spring color schemes.

BAVARIANS MUTINIED.

British Saved Them From Vengeance of Prussians.

Germany can never win, for the good reason our armies have long since lost faith in their ability to win. Without faith no miracles such as required to give victory to Germany are possible. Even among the best disciplined there is a growing tendency to revolt against the continuance of war, writes Lieut. Henri Budich, Bavarian socialist officer, captured in 5th Flanders battle.

"There are always men in a conscript army like ours who are less brave than their fellows and do not want to fight if they can help it. But, making allowance for this element, I am convinced our army is nearer breaking than ever. My own regiment, for example, was sent into the front line at the time fixed by the British for their last offensive.

"They had four days of incessant shelling. For nearly two days at that time they were without food or water, for the simple reason British gunfire completely cut us off from communication with our depots. The British fire never gave us a chance.

"In that time we lost more than 380 dead. Out of 600 others 402 were wounded. From the first night sleep was impossible.

"The British gunfire raged around us, wrecking shelters, sending the strongest works tumbling about our ears, giving us the impression we were always standing on the edge of the other world, only waiting for the British soldiers to push us over the brink. We stood it as long as we could, and then told our superior officers the useless slaughter must cease. We were to go back to the rest trenches and have relief or we would take the first opportunity of surrendering to the British.

"Our officers took no notice, but we knew that a report on the subject had been made to headquarters. The next day two of the non-commissioned officers who had taken the message to the commander were placed under arrest for breach of discipline. During the lull in the fierce British bombardment our men met and discussed the matter.

"They decided to send word to the officers that the two imprisoned men must be released at once, and I was sent with the message. I was received by the commander, who told me to wait until he had time to consider the matter. By that time telephonic communication with headquarters was reopened and in my presence our commander spoke to the staff. He afterward had me arrested, and I was placed in a dugout along with the two other prisoners for removal to Roulers, where it was proposed to try us by court-martial.

"Fortunately for us, our comrades got uneasy at the delay, and they came in a body to see the commander, who was told that he must hand over the three of us or take the consequences.

"He was unwilling to do so, and started to abuse the men. He was seized and thrown into the dugout from which we were taken. After releasing us the men went to hunt up the rest of the officers, but in the meantime one of them had got into touch with headquarters, and we intercepted a message to say that troops were on their way to deal with the mutiny.

"We had gone too far to turn back, so we imprisoned the whole of our officers and remained in shelter until the British attack would give us a chance of getting away.

"Meanwhile the British fire was getting stronger than ever, and we were soon relieved from anxiety regarding our own position by the intense fire of the British guns, which made it impossible for the troops sent to quell the mutiny to reach us. We had to remain for another eight hours in these trenches under heavy fire from the British guns, and when they found they could not get at us our own command turned their guns on to the trenches and gave us much the same dose of shell fire as they were giving the British.

"So for eight hours at least we were really on the British side, holding out against our own side in a trench which the British were able to capture without the loss of a single life. It was a very anxious time for us.

"The British troops could not know what was going on, and they attacked us as though we were still enemies. We had to go through a trying time until the attacking British troops were in sight.

"We put up a white flag as the British approached and shouted out that we were sick of the war. Seeing that our gunfire was still dropping around, the British soldiers thought it was only another white flag trick, and were unwilling to treat us as having surrendered. However, they were soon convinced on that point, and we were all glad to get out of the hell we had been in. There were then only some 200 of the battalion unhit.

The Egyptian Pyramids.

The pyramids of Egypt are thirty-eight in number and stretch for some fifty geographical miles along the western reach of the Nile Valley, just where the Libian desert and the cultivated land struggle for extension, or from nearly opposite Heliopolis to past the site of Memphis. Of the whole number, only one, the first, most northern, or "Great Pyramid," is a true pyramid; thirty-four are mere imitations—i.e., only approximately true—while the remaining three scarcely deserve to be classed as pyramids at all.

Danish West Indies.

In the Danish West Indies the blacks far outnumber the whites, and in some places all the business, many of the estates, and practically all the government offices are controlled by them, yet there is no cause for complaint on the part of the white population. Civic and business matters are run as well and everything goes on as smoothly as if Caucasians were administering the affairs.

Beaded bags are often made with drawstrings.

Smart crepe blouses are pink and high collared.

How to Meet Trouble.

Rise above small things, says a woman writer. The woman who lets small things worry her will be completely undone the first time she meets with a really big problem. It is disintegrating to your mental and nervous condition, not to mention your physical condition, to worry. You need not be resigned to fate nor slip your troubles off as the old friend duck's back throws water. But you can meet troubles with a will to conquer them or adjust them—and, after that, "they should worry." Do not you.

Antiquity of the Safety Pin.

That the Hittites were in constant communication with the other nations is shown by the fact that Egyptian scarabs and amulets, Phoenician pottery, Greek terra cotta figures are found in the tombs of different periods. Bronze daggers and jewelry are fairly common, and Woolley proudly showed me a safety pin, 3,000 years old, that would still work. Some stone-age pottery, with the very ancient emblems of thunder, or of the weather god, was found in its original kiln.

The "Perfect Beauty."

It is a familiar axiom that there are no duplicates in nature. The physiologists claim that this is one of the causes for differences in the features of the same person—that nature never models two eyes or ears in an exactly identical way. But there are persons to whom the difference is so small that it practically does not exist. And nearly always this is a woman. Then we get what is called a "perfect beauty."

Built for Giant.

Gardner, Mass., has in one of its parks what is believed to be the largest chair in the world, made for actual use. It is 5½ feet square at the base, and 12 feet in height. The seat is six feet from the ground, so that those who wish to sit in it have to literally climb up into the chair, like children. The chair weighs 1,200 pounds. It was presented to the city, and is an object of considerable attraction to strangers.

Explained.

"Do you believe love makes the world go round, professor?" "Ahem! Of course not! The earth first acquired its rotary motion when thrown off from the sun in a nebulous form, its centrifugal force being counteracted to a certain extent by the superior attraction of the solar body from which it originally emanated!"

Burials on Hilltops.

Buffalo Bill is not the only celebrity to be buried on a hilltop. Cecil Rhodes and Robert Louis Stevenson are both buried on high points. The empire builder lies on a kopje in Rhodesia, and the novelist on the highest peak of his beloved Samoa. Lord Dacre is supposed to have been buried on horseback in Saxton churchyard.

A Dutchman's Capture.

During the Revolutionary war a Dutchman was running from the English. In crossing a field he stepped upon a rake, the handle flew up and hit him in the back of the head. Without looking around, he dropped to his knees and said, 'I kivs up, I kivs up mynheer soldiermans. Hooray for King Shorge!"

Keep Friendship in Repair.

Dr. Samuel Johnson said: "A man should keep his friendship in repair." Boswell, his biographer, reports him as saying: "If a man does not make new acquaintances, as he advances through life, he will soon find himself left alone. A man, sir, should keep his friendship in constant repair."

Phosphorus Light.

To make a night light with phosphorus, place a piece of phosphorus about the size of a pea in a long glass bottle. Fill the bottle about one-third full of olive oil, heated to the boiling point, and cork tightly. When light is needed, take out the cork and allow the air to enter—then recork the bottle. The empty space in the bottle will become luminous. When the light becomes dim, uncork the bottle for a few seconds.

Home Companionship.

If the boy is not a companion to his father it is generally because the father was not a companion to the boy when the boy was a little fellow. Companionship is something which must grow through the years, especially for two people who live under the same roof and share the same fortunes.

Get Acquainted.

One reason people do not appreciate their neighbors better is because they do not know them. Most of the misunderstandings arise from the fact that people do not understand each other. A good plan would be to learn more about your neighbors so that you will appreciate them better.

All "Dolled Up."

Nan gazed with adoring eyes on her uncle when he appeared ready to go to a formal dance. After giving him the "once over" the braid on his trousers attracted her attention and she exclaimed: "Why, he even has 'broidery on his pants."

Straw as Food.

Both wheat and barley straw were used by the ancient Hebrews, chiefly as fodder for the horses, cattle and camels (Genesis 24:25; I Kings 4:28; Isaiah 11:7; 65:25). There is no intimation that straw was used for litter.

Be Charitable.

Don't grumble if your paper is not always flush up to the high standard of your ideal. Charitably remember that the editor is capable of getting up quite as good a paper as you could yourself.

Kindness.

Every kind act, word, thought or impulse continues in its influence forever, brightening and sweetening the world, and every evil deed or thought permanently destroys a part of the sum total of human happiness.

When He Fails.

"As fur as I kin understand de question," said Uncle Eben, "an optimist is all right until he gits de idea dat he kin git along by furnishin' de cheerfulness while somebody else does de work."

Eliminates Headlight Glare.

A novel device to eliminate the glare of automobile headlights covers the front of the electric bulb and diverts the rays of the lower half so they are added to the light thrown by the upper half of the reflector.

Finds Monster Tooth.

A man living near Saugus, Cal., discovered the tooth of a gigantic creature that roamed through the marshes of southern California several thousand years ago. The tooth weighed about 25 pounds.

Importance of Labor.

If it were not for labor, man neither could eat so much, nor relish so pleasantly, nor sleep so soundly, nor be so healthful, nor so useful, nor so strong, nor so patient, nor so noble, nor so untempted.

A MILLION DOLLAR FIRE AT NEWARK BAY

Canadian Press Despatch:

NEWARK, N.J., Jan. 26.—More than a million dollars' worth of property was destroyed to-day in a fire, believed to be the work of German spies, which burned up oil barges, pier, warehouses and freight cars of Newark bay, close to the plant of the Submarine Boat Corporation, and warehouses of the Quartermaster Department of the Army.

DISTRICT CURLING ASSOCIATION SUGGESTED BY RECENT GAMES

Last winter a movement to establish an annual competition among the curling clubs of this district failed within reach of accomplishment. Arrangements had been made for the games, but at the last moment they were cancelled, chiefly because the proposal had been broached too late in the season. The first stirring of spring was in the air, and the local curlers were surfeited of the game.

The presence of the District Cup rinks here yesterday revived the idea and re-opened a discussion among some of the curlers. Casually considered, the proposal seemed free of serious obstacles, and on the other hand seemed potentially productive of much good to the district clubs and to the game itself in the towns about Peterborough. Some of the towns mentioned as members of a Trent Valley competition were Lindsay, Bobcaygeon, Lakefield, Norwood Keene, Hastings, Millbrook, Peterborough, and possibly Campbellford and it was intimated that Omemee might be attracted by the game.

The advantages of such a competition would, it was believed, arouse a deeper interest in the game in the smaller towns. Peterborough and Lindsay have their local and inter-club matches, and also clash in bonspiels and the provincial events. Hence, there is no question of the game flourishing in the two larger centres, but in the smaller communities it needs encouragement. The Lakefield club has taken on a new lease of life during the last two seasons, but the Norwood enthusiasts have no ice. The other towns are simply marking time.

A district competition would bring all the clubs into closer touch; it would help to arouse an interest that would influence first the individual rinks and eventually raise the standard of curling throughout the district. In other words, the game should thrive under such conditions, and perhaps produce, in the villages, rinks that would go far in the provincial matches. In other parts of the province there are small clubs that boast doughty curlers.

Moreover, it must be recognised that the towns of this district have common interests in more important affairs than curling, but curling seems to be the only interest in which they can get together. Is it too much to expect that curling would prove the sesame to unity in good roads, Hydro power, and interurban radial movements? The connection between the old game and these modern facilities isn't obvious, it isn't even clear; but it is a possibility. This is, of course, an incidental consideration, but if the game brings together prominent business men of the district towns, the friendships and understanding thus formed should smooth the way to the larger affairs.

At the present time the Trent towns have electric power beyond their requirements and should be advertising this indispensable resource throughout the industrial centres of Canada and the United States. In the test of to-day we are secure, and our powers have only been tapped; but we are annunited, and our efforts in organisation and co-operation have been only spasmodic and the results ephemeral.

This subject of closer relationship among the district towns is a far stretch from curling, but the remoteness may be less than it seems.

The direct and primary concern is the fostering of the old game in this neighbourhood. Two of the new crop of skips in the Peterborough Club stated recently that they would be glad to offer a cup for district competition. The only difficulty suggested was the arranging of the Peterborough and Lindsay rinks, but it was believed that this could be easily overcome. However, action will depend upon the desires of the curlers themselves. If they become impressed with the prospects of the idea, the item of organisation would present no difficulty.

PETERBORO' JUNIORS WIN THE GROUP

Beat Lindsay By 7 Goals to 3 Last Night

The Peterborough juniors won the group championship last night when they defeated Lindsay at Brock street rink by 7 goals to 3, winning the home and home series of four games by a net majority of four goals. The Petes led by 3 to 0 at the end of the first period and 5 to 2 at the close of the second. The Peterborough goals were scored by Cherrett (3) Bartley (2), Park and Hagerman, while Conley got two and Rogers one for Lindsay. A detailed account will be given in Monday's paper.

W. M. Lang's Rink Bring the Carew Cup To Peterboro'

After helping to win the Waddell-Capon trophy, W. M. Lang's rink went over to Hamilton and picked off the Carew cup which has been travelling around the curling rinks of the province since the big bonspiel at Lindsay some years ago. The rink holding the cup must accept challenges according to the conditions on which it was presented. Hamilton won it from the Queen City club of Toronto, who had taken it from Lindsay. There are fifteen challenges on file now with Tom Thauburn, of Brampton, first on the list and Orillia second. Lang's rink will play Brampton in the near future.

The game with the Hamilton Victorias on Friday gave Peterborough a victory by 19 to 10. The rinks were as follows:

Peterborough	Hamilton
J. Skinner	A. P. Kappell
R. G. Sturgeon	H. O'Heir
R. M. Waddell	Rev. A. H. McGillivray
W. M. Lang	R. J. Jamieson

MR. LILLICO'S NEW DEPARTURE

Through the co-operation of some of his customers, Mr. J. Lillico, grocer at 356 Charlote street, has effected a revolution in retailing that bears every promise of permanency. On Monday he changed the basis of his business method from credit to cash, but found that although his customers approved of the C.O.D. system some of them objected to the vexation of keeping and making change for the delivery man. They had personally to receive the goods, since they had to pay for them, and there were consequent trifling annoyances that threatened the success of this venture into the domain of "cash only."

Mr. Lillico's plans had anticipated this obstacle, but he hesitated to apply the radical innovation which he had foreseen as the only solution of the solitary problem that confronted the cash system. Finally he decided to croach the idea to his best customer, a west-end lawyer. He pointed out that the cash system would mean a saving of approximately ten per cent to the public. It would wipe out the expensive credit method, make the business sounder, and react to the advantage of the customer. Since some of the ladies objected to the C.O.D. plan, Mr. Lillico suggested that the lawyer make a cash deposit to HIS credit, thus obviating the payment for the goods when delivered. They would be paid for out of his account.

The details of the plan were further explained, and the lawyer immediately acquiesced. The scheme was thus headed toward success.

The next customer was a prominent official of the G.T.R. He fell in with the proposal, paid his bill, leaving a cash credit in HIS favour. Thus it went, and the first five days of Mr. Lillico's cash campaign have brought results that have exceeded his brightest hopes and have shown how groundless were the doubts that loomed above his deliberations when he prepared to cut loose from the credit system.

SOMETHING OF A MIRACLE.

His filing cabinet for accounts has to-day just as many, if not more, entries than it had a week ago, but not a few of them already show credits in favour of customers. The amounts range from $4 to $20, truly a remarkable innovation in the retail grocery business.

Debts, especially bad debts, have been the bane of the grocer. Custom had tied him hand and foot, and there appeared to be no deliverance. Some grocers, unable to collect from their customers and pressed by wholesalers for payments, firmly resolved to liberate themselves from the bondage of "credit," but their courage failed when they reached the point of decision. They would squeeze through one difficulty, breathe freely for a time only to find themselves back in the same old corner. Credit still pursued them, and often the bailiff disturbed their sleep.

This does not apply to Mr. Lillico, who is fortunately located in the prosperous west end, but it has been the experience of the majority of grocers up and down the province. To them, Mr. Lillico's new depositors' accounts will probably seem as fabulous as the giraffe to the rustic who exclaimed on seeing it, "There ain't no such animal." Their daily grind is recounting their bad debts. Depositors' accounts have never entered their dearest dreams.

Grocers have always added to their selling price a percentage to cover their "bad debts." With the cash system firmly established, this item is cancelled, and the money is saved by the customers, who, by the way, always paid their accounts.

ADVANTAGE TO THE CONSUMER

The advantage of the cash system is obvious, and Mr. Lillico is determined to prove it to his customers. For example, he pointed yesterday to articles that sold last week at 40 cents. They were now 37 cents. Again, 20 cent canned goods were down to 18 cents, and 25 cent goods are selling at 22 and 23 cents. These were displayed with price cards, but the main details the change has wrought were too numerous to explain. If a customer's monthly bill has averaged $20, he should save about 10 per cent. a month. That is, he should pay $18 for groceries that formerly cost him $20. At that rate he would save about $25 a year.

This is no attempt to go into details, but is simply an effort to indicate what the cash system will mean to the consumer.

If the idea were generally adopted, C.O.D. would spell the doom of the "dead-beat," most of whom have money for theatres, fancy furniture, musical instruments, fashionable clothes, and other unessentials, but the grocer was lucky to get a pleasant smile—or another order.

CASH AND CARRY.

With C.O.D. hand in hand goes C. and C., cash and carry. Customers who purchase small parcels are requested to carry them home. The war is upheaving even the grocery business. It has taken the young drivers, forced up the cost of groceries and labour, and is apparently striking at the unnecessary service which indulgent grocers provided in the rather reckless days before the war. Customers perhaps were unaware that deliveries of small orders were increasing the cost of the goods to an appreciable extent. The trend today is to limit deliveries to bulky parcels. Mr. A. Pearson, 196 Charlotte Street, is another grocer who put this plan into operation this week, and is highly pleased with the results.

fiUnder Mr. Lillico's depositors' accounts method, orders received over the telephone are delivered at the store price. It gives the customer a complete service, including the reduced prices the cash system permits.

Citizens, who desire to share in every economy that can be secured to-day, will applaud the Lillico idea, and hope that it will be generally extended. Incidentally it is worthy of note that Macy's, New York's big departmental store, have inaugurated the depositors' account plan, and are daily advertising in the press its advantages to the public.

Here is a sample from Thursday's Times (N.Y): "The depositors' account is a friend in need—ready to show you the way to economic shopping without tempting you to reach beyond your means—through buy-now-pay-later methods."

OBJECTORS TO SERVICE GO TO PENITENTIARY.

Winnipeg. — Two years in the Stony Mountain Penitentiary was the sentence imposed on two conscientious objectors to military service, by Magistrate MacDonald, in the city police court. They were David Wells, and Charles H. Edwards. Charles H. Edwards defied the authorities when called up for service. In a letter to his sweetheart, written shortly after he waso rdered to report, he states: "I consider this a grand a glorious privilege to witness for the Lord."

FUEL AND CHURCH UNION.

There was a town of many creeds
That never could agree
Till one cold winter froze them all
To perfect unity.

"To save our coal, if not our soul,"
Said they, "till winter's done,
Let's close our varied churches
And worship all in one."

If all the creeds had one belief,
And followed Gospel text,
It would save much coal in this life,

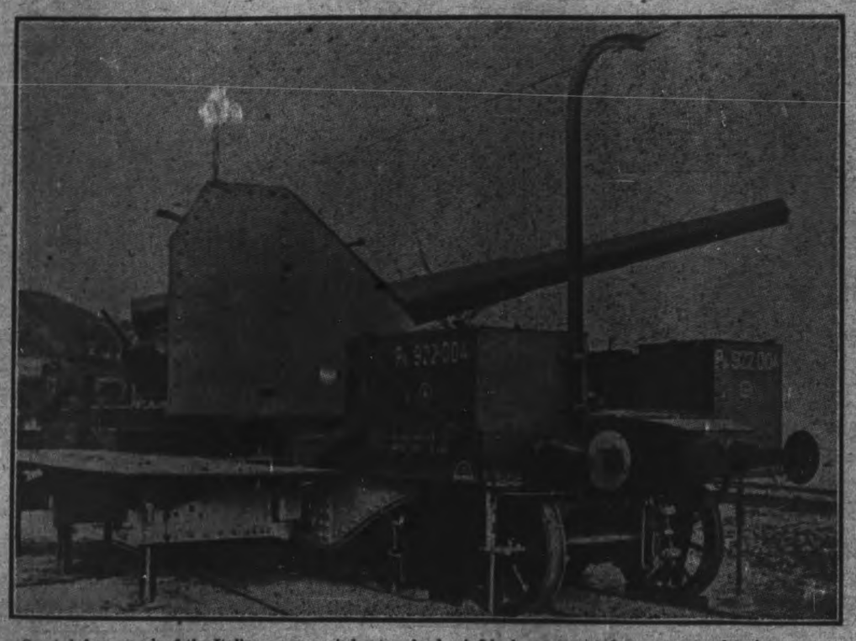
Italian Coast Defence - The Bolshevist Leaders - Brazilian Cities



Coast defence work of the Italian navy carried out on land. A 6-inch gun mounted on an armored train.

Armored trains used to protect Italy's long and exposed Adriatic seaboard. Trucks mounted with anti-aircraft guns.

A stern landscape on the western front: The gateway to the battlefield. Stark, but stately still, with the grim dignity of that which has suffered, this painful but picturesque record of trees that have been mutilated on the western front suggests, in a degree, an aisle of broken columns in some ruined temple.

Bolshevist leaders addressing a Petrograd crowd: Lenin (left); Trotzky (right). The leaders of the Bolsheviste in Russia, Nikolai Lenin (on the left), and Leon Trotsy (on the right)—according to the names under which they pass—are seen here haranguing a Petrograd crowd in the streets. Both have been stated to be Germans and emissaries of the enemy.

Each company in the Russian army elects a representative to the General Assembly at Petrograd. As these agents and their electors are grossly ignorant and uneducated, it has been easy in many cases for German spies and soldiers who could speak Russian to be chosen. Once in Petrograd they have begun their evil task of corrupting the people and of securing a German-made separate peace. The pictures shows a recent meeting of this Duma.

This Italian camion was a complete wreck when the driver missed a turn in the dark. The machine struck the heavy guard rail, tearing it away from its bed, and smashed up in the ravine.

Darius Cobb, a venerable Boston artist, now 83 years of age, has just completed a portrait of Christ, upon which he has been working since the Civil War. He was soldier in that conflict, and says the picture is a fulfillment of a promise he made if his life was spared.

Gunner D. H. Alexander, of the 22nd Howitzer Battery, Canadian Field Artillery, son of Mr. and Mrs. S. Alexander, Arden, Ont., who has been in active service in France since April, 1917.

There is no more picturesque body of soldiers than the famed Italian Bersaglieri, and particularly the bicycle patrol, a squad of which is shown on the banks of Lake Garda. The bicycle has its function in the war no less important relatively than that of the motor and the horse. Belgians and French both use cyclist troops.

Such is the power of suggestion that, looking at the picture of these beautiful palms in front of the Tampa Bay Hotel, Tampa Bay, Florida, we could feel the hot mid-day sun percolating into our frozen marrow, even though the register in our office was stone cold and the thermometer outside stood at 10 below.

Heavily laden coal barges fighting their way through the congealed harbor to bring sorely needed fuel from the railroad terminals. Seagoing tugs hammered at the icy surface until they finally cleared paths and relieved the misery, for the time being at least.

Ambulances, the gift of the American Red Cross, parade through the streets of Milan on their way to the Italian front. They are here shown crossing the square of the Duomo.

FROM VIMY RIDGE.

The above picture is of Arthur G. Green, of Niagara Falls, Canada, and four comrades with whom he went through the battle of Vimy Ridge. They had it taken just behind the lines, a short time after the action, as a souvenir of their companionship in the famous victory of the Canadians in France. They all belonged to the 6th Machine Gun Company. The machine gunners are picked from infantry units, and machine gun formations are not territorialized. This group represents widely-separated parts of Canada. The standing men are (left to right) Rogers (Nova Scotia), Green (Niagara Falls), and Harrison (Nova Scotia). The sitting men are (left) Farroway, of Toronto, and Gilmore, of Saskatchewan.

Private Green left here as a Quartermaster-Sergeant in the 98th Battalion, but gave up his N.C.O. rank in England in order to get to the firing line.

4 Each competitor will be asked to show a sample copy of "Canada Weekly" to five or six friends, business associates or neighbours, to whom such a magazine will appeal and who will want to take the magazine regularly.

For these services the publishers guarantee to pay each contestant in cash or by a prize selected by him or her in advance. A BUSINESS PROPOSITION

The new mill at the Davidson Gold Mines is almost completed. The stamps will be dropping within two months, and the mine will go on a producing basis, without a debt standing against the company.

The stock of the Davidson outstanding is 1,400,000 shares, which at the present market price represents a value of $420,000. At least $400,000 has been spent on the property in development, plant and equipment.

The ore shoot at the 100-foot level alone, now being broken down for the mill, is worth $500,000.

The shares will inevitably discount the advance of the property into the ranks of producers, almost immediately. The stock is available at between 30 and 35 cents per share at the moment.

Davidson stock is a safe security, and at the same time offers super-excellent opportunities as a speculative investment.

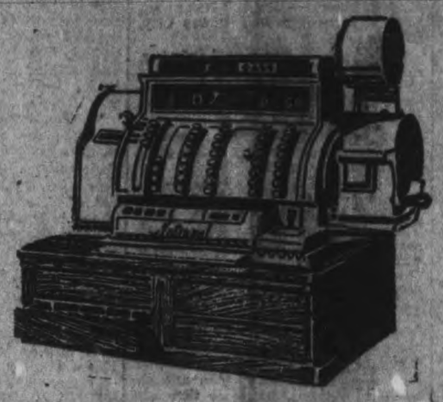
The Most Important Factor



Mr. Merchant:

THE most important factor in the success of any business is the man behind it. The business is but a reflection of its director.

If he is ambitious, energetic and intelligent, he will watch his business closely, discover every weakness, and painstakingly nurse it through to success.

He will seek advice, improve his knowledge and increase his efficiency so that he may know how to cure the ills of his business.

Too many men are self-satisfied and refuse to follow the methods that have brought success to other business men.

Think of the ten most successful men in your own line of business and ask yourself why they succeeded.

National Cash Registers are not cure-alls, but they have helped the most successful merchants in the world and they can help you.

Send for our literature and talk with our representative, because we have made a study of curing a great many of the troubles that beset the storekeeper.

Cast aside indifference and determine to improve your business in 1918.

What the War Costs.

It has been estimated that the total cost of the war to all the belligerents engaged in it is certainly not less than one thousand million pounds a month.

A thousand million pounds! The words slip glibly off the tongue. But just try for a moment to realize what they mean.

If Adam, the first man, had started to earn and save a sovereign a day from the beginning of recorded time he would not have come anywhere near to accumulating a thousand million pounds. He would have to continue, indeed, until A.D. 664571 before doing so.

If a bank cashier, endowed with perpetual youth, attempted to pay out this colossal sum, he would never finish his job through all eternity, for the accumulated interest would accumulate faster than his hands could move in counting out the money.

Reckoned in terms of time, a thousand million years is twenty times as the earth's age, which is fixed approximately at fifty million years. It is even longer probably than the sun's age. In fact, about the only thing older than a thousand million years is eternity itself.—Pearson's Weekly.

"THE CLUE IN THE AIR"

A DETECTIVE STORY—Isabel Ostrander

"Moreover, I got no paper for well I knew I'd have no chance to read it now, with you haverin' around, and I cut myself shaving because Brian himself is sick, and I'll not have that German feller there leaning over me with a razor and me with my two arms tied down under a towel—not after the views he's heard me express about neutrality! And is that the way the celebrated Mr. Terhune works?"

"It is. Wait till you hear!"

He described his own experience of the morning and Dennis listened gravely, in skepticism shaken.

"Did he tell you that you've the scar of Nick the Wop's knife on your back or that you voted Republican once, being drunk?" he asked with interest.

"He did not, but I've no doubt he would if I'd given him time," responded McCarty solemnly. "He took me to the Glamorgan after, in a scooting devil of a car that'd give dust to your fire chief's, and what he did there was fair amazing."

His description of Wade Terhune's accusation of Mrs. Doremus and her collapse left Dennis round-eyed, and short of breath.

"She admitted it?" he gasped. "When she came to, she broke down and confessed?"

"Not so that you could notice it," McCarty replied grimly. "The girl, Mary, brought her around with smelling salts, and she was thundering mad at first, then tried her long suit, hysterics. She said that whether George Allen had ever been her husband or not was no affair of Mr. Terhune's; that the people in the house who said that he'd called there before were mistaken; that he had left at ten o'clock, and that she could prove it by Mary.

"Then she began laughing and crying and declared she didn't know what she'd said, and wasn't responsible; everybody had confused her so with questions and trying to trap her, when she knew nothing whatever about the murder, that it was a wonder she didn't lose her mind. That was when Mary showed her claws.

"It doesn't matter what you said, Mrs. Doremus," she butted in, respectful, and if she were soothing a child, but with a kind of meaning tone as though she might almost be coaching her. "You're not under oath, and they can't make you swear unless they bring some sort of a charge against you, and you know that's impossible."

"The girl shut up quick when Terhune told her, but what she'd said got to Mrs. Doremus all right, and from that minute on she was just acting, going off into worse hysterics if you so much as looked at her, let alone asked a question. Terhune saw there was no more to be got out of her then, and he let her go."

"Go!" repeated Dennis, unable to keep silent longer. "When he had her in the hollow of his hand! What did he do that for?"

"Oh, she'll not go far! She will have been shadowed from the time she sets foot out of the house, and the girl, too. Besides, she was sticking to the story that the man Allan left at ten, and nothing would shake her. If you want to know my opinion I don't think that Terhune wants to break her down in that; I think he purposely told her what he knew, and let her go to see what move she would make next, and maybe trace this man through her if she tried to communicate with him. It's the girl, Mary, that's got me going."

"How I'd say she was just one of them pert, impudent things that has been over here long enough to think she is as good as the next one, and if"—Dennis chose his words with unusual care—"if Mrs. Doremus is the kind of a lady I am thinking, the girl could hardly be expected to keep her place."

McCarty shook his head.

"There's more than that back of it. She had a look like she was laughing in her sleeve at the two of us, and a kind of a way with her as if she knew just what she was doing, because she had been told how to act. If you ask me, I think she is following instructions from somebody higher up—the man who was there that night."

"How do you suppose Mr. Terhune found out all that about the Doremus woman, if it's true, to say nothing of the rest of it?"

"Sure, he told me. He's trying to teach me his way of working, he says, but I am too old a dog to be learning new tricks. After his first talk with her yesterday he looked up her record and found that she'd come on from the west about five years ago, claiming to be a widow, and broke into some sort of society. She married this man, Doremus, and a matter of two years ago he divorced her, a put-up job, according to her. Terhune wired to where she said she came from, traced back, and got the dope that her maiden name was Thompson, and she'd married and divorced this George Allen long before ever she hit New York."

"She must want bygones to be bygones, to go giving him a fine dinner the other night," observed Dennis. "From what you said of her I should think she'd be the kind to hold it against you to her dying day, if you so much as trod on her skirt."

McCarty eyed him significantly.

"Do you think if a man once got foot-loose from a woman like that he would be after coming around again?" he demanded. "It is my belief that when Terhune faced her all of a sudden and asked her the name of the man who had been there, and her not thinking till that minute it was known she'd not been alone; that she answered with the first name which came in her head so as not to give away the truth.

"The elevator boys and the superintendent gave her the lie about his not having been there before, but they'd never heard his name, because he wasn't announced over the 'phone, and he's the only visitor of hers that wasn't. She put it off on Allen because he's away out west, or dead, maybe, and she had no idea her own record would be traced. She is not clever, that Mrs. Doremus, but she's as stubborn as a mule, and she has good reasons, whatever they are, for keeping the real man out of it. Unless she's fool enough to try to get in touch with him and so give Terhune a hint, he'll have to go after the other end of the string and locate Allen."

"Much good it'll do him if Allen's not the man." Dennis paused in refilling his pipe. "Was that just a wild guess of his that the fellow was there after the girl was killed, or did he know? It's a fine joke on the inspector, and you, too, if he was there under your noses and you never spotted him!"

McCarty's jaw set.

"'Twas not my investigation, I'll be reminding you, Denny."

"But you smelled the smoke of his cigar."

"He might have gone before ten, for all that would matter. A cigar with the body to it that one had would leave the smell of it for hours with all those flimsy draperies around—especially as the windows were closed. Nobody saw him go out that night, and Terhune, with his spy glass and his little measuring stick, found out something mighty curious."

"When he was snooping in the garbage?" A trace of skepticism had returned to Dennis's voice.

"No. I've told you that the drawing room in Mrs. Doremus's apartment is on the corner, with the library opening out of it on the side street, but next the drawing room on the avenue side is the dining room. It is a kind of an old-fashioned house, the Glamorgan, with exposed radiators, and in that room there is one in the corner between the window looking out on the avenue, and the folding doors leading to the drawing room.

"Catacornered across it is a great tall cut-glass closet, with just enough space for anyone not too portly to squeeze in, and it was a tight fit, too, for they had torn their dinner coat! Terhune found a bit of fine, black broadcloth hanging to the little valve near the top of the radiator on one side. And more than that.

"The closet in front of it is higher than your head, and glass all around, sides and back. There were marks on it—the print of a man's fingers, and in one or two places of a whole hand where he had pressed against it, pushing his way in and out. It seems that yesterday, after he'd talked to them, Terhune got Mrs. Doremus and Mary and the cook—who'd gone to-day—out of the way, and he went over that apartment inch by inch, until he came on that. He took impressions of those finger prints, and if he ever gets hold of the man who stood there, he'll know him."

"Maybe it was the janitor, moving the glass closet to get at the radiator if it leaked," suggested Dennis hopefully.

"Radiators don't leak in July," McCarty retorted. "Nor do janitors wear fine, black broadcloth coats at work to say nothing of mother-of-pearl vest buttons."

"Mother of what?"

"Pearl. Something like what you got to wear at Molly's wedding, only real. Terhune found one under the glass closet, where the man had rasped it off him squeezing through, the same as he'd torn his coat in the back. He got it coming and going."

"It's funny he wouldn't have hid in a cupboard, where he'd have had room enough," Dennis reflected.

"Afraid, maybe, we'd look there."

"But wouldn't he know he'd be seen behind that thing if it was all glass?"

"Not if you'd cast your eye over it once. It's so full of junk it would dazzle you, with big platters tilted against the back and sides, filling up the space from one shelf to another. Besides the light is low in the dining room, just one centre drop over the table."

"And you're thinking he was there putting it over on you and the inspector?"

"I don't know what to think about that," confessed McCarty frankly. "I have a mind to look up the inspector later. 'Twas him that first suggested getting Terhune on this job, too."

"He's a wonder, all right," Dennis acknowledged. "I didn't think much of his methods when you tried them on me, but you have got to hand it to him. He must be a great man."

"And he's having a great little time with his microscope and foot rule, te say nothing of his psycho—whatever it is reasoning."

Something in McCarty's tone made his friend look up swiftly.

"Well, he found out about the man in the corner, didn't he?"

"He did, and it was good work, I have no doubt that if he goes through every apartment in the house the same way he'll find something in each one that the family are not advertising; things, maybe, just as queer as this. But that don't say that any of them had a hand in murdering the girl."

"To my mind, there's nothing in what he doped out in Mrs. Doremus's apartment to connect her, or the man either, with the death. There's nothing to show they even knew her, let alone a motive; and what would she be doing there in the first place? The funeral is to-morrow and the inquest the day after. Maybe Mrs. Doremus will talk then."

Dennis's sudden access of admiration for the genius of Wade Terhune, and his evident approbation at the ease with which the detective had discovered what the inspector had overlooked, jarred upon McCarty's mood, and rankled in the face of his loyalty to his former superior. But Dennis was disposed to argue.

"I should think it was pretty clear that the two of them had something to do with what had happened, from their actions. Why should Mrs. Doremus take so much trouble to keep him out of it, and lie and get in Dutch about it herself if they was as innocent as she makes out? And look at him! 'Tis not a parlor diversion, except for children, to go hiding behind furniture. You're bound to admit that!"

"What if he was a prominent man—married, too, maybe—and couldn't afford to have it known he was calling there, murder or no murder? If he was there when the girl fell past the window, as Mrs. Doremus said she did, he mightn't want to take a chance of trying to walk out through the crowd he must have known would collect, and perhaps being stopped and questioned by the police. The fact that he never gave his name down stairs when he came looks as if he was trying to kee his visits secret."

"Say, Mac!" Dennis twisted abruptly about in his chair. "How did he get out, anyway? After, I mean. Wasn't the house surrounded and watched?"

"It was, and there's been men at both entrances ever since." McCarty's face was a study. "The inspector even had the roofs watched all night, until he made a second search in the morning into every hole and corner of the building from the cellar up. I never thought of that, Denny. I wonder if Terhune did? There's one thing sure. If it was him, I'd keep an eye on the flat above, the one where that playwriter and his wife live. I'd get hold of the girl that went away and ask her a few questions, and I'd find out a little about Marion Rowntree. A line on her friends, and what she had been doing lately."

"You wouldn't do much in twenty-four hours, would you?" asked Dennis with scorn. "Give him a chance, can't you. It's not for nothing he got his reputation. Sure, he did more in an hour, by your own acount, than Inspector Druet in the whole night, and with the trail hot before him."

"Well"—McCarty rose—"of course it's nothing to me since I'm out of the game. There's no denying he's a smart man, but he is as apt to make a mistake as the next one, being human. I've no powers of imagination, and no deduction, and my reasoning may be on the fritz; but I've got a plain ordinary hunch, and that is that the couple on the fourth floor could tell him more about what happened than the fat little blonde woman, or her friend behind the glass closet. They were in Newark at the theatre, with a grand little alibi all ready and working overtime; but I saw the looks that passed between them while the inspector was questioning them, and if they didn't actually know what took place that night they could give a pretty shrewd guess."

After supper that evening McCarty followed the vague impulse of the afternoon and dropped in at headquarters. He found Inspector Druet alone at his desk in the little side office, going over a voluminous batch of typed notes.

"Well, Mac, they put one over on us." The inspector smiled wearily. "I thought I'd pumped that little Doremus woman nearly dry, but she was too much for me. Even that girl of hers, Mary, gave us a stall about the voice down the air shaft."

"I don't think so, sir." McCarty sat in the chair indicated and laid his hat on the desk. "I think she was telling the truth there all right; but what she heard has got no more to do with the murder than the man hiding in the corner as far as my evidence goes that Mr. Terhune has now, as I was saying to my friend Riordan this afternoon."

"Terhune tells me you were with him when he faced Mrs. Doremus to-day."

"Yes, sir." McCarty paused, wondering uncomfortably if the detective had told of his suspicions which he had not communicated to the inspector. "He asked me to go along. The case has got me going, sir, that's a fact. I can't help turning it over in my mind and trying to dope it out myself."

"I wish you could, Mac," responded the inspector heartily. "If you want to know anything fire away. We know you'll keep any information you get safe from the newspaper boys, and that is what we want just now."

"Sure I will!" McCarty moved his chair nearer. "I came trailing all the way down here to satisfy my curiosity about two other tenants—them on the fourth floor. Did you get a line on them, inspector?"

"Oh, yes, they are straight enough! The young man, Antonio, is taking a summer course at the university, as he said. He seems to be quite a favorite with the others in his class, but he is intimate with no one. He registered up there as coming from San Francisco.

"The other two, Grafton Foxe and his wife, are on the level, too. They are well known in theatrical circles, especially vaudeville, and every one speaks well of them. We've wired out to the Chicago authorities to look up the girl, Ivy Collins, at that address on Leavitt street, and get her address on Leavitt street and get her statement. That's all we've got about any of them as yet. Mrs. Doremus's record you heard from Terhune—I understand."

McCarty nodded.

"Of course you know she flew the coop——"

TORTURING, ITCHING ECZEMA

Mrs. J. B. Forth, Paspebiac, Bonaventure Co., Que., writes:—"Thanks to Dr. Chase's Ointment I have been completely cured of that horrible disease eczema. I was held as if in prison from going among other people, for I was ashamed of the raw, flaming sores. Doctors could do nothing for me and I was almost desperate with suffering when I began to use Dr. Chase's Ointment. In one month I was completely cured and think that this was little short of a miracle."

PAINS IN BACK AND SIDE

Yield to Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound.

Kansas City, Kansas.—"I suffered from pains in my back and side caused by a functional derangement. I was nervous and had headaches most of the time. So many people recommended Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound to me, I tried it and [illegible] ties I am well. I do not think the Vegetable Compound can be beaten for woman's ailments."—Mrs. L. Timmerman, 3011 N. Hutchings St., Kansas City, Kansas.

Women who suffer from headaches, nervousness, backache, the blues and other symptoms of a functional derangement should give this famous root and herb remedy a trial.

For forty years it has been overcoming such ailments of women after other medicines have failed.

If you want special suggestions in regard to your condition, write Lydia E. Pinkham Medicine Co., Lynn, Mass. The result of long experience is at your service, and your letter will be held in strict confidence.

TO DARKEN HAIR APPLY SAGE TEA

Look Young! Bring Back Its Natural Colour, Gloss and Attractiveness

Common garden sage brewed into a heavy tea with sulphur added, will turn gray, streaked and faded hair beautifully dark and luxuriant. Just a few applications will prove a revelation if your hair is fading, streaked or gray. Mixing the Sage Tea and Sulphur recipe at home, though, is troublesome. An easier way is to get a 50-cent bottle of Wyeth's Sage and Sulphur Compound at any drug store all ready for use. This is the old-time recipe improved by the addition of other ingredients.

While wispy, gray, faded hair is not sinful, we all desire to retain our youthful appearance and attractiveness. By darkening your hair with Wyeth's Sage and Sulphur Compound no one can tell, because it does it so naturally, so evenly. You just dampen a sponge or soft brush with it and draw this through your hair, taking one small strand at a time; by morning all gray hairs have disappeared, and, after another application or two, your hair becomes beautifully dark, glossy, soft and luxuriant.

This preparation is a delightful toilet requisite and is not intended for the cure, mitigation or prevention of disease.

For young girls just entering womanhood; for women at the critical time; nursing mothers and every woman who is "run-down," tired or over-worked—Doctor Pierce's Favorite Prescription is a special, safe and certain help. It can now be had in tablet form, procurable at any good drug store, or send Dr. Pierce, Invalids' Hotel and Surgical Institute, Buffalo, N. Y., 10 cents for trial package. Branch office, Bridgeburg, Ont.

St. Catharines, Ont.—"I have taken Dr. Pierce's Favorite Prescription during expectancy when I felt especially in need of a tonic and it benefited me greatly. I always take pleasure in recommending 'Prescription' to young mothers, because I know it will never fail to help them."—Mrs. J. H. Fawcett, 8 Beach St.

Stratford, Ont.—"I do think Dr. Pierce's Favorite Prescription one of the best medicines I have ever known for the ailments of women. I had for quite a long time been all run-down, weak and nervous. I doctored, but nothing seemed to give me relief until I began taking 'Favorite Prescription.' This medicine gave me such wonderful relief that I am glad to recommend it to others."—Mrs. A. FACE COVERED WITH PIMPLES

ASHAMED TO GO OUT

Many an otherwise beautiful and attractive face is sadly marred by unsightly pimples, blotches, flesh worms and various other blood diseases.

Their presence is a source of embarrassment to those afflicted as well as pain and regret to their friends.

Many a check and brow cast in the mould of beauty have been sadly defaced, their attractiveness lost and their possessor rendered unhappy for years.

Why, then consent to rest under this cloud of embarrassment?

There is an effectual remedy for all these defects.

It is Burdock Blood Bitters. This remedy will drive out all the impurities from the blood and leave the complexion healthy and clear.

Mrs. Katherine Henry, Port Sydney, Ont., writes: "Two years ago my face was so covered with pimples I was ashamed to go out at all. I tried several remedies, but they were of no use. At last a friend advised me to try Burdock Blood Bitters. I got a bottle, and by the time it was used I could see a difference. I then got two more, and when I had used them the pimples were completely gone. I can highly recommend B.B.B."

"HORRIBLE EXPERIENCE."

Earl of Stair, Freed From Germany, Tells of Brutality.

The Earl of Stair, Scots Guards, who has long been a prisoner of war in Germany, in reply to congratulations from his Scottish tenantry on his transference to Switzerland, has written the following letter from Rossimiere, Vaud:

"No one who has not been through the horrible experience which I and too many others have during the last two years and more can have any idea of the relief that it is to be once more living an ordinary life of comparative freedom among one's family and civilized human beings. My eyesight is considerably affected by the long confinement. During eighteen months nobody in our camp was able to use his eyes at a greater distance than 150 yards, as all windows looking outward were painted white on the outside and screwed up at the bottom, and if one tried to look out over the top one was fired on at once by the sentries. Everyone who has been long in prison, especially if they have had no change of camp, finds that his memory is seriously affected, and to save their minds all who have been prisoners two years should be exchanged, at least to a neutral country, whether sick or wounded or not. It is chiefly the thought of these people who are still left behind there which takes away half the pleasure of being in freedom oneself. Most of us here who are fit enough also have a tremendous longing to get back to the front; most of us would fight with very different feelings from what we had before we were taken, now that we know what utterly inconceivable brutes we have for enemies. I think people at home are beginning to realize it gradually, though I am sure they had not the faintest idea of it until recently."

Encouragement.

A young probationer was preaching his trial sermon in a church in one of the inland villages of Scotland. After finishing the "discourse" he leaned over the pulpit and engaged in silent prayer, an act which surprised the congregation, who were unaccustomed to such procedure. Suddenly the young preacher felt someone slapping him gently on the shoulder, and on turning around he beheld the deacon, who said: "Hoot, mon, dinna tak' it sae mickle ta heart; ye'll maybe dae better next time."

Nerves On Edge Feared the Future

Twitching of the Nerves Made Sleep Impossible—Had Nervous Headaches and Indigestion—Is Cured Now.

Mrs. C. French, 104 Lansdowne St., Peterborough, Ont., writes: "I was troubled with nervousness, sleeplessness, frequent headaches and indigestion. For many years I was troubled with a twitching or fidgetty feeling about my limbs after retiring, causing me much loss of sleep. If wakened up out of my first sleep, even had I been asleep only five minutes, I would lay awake for hours and could not get asleep again. Any sudden noise or a door slamming would set my nerves going and I would fear that something dreadful was going to happen. I had tried different remedies for this trouble, but without success. A friend asked me one day why I didn't try Dr. Chase's Nerve Food, so I thought I could at least give it a trial. I secured some and commenced using them, and found they benefitted me so much that I have taken fully a dozen boxes. My nervousness or fidgetty feeling in the limbs is entirely cured. I can now eat and sleep well, I can recommend Dr. Chase's Nerve Food strongly, and would advise anyone suffering from nervous trouble of any kind to use them according to directions."

"If you have been reading the reports published in this paper from day to day of cures effected by Dr. Chase's Nerve Food you will have some idea of the great good it is accomplishing.

In fact it cannot fail to benefit, even in the most extreme cases, because it works hand-in-hand with nature, and cures by supplying the elements from which rich blood and new nerve force are created.

This building up of a depleted and worn-out nervous system must necessarily be slow, and for this reason a little patience and perseverance is necessary.

A condition which has been months or years in development cannot be overcome in a day, but you need have no doubt of the final results if you use Dr. Chase's Nerve Food regularly and persistently. 50 cents a box, 6 boxes for $2.75, all dealers or Edmanson, Bates & Co., Ltd., Toronto. No War-Weariness Found Among Working People In the West of England

I HAVE just returned from a three-weeks' tour of the western counties of England and am able to report from first hand and rather minute observation on one of the most important aspects of the war—namely, the war-weariness of England, writes Gilbert Leides in The Philadelphia Evening Ledger. In doing so I am in the position of some philosophers who write about things which are not. War-weariness simply does not exist.

The thing will take some explaining, because I do not mean to suggest that I have met a single person among all the hundreds I have met who wants the war to go (through another winter. What I do mean is that in country inns and pubs, in city hotels and along the highway, in miners' cottages and farmers' homes, in bicycle shops and tea rooms, I have met no one—literally and absolutely no one—who was at the exhaustion point; not one person who did not feel that he could carry on, and very, very few who did not feel that we stood to gain everything by holding out another spell.

Reports of this nature are generally so misleading that in the interest of accuracy I am going to give the basis of my experience. The ground covered includes Warwickshire, from Stratford-upon-Avon, Gloucestershire, Somerset, Devon and Cornwall, and, in a second tour, Oxfordshire and the counties nearer London. Through these counties I traveled on a bicycle and on foot, taking potluck in the way of sleeping quarters, meeting many people along the roads and stopping to chat with them or accompanying them en route, dropping into public houses for refreshments, at all hours of the day, receiving shelter from private individuals in their homes, sitting in the smoking rooms of hotels, talking to everybody.

In twenty days I heard exactly one man speak with bitterness about the war, and he was a soldier who had been badly treated owing to official blundering. I confess that the bulldog determination, the grim desire to see it through, and all the rest of the gray, noble things, which are supposed to characterize the countryside were not apparent. The attitude of most people is no more grim than the attitude of a moderately poor family determined to work on until it achieved prosperity. The war is being taken as a matter of hard course; the situation has solidified long ago, new grooves have been worn and the people walk in them, not without pain, but without the acute feeling of rawness and novelty.

The western counties are among those where the people are not supposed to know that a war is on. London generally arrogates to itself a superior consciousness of the war, because it sees so many more wounded and unwounded men and officers, because it suffers from air raids, and can occasionally hear the guns of Flanders breaking the stillness of the tranless nights. But as I rode through the little towns I saw over and over again a little red disc hanging in the windows, and could make out the words, "Not at Home." It puzzled me, and finally I stopped to read the entire disc. These were the words:

A Man From This House
NOT AT HOME
Serving in His Majesty's Forces.

So they feel the war with a directness not less than that of London.

They suffer less than London and the southeastern counties because they are near to coal and because they bake for themselves a good deal and because they raise produce. But the fact is that no part of England suffers much, and the irritation of augurless coffee may be as great to the worker in a Cornwall clay factory or to a Devon dairyman as to a London government clerk. In all, I felt that these people felt the war keenly; that made their testimony valuable.

In Somerset a miner who put me up for the night asked the usual questions and began a discourse on the war which ranged from the necessity of restoring Belgium to the wicked wrongness of a certain conscientious objector. He and his wife spoke of their two sons now at the front, one of whom had come from Saskatchewan to fight. Their one regret was that they could do so little in the way of entertaining the wounded who were in hospitals nearby.

At a pub in Cornwall I was asked how long the war would last. I said from eighteen months to three years. The gentleman for whose drink I was allowed to pay opined that there wouldn't be any one left to fight for if the bloody war went on that long, and the lady who served the drinks agreed. Then they curse the Kaiser.

In the midst of Dartmoor Forest I heard much talk of a man who was always called "Kerinsky," and was told that if Russia hadn't broken the war would be over now. But I heard no regrets, as some of the writers in London papers regret, that Russia and free nerve.

These are samples of, literally, hundreds of conversations. Not one has the least diplomatic importance; not one can claim to give the whole heart of England so far as the war is concerned. But the total effect cannot be mistaken. Leave out for the time being the other side of the question, which is a chaotic yearning for something better in the way of old England's living after the war, and you can with honesty and accuracy say that these western counties from which the solid stock of England largely comes are heavily and steadily backing the war.

Look and Feel Clean, Sweet and Fresh Every Day

Drink a glass of real hot water before breakfast to wash out poisons.

Life is not merely to live, but to live well, eat well, digest well, work well, sleep well, look well. What a glorious condition to attain, and yet how very easy it is if one will only adopt the morning inside bath.

Folks who are accustomed to feel dull and heavy when they arise, splitting headache, stuffy from cold, foul tongue, nasty breath, acid stomach, can, instead, feel as fresh as a daisy by opening the sluices of the system each morning and flushing out the whole of the internal poisonous stagnant matter.

Everyone, whether ailing, sick or well, should, each morning, before breakfast, drink a glass of real hot water with a teaspoonful of limestone phosphate in it to wash from the stomach, liver, kidneys and bowels the previous day's indigestible waste, sour bile and poisonous toxins. The action of hot water and limestone phosphate on an empty stomach is wonderfully invigorating. It cleans out all the sour fermentations, gases, waste and acidity and gives one a splendid appetite for breakfast.

The millions of people who are bothered with constipation, bilious spells, stomach trouble, rheumatism, others who have sallow skins, blood disorders and sickly complexions are urged to get a quarter pound of limestone phosphate from the drug store which will cost very little, but is sufficient to make anyone a pronounced crank on the subject of internal sanitation.

SUFFERED WITH NERVES
COULD NOT KEEP QUIET

Diseases of the nervous system are very common.

All the organs of the body may be sound while the nerve centres may be affected.

Many women become run down and worn-out by household duties never ending, and sooner or later find themselves with their nerves shattered, and the heart action weakened.

On the first sign of any weakness of either the heart or nerves, flagging energy, or physical breakdown, do not wait until your case becomes hopeless.

Milburn's Heart and Nerve Pills will at once quieten the shaking nerves, strengthen the weak heart and build up the entire system.

Mrs. F. Bailey, 221 Earl St., Kingston, Ont., writes: "I was suffering very much with my nerves, so much so that I could not keep myself quiet at all. I was recommended to try Milburn's Heart and Nerve Pills so I bought three boxes, and I must say I have derived much benefit from them, so much so that my friends have all noticed the change in me."

Milburn's Heart and Nerve Pills are 50c. per box at all dealers, or mailed direct on receipt of price by The T. Milburn Co., Limited, Toronto, Ont.

The recipes for Corn and Potato Loaf and Boiled Haddock, mentioned above, are as follows:

Boiled Haddock—

Wash and scale thoroughly, wipe the inside, and fasten the tail in the mouth with a skewer. Put 2 oz. salt into 1-2 gal. water, and when it is dissolved, put in the fish. Bring the water to a boil, remove the scum, then simmer gently (about 1-2 hour), until the flesh leaves the bones easily. Take it up as soon as it is sufficiently cooked or it will be hard and tasteless. Garnish with parsley, and serve with melted butter.

Corn-and-Potato Loaf—

2 cupfuls of canned corn
1 quart of potatoes
2 tablespoons drippings
2 teaspoonsful salt
Dash of pepper
1 egg
1 teaspoon grated onion

To the hot mashed potatoes add the corn, the drippings and the seasoning. Beat the egg until light, keeping one teaspoonful to brush over the top of the loaf. Mix together very lightly. Grease well a baking dish, put in the mixture, smooth the top, and brush with egg. Place in a moderate oven and bake for thirty minutes or until nice and brown. Serve with cream sauce.

The tusks of the cow elephant have been found best adapted to the making of billiard balls. The tusk of the female is not so curved as that of the male, and the fine nerve passage is not so clearly seen.

DROPS OF MAGIC! LIFT OUT CORNS

Sore, touchy corns stop hurting, then lift right out with fingers

For a few cents you can get a small bottle of the magic drug freezone recently discovered by a Cincinnati man.

Just ask at any drug store for a small bottle of freezone. Apply a few drops upon a tender, aching corn or callus and instantly all soreness disappears and shortly you will find the corn or callus so loose that you lift it off with the fingers.

Just think! Not one bit of pain before applying freezone or afterwards. It doesn't even irritate the surrounding skin.

Hard corns, soft corns, or corns between the toes, also hardened calluses on bottom of feet, shrivel up and fall off without hurting a particle. It is almost magical.

Ladies! Keep a tiny bottle on the dresser and never let a corn or callus ache twice.

The reason why Stuart's Calcium Wafers beautify the skin is their natural tendency to seek the surface.

The wonderful calcium sulfide is one of the natural constituents of the human body. You must have it to be healthy. It enriches the blood, invigorates skin health, dries up the pimples and boils, eczema and blotches, enables new skin of fine texture to form and become clear, pinkish, smooth as velvet and refined to the point of loveliness and beauty. This is "how to be beautiful." Stop using creams, lotions, powders and bleaches, which merely hide for the moment. Get a 50-cent box of Stuart's Calcium Wafers at any drug store to-day.

MOB BURNED NEGRO.

Oil Was Poured on Clothing of Girl's Murderer.

HAZELHURST, Miss., Jan. 18.—A mob of several residents of Hazelhurst took Sim Edwards, a negro, accused of the murder of seventeen-year-old Vera Willis, from the jail here early to-day and burned him to death. Oil was poured on the negro's clothing by the leaders of the mob, said by county officers to include the father of the girl.

NOTHING CAN COMPARE WITH IT

Mr. Fred Adams, New Rose N.S., writes—"I have tried many medicines for coughs and colds but never found anything to compare to Dr. Chase's Syrup of Linseed and Turpentine. We have had the greatest satisfaction with this medicine for it is up."

Wilson's Points For Peace And Von Hertling's Replies

Cannot Talk of Cession of Alsace-Lorraine—Russian Affairs Are None of the Allies' Business—The Reduction of Armaments.

Following are the fourteen essentials to a world peace, as outlined by President Wilson, and the German answers as announced by Chancellor von Hertling in the Reichstag, recently.

WILSON'S POINTS.	GERMANY'S ANSWERS.
1. Open covenants of peace and no more secret diplomacy.	1. We are ready to accept this proposal and declare publicity a general political principle.
2. Absolute freedom of the seas except as they may be closed by international action.	2. This also is demanded by Germany as the first and one of the most important requirements of the future. Fortified naval bases should be removed.
3. Removal of economic barriers and freedom of trade.	3. We are in thorough accord with the removal of economic barriers and condemn economic war.
4. Reduction of armaments.	4. This is entirely discussable.
5. Adjustment of colonial claims on basis of the equal say of the people with the Governments concerned.	5. This may be left for England to make what she will of this proposal of her ally. It will also have to be discussed in due time.
6. Evacuation of all Russian territory and opportunity for Russia's political development.	6. This concerns only Russia and the Central Powers.
7. Evacuation of Belgium without any attempt to limit her sovereignty.	7. Can only be settled in peace negotiations, but Germany never demanded the incorporation of Belgian territory by violence.
8. All French territory to be freed and restored, and the wrong done in the matter of Alsace-Lorraine should be righted.	8. Germany does not wish annexation by violence, but this is a question for France and Germany. However, we cannot talk of the cession of Alsace-Lorraine, 87 per cent. of whose population speak German.
9 and 10. Settlement of Italy's frontiers on lines of nationality; freest opportunity for autonomy in Austria-Hungary.	9 and 10. Germany remains solidly with Austria-Hungary—(What follows is censored or indecipherable.)
11. Evacuation of Roumania, Serbia, and Montenegro, and international guarantees of independence and integrity of the Balkan States.	11. The future of the Balkans is of paramount importance to the political interests of Austro-Hungary. German interests are also concerned. We will guard them to the utmost.
12. Secure sovereignty for Turkey's portion of the Ottoman Empire, but assured security of life and autonomous development for other nationalities; Dardanelles permanently open to all.	12. Germany would not forestall Turkey's attitude, but the integrity of Turkey and the safety of her capital were closely connected with the question of the Strait, which was of important interest to Germany.
13. Establishment of an independent Polish State.	13. This must be decided by Germany and Austria-Hungary.
14. General association of nations for mutual guarantees of political independence and territorial integrity to large and small nations alike.	14. Germany will be ready when all other questions are settled to discuss a league of peoples.

GERMANY'S SUBSTITUTE FOOD

AMSTERDAM — Ten thousand substitute food articles have been introduced into Germany since the war according to a statement made in the Berlin newspapers by Professor Juckenack, a prominent German food expert. He mentions as the most striking examples of successful substitution the following: Artificial butter, eggs, salad oil, honey milk, coffee, tea, sugar, tobacco, fish sausage cheese and caviar. Some of the substitutes are directly harmful but others are so good that they will outlive the war and become regular articles of consumption he asserts.

"THE COAL SITUATION"

Oh! the woes of us poor people
In the bitter winter time,
When there's frost upon the windows,
(P'raps I'd better call it rime).

And the snow is on the sidewalks,
And there's lots more yet to fall,
But this most unpleasant season
Wouldn't worry me at all

If the cellar wasn't empty,
And the wood was stacked up high,
So you didn't have to worry
For the coalless bye and bye.

But our coal's put on by spoonfuls
And our sticks of wood are few;
So we sit around and shiver,
For there's nothing else to do!

Yes, we sit around the heater,
Which gives out no spark of heat,
And we've frost bites on our fingers,
Likewise chilblains on our feet.

But when coal DOES reach the city,
And we set our order through,
(By the kindness of our Police staff)
Without whom what should we do?

Then it's like the children's grab bags
Over which some mystery clings,
If you want "stove" for our furnace
Then Pea coal he surely brings.

But we're thankful now for any,
And we're hoping for the spring;
Also longing for the summer,
Good and warm, like everything!

"FROZEN FLORA".

Mrs. Jones rushed into her neighbour's and asked if she might use the telephone.

"What's the matter?" asked the neighbour.

"I want to send for the doctor for my husband!" panted Mrs. Jones.

"What's up with him?"

"He tells me he has got hepatitis, dyspepsia, rheumatism, enteritis, gastritis, appendicitis, nephritis and cerebro-spinal meningitis!"

"Where did he get all that?"

"Why, a man induced him to buy a medical dictionary, and he's just begun reading it."—Pittsburg Chronicle-Telegraph.

"Tanlac Has Simply Made Me Feel Like a New Man" Says Harry McDermott

"If I ventured to eat a little sugar I would just roll and toss all night, in so much misery I couldn't sleep," said Harry McDermott, who lives at 132 Irmington Avenue, in describing the condition he was in before he began taking Tanlac. Mr. McDermott is employed by the Laidlaw Lumber Company and has been a resident of Toronto for seventeen years.

"I had no appetite," he continued, and what I would eat only made trouble for me. Soon after eating a pair would start in my stomach, move up into my chest, then down to the pit of my stomach, and was so violent at times I had to go bent over. I would blast all up—couldn't take a good deep breath on account of the gas—and was constantly belching up sour, undigested particles of food. No matter how careful I was about what I ate I suffered the same way. Some days my pain made me right weak and faint and I just felt like giving up and going home. Oh, I just can't describe my awful feelings. I was all demoralized—didn't want to stop off and yet I was in no shape to work—I had been unable to get anything to help me and hardly knew what to do.

"One day my mother-in-law explained to me how she had gotten relief from a bad case of stomach trouble by taking Tanlac and advised me to try it. So I did, and when I finished my first bottle I felt better, and lot better at that. I have taken three bottles now and my appetite is fine. I can eat anything and all the gas, bloating and pain has disappeared, and, in fact, I have no more signs of indigestion. Tanlac has simply made me feel like a new man through and through and I don't believe it has an equal for troubles like I had."

Tanlac is sold in Peterborough by W. B. Warne Drug Co., Ltd., in Havelock by A. C. Denike, in Lakefield by Tanner Drug Co., Ltd.

Stewart's Hall News Paragraphs

STEWART HALL, Jan. 28.—Mr. Sandy Matchett, who has been very ill, is, we are pleased to report, recovering.

Mr. and Mrs. Bruce Savigny were at the latter's home at Mather's Corners this past week.

Miss Queenie Matchett, who has been staying with Mrs. Tully at Coldsprings, has returned home.

Miss Saran and Mrs. Millie Armstrong were in Keene for the week-end.

Miss Margaret Dick is taking treatment at Nicholls Hospital. We trust she will soon be able to return home.

On the twenty-third Mr. Richard Stewart invested in three seagoing craft of various designs. Richard will soon have a fleet, which he evidently will need for the summer season, as he always has an abundance of passengers.

Mrs. John Collins, of Zion, was a recent guest of Mrs. Fred Collins here.

Messrs. George Stewart and Will Dawson attended the sale in Cavan, and report "sky-high" prices—cows bringing from $100 to $150.

Miss Nellie Harper has a young swan, which, with care, will endure this climate and soon emerge full grown.

The trustees of the Hall held their annual meeting on Tuesday evening at the Hall. The trustees were re-elected, and there is to be some slight alterations made to the building in the spring. The old stove and pipes were disposed of at reasonable prices to Mr. Beecher Matchett.

Mr. and Mrs. Joshua Chambers were in Peterborough on Dollar Day shopping.

The countenance of Mr. James Stewart tells of the recent severe loss he experienced during the recent severe cold weather. His numerous friends extend sympathy, and hope the loss may soon be replaced.

Miss Mabel Robinson is visiting her sister, Mrs. Dixon at Zion.

Little Marie stood in the doorway, one hand on the door-knob. For a moment she gazed at her mother, who was preparing to go out.

"Mother," she said, "do you know what I am going to give you for your birthday when it comes?"

"No, dear," answered the mother. "Please tell me."

"A nice hairpin-tray with gold flowers on it all around," said the little girl.

"But my dear," exclaimed the mother, "I have a nice one like that already."

"No, you haven't, mother," Marie answered, "I have just dropped it on the floor."—Chicago Herald.

A Home Recipe For Wrinkled, Saggy Skin

The famous saxolite lotion recommended by beauty specialists for removing wrinkles and for reducing distended pores, can easily be made at home. Ask your druggist for saxolite in powdered form, one ounce, and a half pint of witch hazel. Dissolve the powder in the witch hazel and bathe the face, neck, and hands in the solution. Results are remarkable and instantaneous. The skin tightens, and this naturally reduces the wrinkles, as well as creases or folds about the neck, cheeks, or hands. The tissue beneath the skin also becomes firmer and more solid. One feels much refreshed and exhilarated after using this truly wonderful preparation. Many women look five or ten years younger after using this only a short time.

Voice of The People

Editor of the Examiner.

Sir,—Here are some words our Saviour said about prayer: But thou, when thou prayest, enter into thy closet, and when thou has shut thy door, pray to thy father which is in secret, and thy father which seeth in secret shall reward thee openly. (Matt. 6, 6.) Ask, and it shall be given you; seek, and ye shall find; knock, and it shall be opened unto you. For ever yone that asketh, receiveth; and he that seeketh, findeth; and to him that knocketh, it shall be opened. (Matt. 7, 7, 8.) Again I say unto you, that if two of you shall agree on earth as touching anything that they shall ask, it shall be done for them of my father which is in heaven. (Matt. 18, 19.) In Daniel, 2nd chapter, the king had forgotten his dream, and because apparently there was no man who could produce it, the decree went forth that the wise men were to be slain. Daniel wanted to know why the decree was so hasty from the king. Daniel went in and desired of the king that he would give him time and that he would show the king the interpretation. Then Daniel went to his house and made the thing known to his companions, that they would desire mercies of the God of Heaven concerning this secret, that Daniel and his fellows should not perish with the rest of the wise men of Bacylon. No doubt expressed about it: Then was the secret revealed unto Daniel in a night vision. Mind: Then Daniel blessed the God of Heaven. Again in the third chapter, the king has set up a wonderful image of gold, and whoso falleth not down and worshippeth shall the same hour be cast into the midst of a burning fiery furnace. Of course, this came in collision with the Hebrew children, and when they were approached they said: We are not careful to answer thee in this matter. If it be so, our God whom we serve is able to deliver us from the burning fiery furnace, and he will deliver us out of thine hand, oh king. No doubt expressed. Now, look at verse 25. He answered and said, Lo, I see four men loose, walking in the midst of the fire, and they have no hurt; and the form of the fourth is like the Son of God. Now again in chap. 6 there is a fresh king who has been influenced to establish a royal statute and to make a firm decree that whosoever shall ask a petition of any god or man for thirty days, save of thee, oh king, shall be cast into the den of lions. Of course, this was to trap Daniel. Verse 10: Now, when Daniel knew that the writing was signed, he went into his house, and his windows being open in his chamber toward Jerusalem, he kneeled upon his knees three times a day and prayed and gave thanks before his God as he did aforetime. Of course, the decree was carried out. But look at the king in the morning (verse 20). And Daniel in verse 22: My God has sent his angel. Read those stories. They are surely more interesting than any novel. They also teach us that our God and Father is not only able but willing to come to our relief. Now some things that hinder prayer. Electricity is a strange element. How does it come that you can give us in your grand paper so soon the news from London? We know there must be connection with the source of power. Just so in prayer. We must appeal to the source of power, our Heavenly Father, and in Psalm 66, verse 18: If I regard iniquity in my heart the Lord will not hear me. Look also in Isaiah, chap. 1, verse 3: The ox knoweth his owner and the ass his master's crib, but Israel doth not know, my people doth not consider, and after many other things being said. Look at verse 15, 1st chapter of Isaiah: And when ye spread forth your hands, I will hide mine eyes from you; yea, when ye make many prayers, I will not hear; your hands are full of blood; wash you, make you clean, put away the evil of your doings from before mine eyes; cease to do evil, learn to do well, seek judgment, relieve the oppressed, judge the fatherless, plead for the widows. Come now, and let us reason together, said the Lord, etc., to the end of verse 20. Now look at Isaiah 59, 1: Behold, the Lord's hand is not shortened that it cannot save, neither his ear heavy that it cannot hear; but but your iniquities have separated between you and your God, and your sins have hid his face from you that he will not hear, for your hands are defiled with blood and your fingers with iniquity; your lips have spoken lies, your tongue hath muttered perverseness. I take it that these things with others were said against the nation. I ask you, is Britain innocent? My views are that our Heavenly Father could as easily thwart the designs of these submarines as I could turn my hand. If this is true, there must be something wrong. As high as 18 vessels in one week put down. Surely it is time to consider this, yes, and many other plans to destroy life and property. Some few years ago Dr. Gordon Standing, in front of George Street Methodist Church said there were 967 ministers who had stock in breweries or were interested in other ways in the liquor business. I thought surely I must be mistaken; so I went to see him in his room in the Oriental, and he said a little under one thousand of different sects in the Old Land. He also said the social drinking customs of the hour threaten the permanency of our Christian institutions. The saloon is the organised enemy of the home. The distiller quaffs a goblet full to the brim with liquid agony, and feeds like some monster of antient mythology on human hearts, crushed, pierced, broken, and torn. I would take my chances on the day of judgment with Judas Iscariot rather than with the brewer who coins sorrow into silver, blood into bonds, and manhood into the merchandise of ill-gotten wealth. He has no hesitation in crowding his hellish products, by display advertisements and electric signs, upon the unsuspecting youth of the community; and I have no hesitation in branding him the arch-traitor of the race. And do I undersand that this is still going on in the Old Land, and can our Heavenly Father look favourably on this awful business? Travellers, stop and consider while yet you may.

Two brothers were being entertained by a rich friend. As ill-luck would have it, the talk drifted away from ordinary topics.

"Do you like Omar Khayyam?" thoughtlessly remarked the host, trying to make conversation. The elder brother plunged heroically into the breach.

"Pretty well," he said, "but I prefer Chianti."

Nothing more was said on this subject until the brothers were on their way home.

"Bill," said the younger brother, breaking a painful silence, "why can't you leave things that you don't understand to me? Omar Khayyam ain't a wine, you chump; it's a cheese."—New York Globe.

A SUMMARY OF TO-DAY'S WAR CABLES

(Canadian Press Despatch.)

Yesterday evening the enemy raided an advanced post northeast of Langemarck. Three of our men are missing. Southeast of Leverguir a strong reconnoitring party was dispersed by rifle fire. During the night the hostile artillery was active at different points southwest of Cambrai, and also north of Lens in the Passchendaele sector.

(Special to The Toronto Star and The Peterborough Examiner.)

LONDON, January 28. — Severe disturbances have occurred in the Rheinish industrial districts, according to reports from The Hague printed to-day by the London Daily Mail. The despatch asserted that machine guns had been distributed to the troops at Mulheit. No further details were given.

(Special to The Toronto Star and The Peterborough Examiner.)

AMSTERDAM, January 28.—Ukrainians bitterly fighting the Bolsheviki, asked assistance of the Austro-Hungarian commander, but were refused aid, according to Vienna despatches to-day quoting the Ukrainian reports from the newspaper Duo.

(Special to The Toronto Star and The Peterborough Examiner.)

AMSTERDAM, January 28.—The victory of the Socialist candidate Herr Uhlig over the Conservative aspirant Dr. Herrman in the bye-election for the Reichstag at Bautezen, Saxony, was reported in Berlin despatches to-day. The Socialist organ Vorwerts recalling an opinion expressed by the Conservative organ Kreuz Zeitung that the election would be a "test of the feeling of the German people," declared to-day that victory must come to the Socialist majority's policies.

(Canadian Press Despatch.)

AMSTERDAM, January 28.—Count Czernin, Austro-Hungarian Foreign Minister, left on Sunday for Brest-Litovsk, where negotiations with the Russians are taking place, according to Vienna advices to-day. He was accompanied by numerous officials. Count Czernin's policy in administering the Austro-Hungarian Foreign Office, has been endorsed by the Foreign Affairs Committee of the Reichrath, which has adopted a vote of confidence by 144 votes against seven.

(Special to The Toronto Star and The Peterborough Examiner.)

LONDON, January 28.—British airmen who raided Mannheim caused unparalleled terror in that city, according to Geneva despatches quoting several travellers from Germany. One of these, an injured German, arrived at Basle.

"Despite police orders," he said, "the terror-stricken people rushed out of doors half clothed and gathered in the streets. The British raiders scored a direct hit on the railway tracks.

After the raid the travellers declared crowds assembled and shouted "down with war, give us peace."

(Special to The Toronto Star and The Peterborough Examiner.)

AMSTERDAM, January 28.—Open demand that the German people revolt "to save themselves," and reference to the Kaiser as "Germany's hangman," was made by the Deutsches Tages Zeitung in copies of that paper received here to-day. The Deutsches Tages Zeitung is the Agrarian Conservative newspaper organ of the landed class of Germany and not heretofore regarded as in the slightest degree radical.

(Canadian Press Despatch.)

AMSTERDAM, January 28.—Chancellor Von Hertling, according to a despatch from Berlin to the Frankfurter Zeitung, probably will make another public statement shortly regarding the Belgium question. Instead of treating the matter from a motive point of view, the despatch says: The Chancellor will make positive suggestion and proposals.

TOKIO, January 28.—An impassioned denunciation of the Terauchi Ministry, and an eloquent plea that Japan enter more vigorously into the war for democracy, was delivered to-day in the House of Representatives by former Minister of Justice Osaki. He lamented the "indifference to war" in Japan and demanded that the nation increase the aid extended the Allies, with whom he said the relations were becoming strained due to the Government's policy.

"The Entente," he asserted, "is fighting for democracy, but the Japanese Ministry represents militarism." Osaki urged that Japan state her war aims and wanted to know why it was that British and American warships were at Vladivostok when Japan's agreement with America was to protect the Allied interests in the Pacific.

(Canadian Press Despatch.)

RAILWAYS SCURRY TO COVER BEFORE A DRIVING STORM

C. P. R. Service Cancelled and G. T. R. in Difficulties at Different Sections of the Line

TORONTO IN A SWIRL

The railways were running for cover this morning before a storm that was rapidly moving east, leaving in its wake stalled engines and traffic brought to a sudden halt.

From the C.P.R. it was reported that trains had been cancelled east and west of the city. The weight and severity of the storm in the Toronto district was illustrated by the cancellation of the train that passes through Peterborough at 11:30 a.m. Early in the day the wires flashed bulletins of the troubles at the Toronto terminals, and further west, but the local staffs failed to realize the force of the tempest until they were notified that the schedules were held up for the day.

Theatrical Troubles.

The noon G.T.R. train became tangled in the snow at Scarboro, but managed to put back into Toronto. It was carrying the baggage of "The Come Back to Erin Company which plays here to-night. This car was turned over to the main line and was heading eastward to Port Hipe, where the noon train to Peterborough was waiting for the connection. It was believed that Mr. Walter Lawrence and his company would arrive in time for their engagement here to-night.

In the meantime a special section of the regular train from Toronto via Blackwater was made up at Lindsay and passed through this city at 1:15 for Port Hope.

The Belleville train left at its scheduled hour 1:30 p.m. A double-header freight from the east ran into the storm at Keene. It was ordered to "set down" its train at Hastings and proceed at once to Lindsay.

Shortly after dinner three "light" engines left for Lindsay scurrying home to the sheltering roundhouses. The officials evidently decided to take no chances of having dead engines crippled at country stations.

Money Recovered From The Fire

Edward Parks Left $889 in His Room When He Made Hurried Exit on Saturday

Edward Parks, an employee of the Royal Theatre, can consider himself a lucky man. Parks, who slept in a room in the third floor of the Royal building, was awakened by the smoke of Saturday morning's fire, and made a hurried exit in sleeping attire. In the speed of his get-away he forgot that he had a considerable sum of money—$889.00 to be exact—in his room, and when realization came it was too late to go back for the money. Yesterday afternoon the firemen and police managed to climb up to the top floor and recover the money. $400 was found in a satchel hanging on the wall and the balance in a trunk. The money was wet but was not burned, although most of the contents of the room were destroyed.

MASONIC NOTICE

All Past Masters, Trustees and Chairmen of Special Committees of the several Masonic Lodges in the city are requested to attend a Special Meeting which will be held TO-NIGHT at 8 o'clock, in the Sun Life Office.

Serious Accident

Mrs. William Bell Was Thrown Against an Electric Light Pole and Sustained Severe Scalp Wounds

SONS OVERSEAS

A serious accident occurred about ten o'clock this morning at the corner of George and Simcoe Streets, when Mrs. William Bell, of Smith township, was severely hurt as a result of striking her head against an iron pole. A horse attached to a cutter in which Mrs. Bell was driving, shied at a passing sweeper belonging to the Street Railway Company. The animal jumped to one side, and the cutter smashed up against the pole directly outside of Turnbulls store on George Street. Mrs. Bell struck the pole with her head, causing severe scalp wounds. She was carried into Payne's drug store in a semi-conscious condition, and later removed to Nicholls Hospital in Comstock's ambulance.

Lance-Corporal Bruce Bell, of the 93rd Battalion, and Gunner Ward Bell, of the Canadian Artillery, are sons of Mrs. Bell. The family formerly resided in the city.

Dr. C. H. Amys and Dr. Carmichael are in attendance.

Late this afternoon the condition of Mrs. Bell was reported to be about the same.

RAILWAYS TIED UP

Canadian Press Despatch:

TORONTO, Ont., Jan. 28.—That the railway traffic around Toronto and in most other parts of Ontario will be completely tied up again before night if the present storm continues, is the report of railway officials here this afternoon.

The weather bureau does not make the situation any brighter. The weather man prophesies a continuation of the blizzard, not only to-day, but to-morrow. Ontario has scarcely recovered from the storm and consequent disruption of traffic which occurred two weeks ago all over the province. The conditions to-day make the situation very much worse. Many localities, already completely lacking coal supplies, now see relief still further delayed.

The Examiner Prizes For Dollar Day

The Winners Either Estimated Correctly or Just One Out

The Examiner contest on Dollar Day proved as great an attraction as ever. Over six hundred estimates were put in the box and on account of the simplicity of the contest the estimates were very close. However, there were several that went over the nine thousand mark. We believe the winners are all new, never having won in a previous Examiner contest.

Four people estimated the exact number, 425, which was the number of coppers in the jar, and will each receive $3.63 in cash at the Examiner office. They divide the first, second, third and fourth prizes of $5.00, $4.00, $3.00 and $2.50 respectively.

Five others divide the balance of the prizes, being one out, and receive $1.10 each.

The winners are as follows:

W. J. Green, 425	$ 3.63
J. F. McCarthy, 425	3.63
Mrs. H. J. McCannon, 425	3.63
Miss Margaret Lee, 425	3.63
Theodore Johnston, 424	1.10
Mrs. W. H. White, 424	1.10
Mrs. A. Miller, 424	1.10
V. Rutherford, 426	1.10
H. J. McCannon, 426	1.10
	$20.02

The above amounts will be paid at any time at the Examiner office.

THE SCENE OF SATURDAY'S FIRE IS A PICTURE OF RUIN AND DESTRUCTION

FEATURES OF THE FIRE

The south-eastern corner of Simcoe and George Streets presents a pathetic scene of ruin and destruction to-day as a result of Saturday morning's big fire, and it is possible now to get a more comprehensive idea of the havoc worked by the flames. Nothing remains of the big Neill store except the back wall. The splendid building with its attractive plate-glass front, has disappeared, leaving only a mass of ruins, which are still smouldering in spite of the tons of water that have been poured in. The Dominion Bank building, with its top floor gutted and the roof gone, is sheeted with ice until its appearance is that of an ice palace. The offices of the Dominion Bank and the store of the Matthews-Blackwell Company are practically ruined, while to the south of the gap is the Royal Theatre, so deeply coated with ice that the front and the huge electric sign are obliterated completely.

Fireman Degan Better.

Fireman Frank Degan, who was overcome by smoke on Saturday morning, and was carried out of the Dominion Bank building unconscious, is much better to-day. Degan, with Lieut. Ward of the local fire department, and Messrs. W. P. Adamson and Archie Barbeau, took a line of hose into the Dominion Bank building. The party attempted to carry the branch into the top floor by means of a trap-door into the attic, but the smoke was so thick that Degan was overcome and had to be carried out. He was taken into the store of Richard Hall and Son and restorative methods adopted.

The Masonic Loss.

The local Masonic fraternity are heavy losers, both from a financial and from a sentimental viewpoint as a result of the destruction of their hall. The Masons occupied the entire top floor over the Dominion Bank and the Matthews-Blackwell store, while their dining hall was situated on the second floor. Upstairs their lodge-room and the fine Masonic library containing many volumes that cannot possibly be replaced, were completely destroyed. Many articles of historic value, including a warrant from the Grand Lodge of England, issued in 1846, historic gavels and other irreplacable property, were consumed, while the members lost their regalia. Fortunately the fire did not reach the dining hall, and the many splendid pictures of past masters of the different lodges, although coated with ice, were not destroyed, and were recovered yesterday.

A quantity of articles found in the debris on the top floor were taken to the office of the Canadian Patriotic Fund, and Masons may call and inspect them there.

Saved Much of the Stock.

The Matthews-Blackwell firm were successful in saving a large amount of the contents of their retail store. Realizing that the building was in great danger, the work of removing the stock was commenced at an early hour, and before the fire had spread northward a large amount of the stock was carried out.

Hot Drinks for Firemen.

The Fire Brigade and the police who were on duty at the fire are extremely grateful to the people who supplied them with hot drinks and food during the hours of their heroic fight with the flames. Thanks are due to Messrs. N. Douros, J. Douros, Peter Gettas, and Bill Coros, for supplying much appreciated refreshments, and to Mrs. Fenwick, Mrs. J. Foster, and Miss D. Fenwick, who kept a constant supply of hot cocoa circulating among the fire-fighters. The extreme cold gamy the latter an extremely disagreeable morning, and the refreshments were appreciated.

At the City Hall.

For the space of an hour the city buildings were seriously threatened by the fire, which during that time was blazing fiercely in the mansard roof of the Dominion Bank building. Ald. F. H. Dobbin, secretary of the

ANNEXATION PRINCIPLES DISAVOWED BY KUEHLMANN

(Special to The Toronto Star and The Peterborough Examiner.)

AMSTERDAM, January 28. — German Foreign Secretary Kuehlmann flatly disavowed annexationist principles in his speech before the Main Reichstag Committee Saturday, according to details received here.

The German Minister was quoted as saying:

"The declaration of Westarp (leader of the German Conservatives), advocates the seizure of territory based on our military successes. Such an attitude, for the present, the Imperial Government in view of all its principles, is impossible from the outset."

DISTURBANCES AMONG HUN WORKMEN VERY SIGNIFICANT

General Strike in Rheinish Industries Would Mean An Immediate Stoppage of Guns and Ammunition for the Kaiser's Army

SEVERE OUTBREAKS

(Special to the Toronto Star and The Peterborough Examiner.)

(By J. W. T. Mason.)

NEW YORK, Jan. 28.— Reports of disturbances among German workingmen in the Rheinish industrial districts are very significant of the increasingly serious labour situation within the Central Empires.

The Rheinish province is the seat of Germany's iron and steel industries. It is where the principal munitions for the German army are manufactured. The workingmen at these plants have been treated with unusual consideration by the government during the war. Not only have their wages been raised, but special food concessions have been given them and every effort had been made to keep their efficiency up to the highest level. Disturbances among these men are second in importance only to outbreaks among soldiers themselves. A general strike in the Rheinish industries would result in an immediate stoppage of guns and ammunition for the Kaiser's armies. The only reasons for such disturbances would be an inability on the part of the government because of the food shortage to continue giving munitions workers preferential treatment and the development of a despairing spirit of war weariness, coupled with resentment against the militarists manner of conducting peace negotiations.

The Rheinish workingmen are largely Socialistic and it is natural to assume they have been greatly influenced by the denunciations of Count Von Hertling's imperialistic policy uttered by the Socialist leaders of the Reichstag. The only influence Herr Schiedmann, Dr. Elsert and other leaders can exert on government is through the response of Germany's Socialist working men to these criticisms. If the government feared no response it is a safe assumption that the Socialist criticizers of the Kaiser's peace spokesmen would now be in jail. Only last week, however, a Berlin newspaper was suspended for suggesting that Socialist leaders be subjected to court-martial proceedings. This unprecedented consideration for the feelings of Socialists must be due to the uneasiness of the ungovernment circles as to what Socialists might do next. The disturbances among Rheinish workingmen may be the answer.

LONDON, Jan. 28.— Reports of serious disturbances in Germany are again current in Holland and severe outbreaks are said to have occurred in Rheinish industrial districts. Troops with machine guns have been summoned to Muelheim, on the Rhine, opposite Cologne. Riots are also reported in Prague and other points.

DOES NOT FAVOUR FOOD RATIONING OR PRICE-FIXING

New Food Controller Does Not Believe That the Expense of a Rationing System for Canada Would Be Justified by Results Which Could Be Obtained

URGE GREATER PRODUCTION

(Special to the Toronto Star and The Peterborough Examiner.)

OTTAWA, Jan. 28.— What policy does the new food controller, H. B. Thomson, intend to pursue? That is the question that Ottawa is asking to-day. Mr. Thomson is not inclined to be very communicative at any time and is somewhat less so than usual with regard to his intentions in the matter of food control.

He intimates, however, that he intends to have the scope of his work pretty well outlined by the Cabinet, so that there will be no conflict of jurisdiction or duplication of work. Mr. Thomson looks like a man who would have his own way in anything he undertakes. He had practical experience in many things, including politics, mining, real estate and the trade of merchant. He also has for some time past been assistant to Hon. W. J. Hanna, who he now succeeds.

Conservation of food and not fixing of prices has been the avowed policy of the food controller's department in the past. To decrease the price of food staples, it has been contended, tends to increase consumption in Canada and decreases the surplus for export. Therefore nothing worth while in the line of fixing prices has been undertaken. The main campaign of the department has been in the direction of advising along the lines of saving and conservation. It is stated that the new food controller is not in favour of price fixing either, neither, it is stated, does he favour rationing. He takes the ground indeed, but the expense and machinery necessary for a successful and effective rationing system in Canada would not be justified by the comparatively insignificant results which would be obtained. Rationing in the large cities might be practicable, but in the urban centres next to impossible.

Canada has a sparse population, but an unlimited territory of arable and productive land. The amount she can accomplish in the matter of conservation of food is, therefore, infinitesimal as compared with the contributions she can make toward the allies by increased production. Ninety per cent of the people, Mr. Thomson claims, are ready to do voluntarily whatever conservation they may be told is necessary. For the sake of the remaining 10 per cent. an expensive and difficult system of rationing is not worth while. Under these circumstances it may be that the efforts of the department will be turned toward increased production in the future and toward the turning of by-products which at present go to waste, to useful purposes.

CAUSE OF CANADIAN FIRE LOSSES.

Without any reference whatever to the costly fire of Saturday, it may be safely asserted that the fires in Canadian cities, especially fires of disastrous spread, are preventable, and due to contributing causes that involve the idea of criminal carelessness in construction.

In other and older countries, where the hurry and rush incident to nascent nationhood are absent, where national solidity of character adding the lessons of experience, account for a policy of building things to last; there is a solidity of building construction that prevents, or if it does not prevent, does not invite fires of an extensive character.

How criminally careless are our building methods, which invite disastrous fires, is evidenced by a comparison of the per capita losses of Canada and other countries. The English Post and Monitor publishes a list of the per capita fire losses of several countries. It is as follows:

Canada, $2.88 per head.
United States, $2.55 per head.
France, $0.84 per head.
United Kingdom, $0.50 per head.

It is thus seen, that Canada's name, though it is not anything to be proud of—like Abou Ben Adhem's name, leads all the rest. There is a reason for this and the reason largely consists in the flimsy character of Canadian buildings, compared with those of Britain and France. In the United States, where the same spirit of rush affects everything, the per capita fire loss is about the same as that of Canada.

In most city fires of Canada, where the flames spread to adjoining premises, the result is directly due to improper or imperfectly proper, construction. A partition fire wall, instead of being carried safely above the roofs of adjoining buildings, is not high enough, or, as in the case of the many buildings, is not a proper fire wall at all, and its absence permits the fire eating its way from building to building, and what, with proper construction, might have been a bad enough fire confined to one building, gains a sweep that results in a disastrous conflagration, including many large and costly structures, and causing a loss that mounts into thousands, instead of tens or hundreds of dollars less. The cost, at the time of building, of making a fire wall or fire walls secure, and a certain preventive of the spread of fire, would be very small; but the price of neglect may be losses hundreds of thousand of dollars greater than ten times the cost of building safely.

The remedy for our fire losses, and other losses from faulty or careless construction, is to cease doing such things. There must, or there obviously should, be authoritative regulation of building methods and efficient inspection; for men are so constituted that, through indifference, or ignorance, or dishonesty, they will "take chances," and run up buildings "to sell"—caring how much property loss and possibly loss of human life, may result from jerry-building methods.

There should be a law to regulate the construction of buildings and rigid inspection to compel rigid adherence to such building regulations in the interests of the public safety and immunity from tremendous loss through fires, that the character of builders make go-as-you-please and as-far-as-you-please affairs.

In Peterborough we have a fire by-law, which prescribes the thickness of walls, of buildings or additions erected in the fire limits; but a little pull or a little persuasion, is sufficient, or has been sufficient, to officially permit disregard of the by-law.

Toronto is aptly enough called "Hogtown"—it hogs the glory of being the most glorious patriotic giver of any city on the continent.

MAINTAIN OUR SELF-RESPECT.

As remarked before, Mr. Adams, town planner of the Conservation Commission, didn't say much that was startlingly new in his two addresses in Peterborough last week, but he gave the official endorsement of an expert authority to many things that have been repeatedly urged in the press; an endorsation which it is hoped will convince the city authorities on some points and lead to beneficial action.

For instance, Mr. Adams said the trees on Peterborough streets were planted at too close distances, something obvious to the most careless observer. Yet no systematic action has been taken to deal with this defect, though, as Mr. Adams pointed out, the removed trees would make excellent fuel. The removable trees, if cut at an early date, and the resulting wood piled under shelter, would give the city a large supply to meet the demands of its charity distribution, next winter.

Mr. Adams also vigorously denounced the "butchering" to which our street trees had been subjected, to their great disfigurement, and to the serious injury of their vitality and future healthfulness.

Year after year The Examiner has called attention to this outrageous practice, and citizens who care, have felt curses, not loud but deep; but year after year puts the same kind of untrained and incompentent "tree butcher" upon the job. Why this is done passes comprehension, beyond the fact that it shows the civic indifference to the beauty of the crowning summer glory of Peterborough—her street trees; or it argues a mild reflection of the discredited and discreditable patronage system of the late Dominion government—a system that seeks reward for aldermanic support or a desire to give some 'deserving fellow' a job, no matter how much he is unfitted for the work, and no matter how much our trees are "butchered," and the beauty of our streets marred.

Now that an expert has pointed out the evil, and given local condemnation of the evil the stamp of his official endorsation, perhaps, the aldermen will pay some attention to the matter.

Dealing with our street trees properly would cost very little except the exercise of common sense and care. Thinning them when too thick, should be done under the direction of a tree expert, and lover of tree beauty, not by a "lumberman" whose business and business training has been to lay low trees, regardless of results, with no eye to the survival of the fittest, or preservation of beauty and shade. The resulting fuel will be worth much more than the cost of removal even if porperly done.

Then planting a tree for every one removed—in some place where there is a vacancy, or on treeless streets—will cost only a trifle.

The aldermen owe the citizens something like this, for they have destroyed many grand street trees; and, also, it appears that the grants are to be cut off from the Horticultural Society, and those to the parks, if not cancelled, greatly cut down.

In this connection it becomes the Horticultural Society to fill the breach and get funds for its work by increase of membership. It, of course, cannot hope to reach the membership of the St. Thomas Society—1500, or reach the St. Thomas' achievement of flower-bedded streets—yet it can do much to help make to a greater extent, and keep, Peterborough the city beautiful.

Because we are deep in war work and war trouble, is no reason we should show signs of utter demoralization. It takes a mighty deal of trouble to make a woman—pretty or plain—neglect her personal appearance; and in the matter of civic beauty, we cannot in this matter, as in many other matters, get a better example than a good sensible woman, and at least maintain our self-respect.

"The pen is mightier than the sword," but it doesn't seem to be in it with the screw power of a paper-making combine.

Howard Langford and Clara Palmer in Arthur Hammerstein's big musical success "Katinka," at The Grand next Wednesday, January 30. The seat sale opened this morning.

Fresh from a year's triumph on Broadway where it eclipsed even "The Firefly" and "High Jinks," the two previous successes of the authors, Otto Harbach and Rudolf Friml, "Katinka," which is Arthur Hammerstein's greatest musical offering, comes to "The Grand" next Wednesday, Jan. 30.

In the musical score one hit follows another in rapid succession, with the frequently recurring "Rackety Coo!" as the number that lives in the memory as the audience files out of the theatre and down the street humming and whistling. It has a catchy lilt that hangs forever in the memory. Other notable musical numbers are "In Gay Paree," "In a Hurry" "One Who Will Understand," "Katinka," "Your Photo," "I Want To Marry A Male Quartette," "Charms Are Fairest When They're Hidden," "I Want All the World to Know," "Skidiskiscatch," "I Can Tell By the Way You Dance, Dear," and "The Weekly Wedding."

Will Pringle "News Print" Decision Be A Precedent For Fixing Food And Other Prices?

Hundreds of thousands of dollars will be paid by the newspapers of Canada to the members of the Paper Combine as a result of the ruling of Commissioner Pringle, providing for an increase from $2.50 to $2.85 per hundred pounds of newsprint. In the case of The Advertiser this increase will run into the tens of thousands. The Big Interests have again won the day at Ottawa.

The Paper Combine men of Canada have already been fined in the courts of the United States for their actions. Most of these paper men secured vast timber limits at small cost. When war commenced, the importation of pulp to the United States from the Scandinavian countries ceased, and the American publishers turned to Canada for a supply. Up to that time there was competition for Canadian business, and a newspaper could secure bids from several mills. But this all ceased when the American market opened, and soon more than 80 per cent of Canada's paper output was going to the United States, where wealthy publishers were ready to pay high prices.

Finance Minister White was asked to fix the price of paper, and he increased it from $2.10 (in the case of The Advertiser) to $250. But this did not satisfy the paper-makers. They were able to prevail upon the Government to appoint a special commissioner, and R. A. Pringle, a well-known Conservative corporation lawyer, was appointed to the task. He has been working on the "investigation" for about eight months, and he has found for the paper-makers. The decision means a large loss to the newspapers up to the time that necessary adjustments may be made. The margin of profit in the publication of a newspaper is so small as to be in many cases non-existent, and many papers will be driven out of business as a direct result of the Pringle decision. Mr. Pringle appears to have expected criticism, as he has already flown to the shelter of a review of the evidence by an appellate court.

It is open to debate if the newspapers, through their representatives, did not make a serious mistake when they withdrew their counsel from the hearing some months ago. The newspapers sought to show that a combine existed, and when Mr. Pringle refused to consider this evidence, and the Canadian Press Association, which conducted the case for the newspapers, refused to have its counsel continue at the hearing. As a result it has been a one-sided investigation, with the Paper Combine claiming great virtues and heavy burdens to itself, and evidently having its claim allowed.

But apart from the effect of the decision on the newspapers, there is a more vital question to be considered. The Government has caused prices to be fixed for one commodity at the behest of the newspapers. "The power of the press" was able to bring about a result, although in this instance the result has been to send prices upward. But the precedent for price regulation has been established. The humblest dweller in the land should be able to have the price of bread or potatoes fixed, though it might be advisable to withhold the request in view of what happened to the newspapers. The most powerful publisher should have no more influence than the individual. — London Advertiser.

CHURCH AS TRAINING SCHOOL FOR GOODNESS

At St. John's, yesterday morning, Canon Davidson's subject was "The Healthiest ambition in the World," which was interpreted to be the ambition for robust, all-round goodness. The Bible term "righteousness," in the present-day mind smacked of Pharisaism. Even goodness was sometimes interpreted as "goody-goodiness," but a robust, well-balanced goodness was the thing which the world needed most, and was the most helpful and healthful attainment imaginable. It was found incarnate in the person of Jesus Christ, whose glorious, perfectly-balanced character appealed to the admiration of all, when rightly presented.

For this kind of goodness true citizens of the Kingdom would hunger and thirst, if they had no such healthy desire. then it was manifestly necessary for them to take a strong tonic and continued spiritual exercise which, in time, would give them an appetite. Some, of course, would have too little interest and too much indolence to take this natural treatment, but surely the majority would see the necessity, and put forth some effort to save themselves from spiritual sickness or even eventual death.

The Church was a school for healthy spiritual training in goodness and the gaining of a spiritual appetite and sustenance. Would church members and adherents yield themselves to training and discipline in such a school, or would they only be willing to go through the services mechanically with little conception of a real object to be gained?

This intense period of the world's history was no time for an ordinary and desultory, resultless programme. In the Church, the Divine school men should, above all things, be keen and determined to get results. In surveying a factory the Manager could in five minutes distinguish between the mechanics who were merely mechanical or thoughtless and those who were keen and useful and they would be treated differently accordingly. In a school the teacher could see at a glance who were careless and perfunctory and who were keen and enterprising. That teacher would use his authority to bring all up to the standard, otherwise the whole work and tone of the school would be pulled down. If any real results were to be gained in our Churches, if any effective training in robust goodness were to be given some distinct line of action must be taken by all, some authority must be exerted, and some sort of discipline gladly accepted by congregations generally, which would be abundantly justified by the results obtained. Then the churches would have something to show for their work—something which the world needed most—sane, healthy, all-round goodness.

The hymns used bore on this subject while on the entrance door a motto, in large letters greeted the congregation: "USE THE CHURCH AS THE DIVINE SCHOOL FOR SPIRITUAL TRAINING. GAIN RESULTS AND HELP OTHERS TO GAIN THEM."

Peterborough Juniors Win The Championship of Group

Lindsay Beaten by 7 Goals to 3 in Hard Fought Game at Brock St. Rink Friday Night Before Biggest Crowd That Has Seen a Junior Game For Some Years.

PETES ALWAYS AHEAD

FRIDAY NIGHT'S SCORE.

Peterborough	7
Lindsay	3

THE SERIES SUMMARY.

	Won	Lost	Goals For	Goals Agst.
Peterborough	3	1	19	16
Lindsay	1	3	15	19

The Peterborough Juniors won the championship of this district in the Junior O.H.A. race on Friday night when they defeated the Lindsay Midgets at Brock Street Ring by 7 goals to 3, the victory giving them a four-goal margin in the double schedule of home and home games between the two teams. The Petes were always in front, leading by 3 to 0 at the end of the first period and 5 to 2 at the close of the second, and were never on much danger, although they let up a little in the middle of the game, when they were leading by 5 to 0, and Lindsay came on and closed the gap considerably, having the figures 5 to 3 early in the third period. The Peter got going again, however, and cinched the game by finding the the nets for two more counters before the final bell sounded.

The Peterborough youngsters have won the group on their merits. They won three out of the four games played, including a victory in Lindsay, and with the exception of the second period of the first game in Scugogville when they were leading by 5 to 0, and they have looked the better team and have had the edge throughout against a considerably heavier and bigger aggregation.

Over 1,000 fans, the biggest junior crowd in some years, saw the game, and the youngsters gave them a hard-fought exhibition—not perhaps as brilliant as the game here two weeks ago, but nevertheless enlivened by some spectacular hockey of the kind that makes the game popular.

The first period was marked by clever, fast hockey, and although the game dragged a little in the second session, the fas tpace set in the last period more than made up for this.

The Petes had the edge on Lindsay because they stick-handled more cleverly and because they used considerable team work, while Lindsay depended almost altogether on individual effort. The local squad worked in on top of the nets much more successfully than the visitors, and only a sensational exhibition by Goaler Oliver of the visitors kept the Petes' score from climbing into the double figures. A dozen times at least when the attack had broken through the defence he sailed out at top speed and smothered the shot.

Everybody had a share in the Peterborough win. Cherrett's speed and stick-handling were always in evidence, and Bartley's dashes along the side and his accurate shooting helped considerably to bring home the bacon. Hagerman did sterling work both on the defence and at centre, where he alternated with Cherrett. Park, in spite of his injured hip, a souvenir of last Friday's game in Lindsay, contributed some stellar hockey, his swift dash for the first goal being one of the features of the night. He was up with every rush, and although he was hurt several times, was always back for more. Williams, who subbed frequently, won the crowd by the way he sailed into his big opponents and by his all-round good work. Girard did some nice checking and rushing, although he marred his effectiveness by too many visits to the penalty box. As usual, Murray performed brilliantly in the nets, turning aside many hard drives and clearing nicely.

Oliver was Lindsay's star. The little goaler kept Peterborough's score down by his clever work. Some of his stops were lucky, of course, but since he repeated his stunt of charging out of the nets and upsetting the attack a dozen times or more, he must be given credit for a star exhibition. Wilford and Garnett, the defence pair, did valuable work, both from an offensive and defensive standpoint, tearing off some splendid rushes. Lyons was the pick of the forward line, although he fell down as a goal getter.

Referee Lawson Whitehead handled the bell most satisfacorily.

The teams were:

Lindsay		Peterborough
	Goal
Oliver		Murray
	R. Defence
Garnett		Girard
	L. Defence
Wilford		Hagerman
	Centre
Lyons		Cherrett
	R. Wing
Rogers		Park
	L. Wing
Conley		Bartley
	Substitute
Stoddard		Williams

The teams set a dizzy clip from the start, with the Petes pressing. A couple of combination rushes carried them inside, but Oliver sailed out and smothered the shot.

A LINDSAY VIEW OF FRIDAY'S JUNIOR GAME

PETERBORO 7
LINDSAY 3

In the final game for group honours played at Peterboro last night, the Midgets went down to defeat by the above score, down to defeat, but not to disgrace.

The Petes stole the game int the first period, when they uncorked a barrel of speed and combination that simply bewildered the Midgets. Biff! Bang! Bing! and three goals were scored to Lindsay's nothing, in the initial period. The Midgets did not exactly fall asleep at the switch, but were unable to get together with any degree of effectiveness.

The second period, however, was Lindsay's,a nd the Midgets showed the fans of the Electric City what they were made of. Had they played as well in the first period the scrobe would be wording a different story of the game.

In the last period the Midgets again went in with "the lard in their hair" and with a feeling of confidence but the Petes were fortunate enough to "come back" with a sample of the brand of hockey they played in the first period, and thus saved their bacon.

Everybody looked for a fast game—no person was disappointed. The crowd was large and it was conceded at the finish that the Petes did well to come out with a four-goal lead. Something went wrong with that first period, which put the kibosh on the entire game. On the whole, the Petes were faster than Lindsay, and used better judgment in passing and shooting. In the first period particularly the Midgets got through to the Peterborough defence but no farther, while the Petes swooped back like greased lightning. Lindsay checked back hard and saved many a goal, but stumbled and foundered.

The Midgets have a good team and we look to great things from them next year, if they stick together. The Petes deserve the victory and we look for them to go two rounds farther up the ladder.

nailed the shot once, while on the next occasion Cherrett missed by inches. Park started things moving after five minutes hard going when he broke away from centre, stick-handled around both Lindsay defence men and beat Oliver with a quick shot into the top corner of the net. It was a beautiful play for the little right-wing player, and the crowd cut loose with a real old-time cheer.

Girard drew a penalty for cross-checking, but even with the odd man advantage, Lindsay could not break inside. Park was hurt when he was sandwiched between Garnett and Wilford, but came back after a short delay. Wilford drew a penalty for holding, and from the face-off near centre which followed, Cherrett got away, and dashed through the Lindsay team with a swift rush that carried him inside for a goal at close range.

Two minutes later Petes made it 3 to 0, when swift shot by Bartley from the side carrooned into the nets off a Lindsay defence man. Oliver was all set for the drive on one side of the nets, but the puck was deflected to the open side and beat him completely.

The Petes should have had a couple more in the next few minutes. Hagerman took a pass from Park right at the goal mouth, but Oliver blocked the shot. Then Park got away again and handed the rubber to Cherrett. Oliver dashed out, however, and smothered the shot, averting what looked like a certain goal.

Lindsay had a royal chance in the next few minutes, when Hagerman was banished for tripping and Williams, who was subbing for Girard, followed him for bodying Conley into the boards. That left the Petes two men short, but Bartley, Cherret, and Park managed to keep the enemy outside, and Murray took care of their long shots. There was no further scoring in the period.

Forty-five seconds after the second period opened, Bartley made it 4 to 0 when he corked a swift drive from the side that Oliver never saw until the rubber sagged the net. That left it 4 to 0.

Park was hurt again by a heavy body check, and Williams replaced him. Girard drew another penalty for chopping, but nothing happened while he was off. The teams were even, when Cherrett got away for a pretty rush, and tore inside. His first shot went wide, but he followed in fast, recovered the rubber, swept out in front, and scored before Oliver could recover himself.

That made it 5 to 0, and the game began to drag. The Petes, with such a big lead, began to get careless, and forgot to check back, with the result that for the balance of the period Lindsay had the better of the going. Led by Wilford and Garnett they started to tear up the ice in lively fashion and the Petes had their hands full for a while. Conley caught them all in a bunch on one side of the rink, and grabbing a loose puck sailed in unchecked and drove a bullet shot past Murray for Lindsay's first counter. Girard drew another penalty for mixing in, and his absence did not help any. Stoddard dumped Bartley and the latter took the count for a minute. He went off for repairs, while Stoddard was benched. Then Conley repeated his feat by beating Murray with a quick shot, and the score was 5 to 2.

Bartley came back into the game, and the Petes began to get going again. Bartley nearly lifted Oliver out of the nets with a hard drive, and Cherrett, going in fast for the rebound, collided with the Lindsay goaler, and the latter was knocked out for a couple of minutes. The period ended 5 to 2.

The pace was noticeably faster in the last session. The Petes had several chances in the first few moments but Oliver saved the day by driving out and blocking Park's shot when the latter had got inside on a nice rush. Stoddard was benched for tripping, but with a man short it was Lindsay who scored first, Rogers going down alone and scoring with a nice shot which he let go just as the Peterborough defence sandwiched him. That made the figures 5 to 3, and it was getting too close for comfort.

However, the Petes woke up and carried the battle to the visitors. Park got away and passed to Hagerman. The latter was tripped as he shot, but he scored nevertheless. Oliver had started out of the net to head off the shot, and was caught cold in the play.

Hagerman was chased right afterwards for mixing it up too freely, and then Williams got a penalty for tripping. No damage was done while they were off. Williams signalised his return by uncorking a pretty rush from centre. He worked his way inside, and although Oliver came out and blocked his shot, Cherrett tore up the centre and slid the rubber into the nets before the Lindsay goaler could clear.

Girard earned his fourth penalty a little later for checking too strenuously. Several Lindsay men took the count in the later stages and there were frequent delays. Just ten seconds before the final gong, Goalkeeper Murray was chased for tripping a Lindsay forward. The visitors hadn't time to get a shot at the nets, however, before the game was over.

FIRE DEPT. GOT 108 BUSHELS OF CHARCOAL FROM LINDSAY CHIEF

The city's shortage of charcoal was brought home to the Fire Department on Saturday evening when the men began the work of drying the hose. Their first efforts to get a supply were decidedly unpromising, but finally they obtained 55 bags from the Robt. Hicks Company and one bag from E. F. Mason. Chief Beadle promised to forage Lindsay, and eighteen bushels arrived by express this morning with 90 bushels to follow. The hose were hung in the tower and a big salamandor with a glowing charcoal fire was throwing its heat up between the folds of hose.

The Department lost 150 feet of hose which they had dragged up through the hallways of the Dominion Bank building. When the smoke rolled down on the men they retreated and were unable to get the hose out. It was finally cut off near the street.

CHARGED WITH THEFT OF $25 FROM MOTHER OF GIRL HE CALLED ON

Fred Spry, who claims to have been overseas as a corporal with the 4th C.M.R., was arrested in Lakefield on Friday night on a charge of having stolen $25 from a Peterborough woman while paying a social visit to her daughter. There was no heat in the Lakefield "cooler," and the village had no place in which to hold him. P. C. Deanard brought him down to the local station, where he spent the week end in a steam heated cell. This morning he appeared before Magistrate Dumble and was remanded for a week. It is alleged that on the occasion of Spry's social call the mother and daughter went upstairs for a few minutes. H called up asking where he could buy some cigarettes, went out to get them, but didn't return. Later the mother discovered that $25 she had left in her purse downstairs was missing. The police tracked him to Lakefield.

Big Day At Byersville

Yesterday was a great day at the Salvation Army at Byersville. C. C. Guardian, Mrs. Lang, with her band of 20 Corps Cadets, took the three meetings, and the result was, as far as could be seen anyway, eleven people at the Mercy Seat. To-night the Cadets, assisted by the Temple Band, will do a very special concert and invite everybody. Adj. McElhiney will be chairman.

Deciding Upon Standard Loaf Of Bread

(Special to the Toronto Star and the Peterboro Examiner)

OTTAWA, Jan. 28.—A deputation of bakers from all parts of Canada, thirty in number, are in Ottawa today and wil lconfer with Prof. Harcourt, representing the Food Controller, this afternoon.

The purpose of the conference is to decide upon a standard loaf, based on the standard flour which the mills must grind from this date forward. The loaf, it is proposed, shall be standard in weight, size, shape and ingredients. It is proposed that all fancy loaves shall be cut out.

The question of a standard price will afterwards be considered. In fixing this, however, differing local conditions of delivery, etc., will have to be taken into consideration. Neither the Food Controller's Department nor the Controller of Customs knew anything about whether the sugar embargo has been or is goinng to be imposed by the United States. The later declares that sugar is coming through all right at present.

HOCKEY.

There will be a meeting of the Junior Church Hockey League tonight at 7.30 o'clock in the Y.M.C.A. Parlours.

ANNIVERSARY SERVICES IN GEORGE STREET CHURCH

Rev. Hiram Hull Preached Both Morning and Evening —Special Music By the Choir

Large congregations attended the anniversary services in George Street Methodist Church yesterday, when the special speaker for the occasion, Rev. Hiram Hull, superintendent of the Deaconess work in Canada and principal of the Methodist National Training School, preached eloquent and uplifting sermons.

Evening Service.

In the evening the Sunday School orchestra augmented the musical success of the service, Miss McKee playing the organ. The full surpliced choir, under the leadership of Mr. J. H. Renwick, showed skilled training and unusual talent. Mrs. Renwick rendered "For Ever More" most acceptably.

Appeal for Sunday School.

Mr. Charles Parsons, superintendent of the Sunday School, spoke briefly on behalf of the Sunday School, soliciting the active interest of the church in connection with this important branch of work.

The Sermon.

Rev. Mr. Hull preached a sermon which, by way of its simplicity and edifying thoughts, will no doubt carry a lasting lesson to all who heard. The lesson drawn from the sermon, which centred about the way God trained a leader, was the need of patience in training to fulfill God's purpose. Mr. Hull used as a striking illustration the three score and ten years in which Moses was taught by God to fulfill the three-fold purpose for which he was chosen, namely, liberate his people from Egypt; to codify laws of civilisation and to establish His people in the Promised Land. Mr. Hull emphasised the fact that God chose the man who was to fulfill these purposes from a humble home, where the environment had been good. It is interesting in this connection to look back upon the result of this home influence upon the great men in history. Nero's mother was a wicked woman; Garibaldi and his father came of the best home influence; and so the result of home training is uppermost in the future life of a man. God gave further training than the home. Moses was taken to the palace, then to Heliopolis College, from which he graduated, then to the life of a soldier, when he defeated the Ethiopians. But home, palace, university and soldier training were not enough for Moses. He was sent for at 40 to the desert, where for 40 years he communed with the mountains. Egypt was gravely suffering from the task-masters, but God perceived Moses was not ready to fulfill His effective purpose until he was 80 years of age. In our own life we see the revolution in ideals of man's usefulness on account of his training, in the change the war has brought. The man who felt years ago that his life work was done has been chosen to fill important offices on account of his very age and experience.

Plea for Deaconess.

Mr. Hull, in speaking of his own work, expressed his idea of the need Mr. Thomas must feel for the help of a deaconess, who would relieve the pastor of many duties.

Police Report And Statements Of Persons Who Passed The Neill Store Shortly Before The Fire

Saturday's fire occurred at that hour when the town is beginning to shake itself out of sleep and George Street to stir with the first signs of a new day's labour. The Peterborough Canoe Company fire broke out about the same hour. There has been a vulgar opinion that the police were not on the main street beats on Saturday morning, and to allay that rumour the following report of P. C. Lawrence, corroborated by a number of citizens, also by Police Sergeant Kidd and P. C. Wigg, is given in its principal details.

P. C. Lawrence's Report.

About 5.30 a.m. on Saturday, Jan. 26, while patrolling No. 1 beat, and when midway between Hunter and Brock Streets, on George Street, I heard fire alarm No. 26 ring, and on looking south toward Simcoe, where Box 26 is situated, I saw what looked like snow blowing off the roof, as there was a high wind blowing at the time, but it proved to be smoke coming out of the eaves of the Robt. Neill shoe store. As I came south I stopped at the Examiner Office to call to the Night Watchman, who had gone in to light the fias fires, and then ran to Simcoe Street. When I got there the fire was breaking through the roof at the elevator in the rear of the Neill store. The Fire Brigade arrived immediately, and five lines were laid on the fire. Shortly afterwards the fire engine arrived and two additional lines were laid, but in five minutes the fire had swept beyond control and gutted the store.

About 5.15 a.m. I had occasion to call at the Police Station, and on going back, to my beat, proceeded by way of Simcoe to George, south on George to Charlotte, and then north on George to Brock Street. When I passed the Neill store there was no sign of fire or smoke. In my opinion the fire must have burst out over the whole store in about ten minutes.

Statements of "Eye-Witnesses."

Leo Emery, who is a bell boy at the Empress, was on his way home to 374½ George Street at a little after 5 a.m. He stopped at the window of the Neill store and looked at some of the articles displayed. He did not see any sign of fire.

Fred Barlow, night porter at the Empress, went across the Market at 5.15 a.m. to call the day help for the hotel at 330 Water Street. He was in plain view of the rear of the shoe store, but did not see any fire. He returned to the hotel to bring out his team to meet the morning train. When he got the horses in the yard ten minutes later the store was in flames.

Thos. Detcher, caretaker of the Toronto Savings and Loan, and also the Richard Hall dry goods store, went to Hall's store to fix up the fires. At about 5.20 a.m. he came out of Hall's, which is directly opposite the Neill store. He did not notice any fire.

George Sturmer, caretaker at B. Shortley's harness shop, turned the corner of Simcoe and George Streets about 5 o'clock, and did not see any sign of fire at that time. He went into the shop and made up the fires. He then came out to clean the snow off the sidewalk, and noticed smoke coming out of the eaves of the shoe store. He immediately sent in the alarm.

P. C. Wigg also passed the rear of the shoe store at five o'clock when reporting off duty. He saw no sign of fire.

"I crossed the Market Square at 5 a.m. from Charlotte and George Streets to the Police Station when reporting off duty. I did not see any sign of fire."

FIRST JANUARY FOR MANY YEARS WITHOUT THAW

Fifteen Degrees Below Zero This Morning

The cold weather continues unabated. Saturday's lowest was 10 degrees below zero; Sunday morning gave us 18 below, and this (Monday) morning furnished us with 15 below. This January is the coldest one on record in this part of Ontario, with one excepiton; that was January of 1857, and the average temperature of that month was but little lower than the present month. Since the winter began we have had here in Peterborough, 40 days with the thermometer below zero, or but a few days above; and since Christmas the thermometer has not risen to the freezing point. The "January thaw" has been a minus quantity. According to the officials of the Toronto Observatory, this is the first January without a thaw in Toronto since 1845, but we frequently have a January without a thaw down here. This winter has also given us an exceptionally heavy snowfall, 53 inches having fallen to date—and more to come.—W.P.

Fire Engine Stood Severe Test On Saturday, Proving Its Worth When High Pressure Was Needed

The city's fire engine vindicated itself on Saturday. Connected to two lines of hose that converged into one nozzle it shot a stream of water from the market square over the Royal Theatre, spraying the fire wall that checked the flames at the Union Bank, and held a curtain of water there during the critical hours that threatened the entire block.

Chief Grange wasted no time in ordering the engine into service. It lumbered along Charlotte street like a tank going into action, and pulled up at the big hydrant at the Customs House corner. The parallel lines of hose were strung across the market and soon had a pressure of 160 pounds at the nozzle, forced by 220 pounds of steam registered at the engine's guage. Streams with the ordinary pressure were playing on the fourteen inch fire wall from both the back and rear, and were doing effective work, but the engine's sheet of water swept the wall in a wide arc that reached the topmost brick. It was a splendid performance, incidentally serving to re-establish the reputation of the engine for which the Council went begging for a buyer last summer. At that time it was regarded as a "white elephant." No one had a good word for it. For some reason or other it had fallen into disuse, and members of the Council actually placed its value at whatever the brass and copper parts would bring in the junk market.

When Engineer Pammet was engaged by the Fire Department, he thoroughly overhauled his engine, with the result that on Saturday it spit smoke and water all day without a single skip. Mr. Pammet is a marine engineer and formerly worked on the tug "Bob Hall." He must have cast some spell over the "old heap of junk," for it was tuned up to a high key, and in the opinion of many citizens deserves a big share of the credit in preventing the fire from spreading to the old Opera House section of the block.

Chief Grange stated that many of the business men and other citizens complimented the Department on the efficiency and the capacity of the engine. He quoted Mr. W. H. Denham, of the Quaker Oats Company, who said: "This is exactly what we have been contending for, the use of the fire engine where it is manifestly needed." To many its performance was a big surprise, for the opinion prevailed that its usefulness had passed. The satisfaction expressed with its work was all the more emphatic, and for the present it has taken on a new dignity. It is also re-assuring to know that under Engineer Pammet's care and operation it can stand up to a test as severe as Saturday's. He overhauled it yesterday and discovered that one of the bushings had worn away about one-eighth of a ninch. This is the only repair required and is but a small item. It was practically unavoidable under the constant and severe friction during the day's work. Otherwise the engine is ready for instant service.

Naturally Chief Grange was delighted with its performance. He stated that although motor pumpers are a great asset in fire fighting, the departments that have purchased them have also retained their steam pumpers. In the big cities whole batteries of them are used for the reason that they are always reliable.

CITY COUNCIL AUTHORIZES THE PURCHASE OF TWO THOUSAND FEET OF HOSE

This is One Thousand Feet Less Than the Fire Chief Asked For--Aldermen Vote to Have All Hose Stamped With Date of Purchase, Not Knowing That This Has Been Done For Years---Firemen's Boots Laid Over.

As one result of Saturday's disastrous fire, Peterborough's Fire Department will be two thousand feet of hose better off than it was before the regrettable event that swept through one-half of the best business blocks of the city and left in its wake a tangled mass of ice-encrusted wreckage. The fire had been raging nearly four hours when a group of business men, including representatives of the Retail Merchants' Association met in the city hall and, to the amusement of some of the aldermen, demanded that the city immediately purchase a large quantity of new hose with which to augment the depleted stock of the Department. This was after Fire Chief Grange had completed a begging trip among the local factories, including the Quaker Oats Company, the DeLaval Dairy Supply Company, the Canadian General Electric Company and the Bonner-Worth Company for the purpose of securing additional hose to fight the fire which by that time was eating its way into the heart of the business section of the city. The trip around the factories netted the Department seventeen hundred feet of hose. A part of this was used at the fire, and the remainder was placed in commission at the Fire Station for use in case it should be required at another fire.

TELEGRAPHED FOR HOSE.

The insistence of the deputation had its effect and Mayor Duncan decided to telegraph a hose manufacturing Company in Toronto for fifteen hundred feet of new hose for immediate delivery. An hour later a message was received from the Toronto firm stating that the hose could not be supplied until Tuesday or Wednesday, as special couplings would have to be made to fit the threads on the hydrants in use in this city. Peterborough requirements call for a five inch thread, and the companies suplying hose to any municipality consider it necessary to manufacture such coplings from a stock coupling supplied by the municipality purchasing the hose. In this case Peterborough would have to send a coupling to Toronto in order to avoid the possibility of a misfit. This condition applies to all municipalities and, incidentally explains why the Company manufacturing Peterborough's new motor-driven chemical engine and hose waggon have been nearly nine months completing the contract. Every thread and fitting on the new piece has to be made to suit local requirements, owing to the deplorable lack of standardization in respect to fire fighting equipment. This matter has been frequently discussed by the Fire Underwriters of the United States and Canada, but owing to the huge expense that would be entailed were all municipalities required to standardize their fire fighting equipment the question has been laid aside. When the Lindsay Fire Department arrived Saturday morning with over a thousand feet of hose, the couplings which have a seven-inch thread had to be cut off and Peterborough couplings substituted. When the Mayor and a number of aldermen learned that the hose could not be secured in time for use on Saturday the order was cancelled and a meeting of the City Council called for three o'clock in the afternoon.

TWO THOUSAND FEET.

At the appointed hour the Council met and, among other things grudgingly authorized the purchase of two thousand feet of double-jacket fire hose. It was also moved and carried that all the hose in the Fire Station be stamped with the date of purchase and numbered so that a record might be kept of the number of years each piece of hose is in service. This goes to show how little the City Council actually knows about the internal workings of the Fire Department.

Ald. Dobin, chairman of the Fire, Water and Light Committee for the second year, together with the rest of the Council discussed and endorsed something that has been in force as long as the Fire Department has been in existence. Each piece of hose is stamped with the date of purchase, and the Fire Chief and his men can tell at a glance the age of each length of hose. The stamp is placed right on the coupling and when the coupling is changed the stamp is changed. This shows one of the weak points of the present form of civic administration where the personnel is ever changing. As one citizen remarked not long ago the City Council is nothing but a school where aldermen are schooled in the art of civic administration and when they reach the graduating stage they usually pass out into private life or their municipal career is obliterated on election day.

In the present Council Board there are some men who should have known that all hose is stamped and properly identified just as there are some men who should know that the life of fire hose is much longer than three years, which was the length of service suggested by Ald. Dobbin when he urged the Council to go slow and not get panicky over the matter of buying hose. "Buy in small quantities and buy every year," counselled Ald. Dobbin. As a matter of fact there is hose in use at the fire hall that has been in service for seventeen years and the average life of fire hose is about twelve years, if properly cared for, which it is at the fire station, with its well-equipped hose-drying tower.

All this has been discussed dozens of times at the Fire, Water and Light Committee meetings, when tenders for fire hose have been the main object of an alderman gas attack. On such occasions the Aldermen would gather around the Committee Room table, and hack holes in a sample piece of hose as though they were experts instead of laymen.

RUBBER BOOTS WANTED.

At the meeting on Saturday afternoon Fire Chief Grange was called into the sanctum for about three minutes. In this short space of time the Chief told the Council what was required in the way of fire hose and, incidentally, made a plea for a new supply of rubber boots and coats With this the Chief was dismissed with the remark that the Council had all the information that was required.

Mayor Duncan explained the purpose of the meeting and also referred to the deputation of business men which met at the city hall earlier in the day to urge the Council to secure a new supply of fire hose.

Ald. Malcolm McIntyre wanted to know how much fire hose was on hand and what the Fire Underwriters called for.

In reply, City Clerk Armstrong turned up the stock sheet of the Fire Department and found that the Department had five thousand feet of god hose on hand and four hundred and fifty additional feet of inferior hose to be turned over to the Board of Works. The Fire Underwriters call for six thousand feet of hose as the minimum quantity to be kept on hand by the Peterborough Fire Department.

HAD TO BORROW.

Fire Chief Grange said that five thousand feet of hose was inadequate. "If the fire at the Boston Cafe and the Peterborough Canoe Company had occurred at the same time we would have been nineteen hundred feet of hose short of our requirements," said the Chief.

"There was a mile and a quarter of fire hose strung along the streets Saturday morning," remarked Ald. Dobbin.

Mayor Duncan—"It is too bad that every time we have a big fire we have to go to the local manufacturing concerns and borrow hose."

Ald. Edgar—"In the interests of the business men and the property owners of the city we should bring the fire department up to a high standard of efficiency. The very fact that we had to wire for hose Saturday morning and borrow hose from local factories is a reflection upon the fire fighting resources of the city. I feel that the business men of the city would endorse the action of the Council should we exceed the Fire Underwriters' minimum limit of five thousand feet."

"Thy not take the Fire Chief's recommendation and order three thousand feet," interposed Ald. Jones. He ough to know better than we do what is required."

MORE RULES WANTED.

Ald. Langford thought there should be more stringent rules for taking care of the hose. He was inclined to the opinion that there was some laxity in this respect. "The cost of the hose should be impressed upon the Department," observed Ald. Langford. Hose that is turned over to the Board of Works Department might still have a few more years of service," he added.

On motion of Ald. Edgar and Worth it was moved and carried that the Council purchase not less than two thousand feet of hose.

Chief Grange asked the Council to purchase twelve pairs of rubber boots, at twelve dollars a pair. "This is absolutely one of the best rubber boots of the kind on the market," said the Chief.

"Don't get panicky," counselled Ald. Dobbin.

The Fire, Water and Light Committee was authorized to secure prices on rubber boots, also raincoats, with power to act.

VOTE OF THANKS.

A vote of thanks was tendered to the manufacturers who loaned hose to the Department, and also added a rider that in event of any of the hose being found defective the city will replace the defective hose. It was at this stage of the proceedings that the Council adopted a resolution providing that all the hose at the Fire Station be stamped with the date and other identification marks, which is something that has been in force since the Fire Department was organized. Strange to say the resolution carried had not one of the senior aldermen appeared to be aware of the fact that such methods were already in use at the Fire Station. Coupled with the resolution was the recommendation that all hose be tested at least twice a year and a report mdae to the committee of laymen.

The matter of purchasing smoke helmets was briefly discussed, but no action taken. This year's etsimates provide for two smoke helmets and the matter will be revived when the estimates are again discussed.

Mayor Duncan reported that he had telephoned Mayor Kyle of Lindsay for assistance at the request of Chief Grange and Mr. T. F. Matthews. The Lindsay Fire Department quickly responded and sent down a number of men and a truck full of hose. The Council confirmed the action of the Mayor and a resolution of thanks was extended to the Lindsay firemen for the able assistance. A committee consisting of the Mayor and a number of Aldermen were at the station when the Lindsay firemen departed for the purpose of personally thanking those who asisted in the work of checking the fire.

THE QUESTION OF NIGHTWATCH SERVICE

Police Commissioners Will Be Asked to Consider the Matter

At the special meeting of the City Council held Saturday afternoon, Ald. Malcolm McIntyre brought up the question of more adequate night watch service for the business section of the city. "The business men are paying for protection in the maintenance of the police force and are they getting it?" queried Ald. McIntyre.

The latter requested that the matter be taken up by the Board of Police Commissioners at an early date.

LETTER FROM A FORMER MEMBER OF 93RD BATTALION

Pte. W. J. Newnham, of Selwyn, Says He Expects to Go Back to France Soon

Miss Clara Owens, Warsaw, has just received the following interesting letter from her cousin, Pte. W. J. Newnham, of Selwyn, dated Jan. 2nd, 1918:

Dear Clara,— I just received your welcome letter to-day, was glad to hear from you, as I have had no mail from home or none from Mina for four or five weeks. I was expecting some near Christmas, but did not get any, only from Aunt Emma and I answered it the same night, as I always do if possible. Well, I am fairly well, I weigh 164 pounds, so that isn't bad for me after being in France. I will likely have to go out there again, but it might be quite a while yet, as my wrist is not very strong yet. I have a very good job this week, going to the ranges as a marker. There is no better job in the army. Well, I will soon be two years soldiering. I hope it won't be two years more. It was much quieter at Christmas than last year. There have been quite a lot killed that I knew, and if it goes on next summer it will be worse. I don't think it will go on all next summer—it is to be hoped not. I think Germany must be getting weakened. One thing I know, that they aren't starving is out, for we are better fed than we used to be. Well, I will soon be going on leave again. I can get leave quite often, as I have a clean sheet so far. I was down to our little Seaford town last night to the picture show. Also, we have concerts in the Y.M.C.A. Most every night parties from London and Brighton and several other places come out to them.

I guess I must say good-bye for this time, hoping this may find you all well. I am sending you a souvenir of London; let me know if you get it. Please excuse my writing as it is hard to write when there are so many knocking around. Answer soon.

ANDANIA IS LIKELY TO BE SAVED INTACT

Cunarder Was Torpedoed Sunday Morning Off Coast of Ulster

(Special to the Toronto Star and The Peterborough Examiner.)

LONDON, Jan. 28.— The Cunarder Andania, outbound, torpedoed Sunday morning off Ulster, will probably be saved intact. It was believed all her passengers and crew had been saved. Two torpedoes were fired at the vessel. The first missed, the second struck amidship. The passengers and crew took to the boats.

Went to Bottom.

LONDON, Later.—The Cunarder Andania, reported yesterday to have been torpedoed, but not sunk, went to the bottom in spite of efforts to get her into port, according to information reaching the Associated Press to-day. The Andania was torpedoed off the Ulster coast on Sunday morning. Press despatches from Belfast said it was believed no deaths resulted from the explosion. The Andania, 13,405 tons, was built in 1913, and has made many trips between British and American ports.

NOTHING BUT THE TRUTH.

James Montgomery's farce, "Nothing But the Truth," at the Grand on Saturday afternoon and evening proved a hilarious demonstration of the unpleasant results that would ensue if everybody told the exact truth on every occasion. Richard Bennett, the hero of the comedy, attempts it for twenty-four hours on a wager, and although he succeeds in winning the money, he makes things disagreeable for everyone, gets his prospective father-in-law and friends into trouble, quarrels with his sweetheart and has a most embarassing time himself. The farce is genuinely funny and was splendidly acted on Saturday. Louis Haines played the role of Robert Bennett, originally created by Willie Collier, with the Collier smoothness and effect. The quiet, funny manner in which he got over his lines made his work most enjoyable. Other roles were in good hands. Ezra C. Walck gave a most effective interpretation of the part of E. M. Ralston.

Laughs were plentiful throughout and there were few dull moments.

Theatre-goers will be glad to learn that Manager Turner has arranged for a return engagement of "Nothing But the Truth" on Tuesday, Feb. 12th. This will be welcome news, as the excitement and confusion attendant on the big fire made it impossible for many patrons of The Grand to be present on Saturday, and they will welcome this opportunity.

"Come Back to Erin," with Walter Laurence as its leader, is the attraction at the Grand to-night.

Patriotic Fund, vacated his quarters at the west end of the building and removed all his books and records. The office of the Utilities Commission was closed all day and the staff in other parts of the building were prepared to move out on a moment's notice. The west end of the city hall was saturated with water until the mansard roof on the Dominion bank caved in, confining the danger within the four walls of the fire stricken building. This had the effect of removing the danger from the city buildings.

One thing that prevented the fire from going further south, in addition to the fire wall, was the Royal Theatre itself, which contained no stock or other inflammable material, and its ceilings were metallic, which prevented much conflagration inside. Mr. Pappas had spent over $18,000 in re-modelling and re-fixing the Royal Theatre, and had it in excellent condition from a fire preventive standpoint. In addition to the fire loss, his business loss will be a large one, as the Royal was enjoying very extensive patronage at the time of the fire. A stock of cigars and fixtures, amounting to about $1,000, will be a total loss, as there was no insurance on these articles.

LINDSAY DEPARTMENT'S AID.

Lindsay's prompt response to Mayor Duncan's appeal for aid early Saturday morning provided at least one bright feature to Saturday's disaster. Fire Chief Beadle with ten men, a motor-driven truck and a supply of hose arrived in Peterborough before ten o'clock, and relieved Chief Grange of the anxiety occasioned by the possibility of another fire breaking out. Chief Beadle and some of his men reinforced the Peterborough fighters on the George Street line, rendering valuable assitance. They were fully equipped for action, including hip-length rubber boots, at which the Peterborough men with their "knee-tops" cast frankly envious glances.

Chief Beadle, who succeeded Chief Bell last summer, has a volunteer brigade of seventeen men. He and the motor truck driver sleep at the Fire Hall.

The Lindsay detachment returned home on Saturday night. They had come down on a special train.

Soldiers on the Job.

The members of E Company of the 1st Battalion, E.O.R., did good work on Saturday. A squad of fifty men arrived on the scene of the fire at 8 o'clock, and for the balance of the day the soldiers did patrol work, keeping the spectators back and the traffic on the move. It was a cold job for the soldiers, three different squads of whom had a turn at the work.

Movie Shows To Close Three Days A Week?

Drastic Step Said to Be Contemplated by Dominion Fuel Controller

Special to The Examiner:

TORONTO, Jan. 28.—The committee of motion picture, vaudeville, and legitimate theatres of Toronto have notified all owners of moving picture theatres throughout Canada that they understand the Dominion Government, acting upon the recommendation of the Fuel Controller, will, beginning to-morrow, close all movie theatres three days of each week to conserve fuel.

As the result of this information, the telegraph wires from one end of Canada to the other are to-day loaded down with protests from Ottawa by theatre managers against the proposed order becoming effective.

As yet, confirmation is lacking from Ottawa, but it is evident some drastic step is contemplated.

REPORT DENIED.

OTTAWA, Jan. 28.—While the general question of fuel consideration by the Fuel Controller and a number of suggestions have been submitted, the report that the Government has decided to order the closing down of all theatres and places of amusement for three days each week is denied by Assistant Fuel Controller Peterson to-day. Mr. Peterson declares that no action of the sort has yet been decided upon.

Fuel Controller McGrath is at present at Washington, and it is not possible that any announcement as to his decision on the matter of conservation methods will be made until he returns.

LABOUR DEPUTATION WAITS UPON THE ONTARIO CABINET

Important Reforms are Urged—Labour Wants Representation upon the Compensation Board—Rural Credits, and the Payment of Wages at Least Twice a Month Urged

Special to The Examiner:

TORONTO, Jan. 28.— Representatives of the Ontario Federation of Labour awaited upon Sir Wm. Hearst and his Cabinet at the Parliament Buildings to-day and presented a number of resolutions for the consideration of the Ontario government. With Sir William were Hon. I. B. Lucas, Hon. G. Howard Ferguson, Hon. T. W. McGarry, Hon. Dr. Pyne and Dr. Ruddell.

Mr. James Simpson, Vice-President of the Trades and Labour Congress of Canada introduced the deputation, of which Mr. Harry Halford, of Hamilton, was chairman.

Mr. Halford said Labour was opposed to an injunction being allowed during a strike.

"We don't believe that any person should be interfered with during peaceful pleaching," he said. "I have even had an injunction issued against me for carrying the Union Jack," said Mr. Halford.

"When was that?" asked Sir William Hearst.

"During the Machinists' strike in Hamilton in July, 1916."

"It was on the 19th of July was it?" asked Hon. Mr. Ferguson.

CHILD LABOUR LAW.

Mr. Bush, of the Amalgamated Machinists' Union, introduced a resolution asking for legislation which would change the child labour law, making the minimum age 16 years instead of 14.

"We ask that a practical metal polisher be appointed to act as blower inspector," read an important resolution, "A large percentage of the members of our union die from tuberculosis and lung trouble.

Mr. Donald Wright introduced a deputation from Preston, St. Catharines and London who presented the same claim. It was asked that legislation be introduced to protect the interests of the steam engineer, and that all engineers operating engines, irrespective of the motive power with which they were operated, should be forced to take out a license.

A COMPENSATION BOARD.

John Kennedy introduced a resolution that Labour representatives should be appointed to the Compensation Board. "We do not think that governments have been generous enough in giving representation to boards in which Labour is interested," he said. "Now that that you have given us the Compensation Act, we ask that you give us proper representation on that Board. We cast no reflection on those who are members of the Board at the present time."

The resolution also asked for the right of appeal.

"I do not believe that you represent Labour if you want an appeal," stated Sir William Hearst.

Mr. Simpson explained that the latter part of the resolution had been deleted and that organized labour did not want an appeal.

Fred Bancroft said the big fight that had been made by organized labour when the Act was drawn up had been against the right to appeal.

SYSTEM OF RURAL CREDITS.

Mr. Simpson introduced a resolution that a system of rural credits should be introduced by the Department of Agriculture to enable those to go on the farm who find that they cannot now do so. Another important resolution was that of asking for a shorter work day for retail dealers.

The resolution asked that the working hours should not be longer than 53 hours a week.

Hon. G. H. Ferguson: "What would you do with the retail communities?"

Mr. Simpson: "If the law is passed people will learn to buy their commodities within the proper hours."

Sir William Hearst: "It possibly could be arranged that in the country communities the stores would keep open two or three nights a week. I think, however, that the municipalities are the proper bodies to deal with the matter."

Mr. Simpson: "That is my own conviction, but all we ask is that the government will pass legislation which will make it easier for the municipalities to take the necessary action."

A resolution was introduced asking that all employees should be paid at least twice a month, and that legislation be passed preventing tailoring in private homes. It was claimed that disease was spread as a result of the present method.

FRANCE ALL READY FOR GERMAN DRIVE ON WESTERN FRONT

Camly Confident of Her Ability to Withstand the Worst Hindenburg Can Do—Calais and Nancy Expected to Be Main Objectives of Foe's Greatest Drives of War

DESIRES DECISIVE BATTLE

PARIS, Jan. 29.—To-day France is awaiting the German offensive, awaiting it with calm and confidence, awaiting it almost with gladness. Rightly or wrongly, the nation believes that a huge drive against the Western Front is impending. Rightly or wrongly, it believes that the coming battle will be the greatest—perhaps the decisive, perhaps even the final—battle of the war.

For weeks the leading newspapers have emphasised the subject. Each day their warnings have grown more definite, insistent. A few days ago the Temps' military editorial said: "Now we have reached 20th January, the date that it had been declared would mark the beginning of the great German offensive, and yet the communiques have rarely contained so little news of action."

On Saturday last the Intransigeant headlines ran: "The Battle of the West," and yesterday, "The Coming Battle." This morning Joseph Reinach writes in the Figaro:

"Since yesterday we are allowed to speak of one of the objectives of the coming offensive. This is Nancy—Nancy, the famous capital of Lorraine, which German calculations reckoned would fall three days after hostilities commenced and whose Grand Couronne resisted every assault under the very eyes of the Kaiser, already decked and caparisoned for his triumphant entry. Nancy—what a prize! 'You want the Lorraine we hold,' cried recently Karl von Stantz. 'Our answer is we shall take all Lorraine.'

Seek Revenge for 1914 Defeat.

"I have never lost the idea that the Germans would one day seek revenge for their defeat of 1914 at the Grand Couronne, and I know that during the last three years they have worked hard before their mighty entrenched camp of Metz. We also have worked hard. The Germans have no illusions as to the strength of our defences in this sector, which are forged of the same steel as those of Champagne, of Artois, and of Verdun. But I take this opportunity to call attention to enemy concentrations of troops in the forests of German-held Lorraine and to emphasise the temptation to the German to attempt a blow against the historic city of Nancy."

That is definite word enough from France's foremost military writer to show that there are good grounds for announcing France's belief that a German onslaught is imminent. It is true, the suggestion has been made that press insistence on the the probability of an attack is meant to distract attention from the Caillaux and lesser scandals, but the very newspapers that have raised the note of warning most loudly are of "nationalist" or ultra-patriotic tendency and have throughout been most vehement against treason.

Besides, there are many reasons to justify the Temps' expectation that the present inactivity is but the calm that precedes the storm. To begin with Germany's internal political situation. It is now clear that the military leaders and Pan-Germanists had a desperate fight to carry through their annexationist programme concerning territories. Fear that Trotsky might hold firm and the peace negotiations be broken off nerved the efforts of the moderates. Crown Council followed Crown Council in tumultuous succession, and there are even rumours of a virtual militarist coup d'etat that finally gave them control. Militarism is still supreme in Germany, but its chiefs must know that their hold on the nation is insecure, that longing for peace is fast replacing desire for victory.

Activity All Along the Line.

For the present Russia can be cajoled, tricked, or even ignored, which means that Hindenburg has time and men at his disposal for a last attempt to wrest triumphs from disaster. All information the Allies gather regarding German movements goes to prove that he intends to utilise the opportunity. Reinach has mentioned concentrations in German Lorraine. Every report about the hostile front from Nieuport to St. Quentin refers to similar activity.

Reinach stated his opinion nearly a month ago that the calm in the east would render half a million extra men available for the West. I was told two days ago that it had been learned from the interior of Belgium that not only were cantonments and towns and villages packed everywhere with troops, but that these troops were receiving intensive training; that rest camps had been practically abolished, and that feverish activity prevailed on all sides. The point was emphasised that not only were numbers increased, but that care was being taken to replace weary or inferior units, or even individuals, by men of better quality.

It was the opinion that a big attack was inevitable, and that the period of preparation was nearly, if not quite, ended. German air activity, raiding, and incessant cannonade to "register" artillery objectives point to the same conclusion. Along the whole Allied front these symptoms are evident, but the impression is growing that the main blows will fall at both ends—against Calais and Nancy—with possibly simultaneous attacks in Artois, Champagne, and Alsace.

This battle of France may begin around the same date as began the battle of Verdun two years ago. But this time France is ready for it. Her people are forewarned, her soldiers formed under Clemenceau the country knows that there is no longer fear of traitorous French. Under Petain the army has confidence that it can rival the heroism of Verdun.

To-day France stands to arms with better morale than ever before.

How to Rid the Skin Of Objectionable Hairs

(Aids to Beauty)

A simplified method is here given for the quick removal of hairy or fuzzy growths and rarely is more than one treatment required: Mix a stiff paste with some powdered delatone and water, apply to hairy surface and after 2 or 3 minutes rub off, wash the skin and every hair has vanished. This simple treatment cannot cause injury, but care should be exercised to get real delatone.

To the Editor of The Examiner.

Dear Sir,—Will you kindly allow me space in your valuable paper, in regard to an item published in last night's issue of The Peterborough Review, with the heading "Mr. Knox's word decided issue." Now, Mr. Editor, Mr. Burnham was informed by Mr. Knox that by his (Mr. Knox's) recommendation and advice, a farmer's son was exempted from military service, after being ordered to report for service at Kingston.

I would like to ask Mr. Burnham what sacrifice that farmer's son would be making for this war, and the city and village boys to go and fight his battles for one dollar and ten cents per day, while the farmer's son stays home, lives on the fat of the land and shares the large profits of his father's farm?

I would suggest that every young man, physically fit; that is to say, any young man holding a medical certificate in Category A should be drafted, or else draft none.

Thanking you, Mr. Editor, for your most valuable space, I remain,

"FAIR PLAY."

Rice and Cornmeal Griddle Cakes—
1 cup soft-boiled rice
1 cup cornmeal
1 cup of milk
1-2 cup of flour
1 egg
4 teaspoons baking powder
1 teaspoon salt
2 tablespoons brown sugar

Jellied Vegetable Salad—

Put cold cooked vegetables, cut in small pieces, into small wet moulds or cups. Dissolve one and one-half tablespoons of gelatine in one and one-half cupfuls of water, bring to a boil, add one tablespoon of sugar, fill tablespoons of gelatine in one and serve on crisp lettuce leaves with French or mayonnaise dressing.

Barley Scones—

1 cup whole wheat flour

2 teaspoons baking powder
2 tablespoons fat
3-4 cup sour milk
1-2 teaspoon soda.

Power Propelled Vehicles.

Experiments in power propelled vehicles date back to 1770, when Joseph Cugnot, a French engineer, built the first automobile. He constructed a steam automobile that hauled two and one-half tons three miles per hour, and this vehicle is still preserved in form of a model in France. In 1802 the first practical steam automobile was built by Richard Trevithick of England, using a crank shaft for the first time and driving by gears from the engine to the road wheels. In 1821 Julius Griffiths of England gave us the first comfortable steam vehicle, the first vehicle to have a coach design of body, with seats carried on springs, as we know them today. In 1831 Summers & Ogle of England built a three wheel tubular boiler and two cylinder engine, which attained a speed of thirty-two miles per hour. The first motor vehicle to regularly carry passengers for hire was built by Walter Hancock of England in 1834. The motive power was steam.—New York Times.

MR. STACEY WILL RESIDE IN PETERBORO'

LINDSAY, Jan. 20.—The Township of Eldon is to lose one of its most prominent and influential residents in the person of Mr. Benj. Stacey, of Lorneville. He is about to remove to Peterboro, where he will be better enabled to command his business as special representative for the Dairy Department of the De Laval Company in Eastern Ontario. For years Mr. Stacey has been connected with the above firm, and his energy and business qualifications have merited the promotion above chronicled.

Mr. Stacey has been a resident of Eldon township for 25 years, having resided in Manvers previous to that time. For seven years past he has been the efficient Clerk of the Township of Eldon. He has been one of the most popular residents of the township, taking a keen interest in all forms of sport, particularly baseball. At one time he was one of the best players on the Lindsay baseball team, and some of the fans can remember with keen pleasure the times when he could wallop the horsehide clean over the west fence at the Lindsay Fair grounds.

Mr. Stacey expects to take up residence in Peterboro about the middle of March.

A MOTHER'S WORK

Mothers as a rule spend so much time in looking after their children and in household work that they overlook the absolute necessity for that rest and relaxation upon which their health depends. The consequence is that soon they find their health breaking down. The daily humdrum of household life as a mother knows it, with hurried meals and family and household cares, quickly thin the blood and weaken the nerves. Then follow headaches, pains in the side and back, swollen limbs, palpitation, a constantly tired feeling, and often an inclination to fretfulness. These symptoms are the sign of poor blood, and are the inevitable penalty of overwork and over-anxiety in the care of children and the affairs of the household.

Whenever a mother finds her health failing and household duties becoming more than she can comfortably manage, whenever extra demands are made upon her strength, she should adopt the safe and simple expedient of enriching her blood with Dr. Williams' Pink Pills. These pills are especially valuable to the nursing mother and the woman worn out with household cares. They renew her blood supply, strengthen her tired limbs, and drive away the headaches and backaches that have made her so miserable. They have restored thousands of despondent women to good health and bright spirits, and will do for you as much as they have done for others if you will give them a fair trial.

You can get Dr. Williams' Pink Pills from any dealer in medicine, or by mail at 50 cents a box or six boxes for $2.50 from The Dr. Williams' Medicine Co., Brockville, Ont.

SHOT WHILE OUT SKATING.

Lindsay, January 29. — Pte. Wheeler of the Arsenal Guard, met with a peculiar accident while visiting at his home in Haliburton. He was out skating on the rink when he slipped and fell and a revolver which he carried, discharged, the bullet entering his arm. The wound is not serious.

Queer Names of Flowers.

The names of some of our prettiest flowers are so queer that they seem amusing to us. Nasturtium, for example, comes from the Latin word meaning "twisted nose." Verbena is from the Latin for "twig," and lavender is derived from the Latin word lavare, to wash, and is really the same word as "laundry." Lavender probably got its name because it is put away with newly washed clothes.

Cornflower undoubtedly gets its name because it grows among the rows of corn. Goldilocks looks like a little yellow head. Honeysuckle is one of the sweetest blossoms and one of the easiest from which bees get their honey.

Anemone is our "wind flower." Its name comes from the Latin word anemos, which means "wind," and the anemone is really a wind flower, growing best in exposed, windy places. Orchid is named for the Greek word orchis, which means "bag." Orchids always have curious little bags.—Kansas City Star.

Saved by a Cookbook.

There is a story of a man, desperately ill, who, having passed the crisis of his ailment, needed only, so the doctors asserted, an incentive to recover. He had dire misfortunes and had lost all interest in living. Neither his business nor his motorcar nor his children nor his wife sufficed to lure him back to the trials of temporal existence. Then some inspired relative thought of the cookbook. She put it into the hands of the sick man as he lay withering on his pillow. He turned it over lackadaisically; then he fluttered the pages with transparent fingers. Presently he asked to be propped up in bed. Before long he was whispering fervidly of what he was going to eat when he got well—those pig hocks with dumplings, hot waffles and sirup, schnitt-bohnen with sour sauce. What were rissoles and ramekins and bannocks? And why had he never known about toad in the hole? These were the sentiments that wooed him back to life.—New York Mail.

Silence and Speech.

The chief office of silence is to bury all that is evil, and the chief office of speech is to disclose and disseminate all that is good. Let this be done with sincerity and earnestness, for its ultimate benefit to character and to conduct is established beyond a doubt.

Periscopes.

The first periscope, a crude affair embodying an arrangement of flat mirrors, was invented by a Dutchman, Telar van Elven, who in 1830 built a semisubmersible boat at Amsterdam. The modern periscope, with parabolic mirrors, was described in a magazine article by a French university professor just before an American inventor, sailor and writer of sea tales applied for a patent on the same idea. They worked independently, but the American, Morgan Robertson, is generally recognized as the inventor because he invented the machine for grinding the lenses.

If Stomach Hurts Drink Hot Water

"If dyspeptics, sufferers from gas, wind or flatulence, stomach acidity or sourness, gastric catarrh, heartburn, etc., would take a teaspoonful of pure bisurated magnesia in half a glass of hot water immediately after eating, they would soon forget they were ever afflicted with stomach trouble, and doctors would have to look elsewhere for patients." In explanation of these words a well-known New York physician stated that most forms of stomach trouble are due to stomach acidity and fermentation of the food contents of the stomach combined with an insufficient blood supply to the stomach. Hot water increases the blood supply and bisurated magnesia instantly neutralizes the excessive stomach acid and stops food fermentation, the combination of the two, therefore, being marvelously successful and decidedly preferable to the use of artificial digestants, stimulants or medicines for indigestion.

"THE CLUE IN THE AIR"

A DETECTIVE STORY—Isabel Ostrander

"She has taken a suite at the Hotel Lavenham, with Mary along as her personal maid," the inspector interrupted. "We are taking no chances of losing no sight of them."

"That Mary acts queer to me," McCarty remarked. "As if she might have some one back of her."

"She has." Inspector Druet leaned forward in his chair. "We got the office to-night to lay off of Mrs. Mrs. Doremus, and it came from high up, too. There's a strong influence at work for her somewhere."

"I had an idea that might come," McCarty grinned. "It's more for the sake of the man, I'm thinking, than for her. So she's to be dropped from the investigation, is she?"

"Not while Terhune's in the game," the inspector replied grimly. "It's a good thing I had him retained on this, for we—well, it would have been healthier for us to take that hint. You know how it was yourself, Mac, when you were on the force. But Terhune is a free lance; he never takes a case unless h ecan have full swing, and he stops at nothing. This quiet word passed on down the line is like waving a red flag before a bull, to him. He won't get off that trail now until he runs the man to earth."

CHAPTER IX.

THE INQUEST.

The funeral of Marion Rowntree, which had been announced as strictly private, took place the following morning. A cordon of police, drawn up at a respectful distance from the entrance to the Quimby residence, kept at bay the crowd of morbid sight seers which swarmed up the steps of the high-stooped, old-fashioned houses, and blocked the street solidly at either end.

It was an orderly crowd, however, quiet with its intensity of interest, and breaking out into a murmuring wave of comment only when a pathway was forced through for the automobile of a late arrival for the melancholy ceremony.

McCarty was stationed just back of the special policeman at the ropes, in a position which commanded not only an unobstructed view of the dead girl's home, but of the throng of faces at the opposite barrier.

He has been drawn to the scene not by any morbid impulse, but on what he would have termed his "hunch." He would have indignantly denied that any theory was at work in his mind, but his presence was prompted by the reasoning, born of past experience, that an occasion such as this was an irresistible magnet for those whose secret knowledge, if not actual guilt, weighed upon them, and who would have felt comparatively safe from observation in a densely packed crowd, when they would not have dared show themselves at the inquest or near the scene of the tragedy itself.

The faces about him expressed meerly an avid if impersonal interest, and so closely did they press against him that he could scarcely turn to look behind. Across the bare intervening space McCarty spied the stalwart form of Cunliffe in the other division of the crowd, but he could not catch his eye.

The minister and the last of the few guests had long since disappeared behind the noiseless closing doors, and the waiting throng commenced to evince a restive impatience. Feet shuffled upon the pavement; the murmur of voices grew louder and an aimless but concerned movement here and there brought quick attention and sharp reprimand from the guardians of the peace. The crowd facing McCarty was shifting, the foremost being slowly but inexorably pressed aside to make way for those back of them.

McCarty's eyes, casually sweeping the changing mass, were caught, and held momentarily by one face directly across from him, and not far removed from where Cunliffe was standing. Its pale intentness marked it even in that sea of eagerly curious faces.

Where had McCarty seen that pasty, cadaverous, deeply lined, yet oddly youthful countenance, with the enormous ears standing out on either side? In another instant it would disappear in the crowd, and he searched his traitorous memory desperately. All at once, as if it sounded audibly in his ear, a hushed, shuddering voice came to him:

"Her blood is on me!"

It was the strange young man who had helped him to carry the battered body into the doctor's office, who had later given a false name and address, and had dropped from sight!

McCarty signalled frantically to Cunliffe, who at length perceived him, and gestured cordially in response with a bland lack of comprehension that was maddening.

McCarty redoubled his efforts, but a look of puzzled inquiry from the officer was the only reward of his attempt. It produced an unwelcome result, however.

His gesticulations had drawn the attention of the young man himself, who vouchsafed him one keen, apprehensive glance, then turned swiftly and wormed his way with sinuous agility through the serried ranks back of him.

McCarty, hemmed in on all sides, was forced to stand impotently, but with raging exasperation in his heart, and watch the disappearance of one whom he felt to be no idle spectator, but a character of importance in the drama, whose grim final curtain was ringing down there at that hour.

A rising murmur of expectation turned McCarty's eyes to the door of the Quimby house. It had opened, and the brief black-garbed procession appeared, and started down the steps toward the waiting hearse and the motors.

Immediately behind the slender, flower heaped coffin a tall, bowed woman, closely swathed in crape, leaned heavily upon the arm of Stephen Quimby. The banker was pale, but his face was a composed, expressionless mask, and he held himself with his habitual dignity and poise.

Half way down the street, however, his somberly-banded hat slipped from his grasp and rolled to the sidewalk. One of the pallbearers picked it up and handed it to him, and he brushed it with his sleeve.

McCarty craned his neck forward. The incident in itself was trivial, but his watchful gaze there had seemed to be something forced and unnatural in Quimby's movements, and he had not failed to note the swift, significant glance with which the banker had swept the assembled multitude as the hat fell from his hand.

The crowd swayed and parted, forming a lane for the egress of the funeral procession and in a few minutes the last motor car had slipped around the corner, and all was over.

Cunliffe had vanished before McCarty could reach him, and the assemblage rapidly disintegrated. At the outskirts of the thinning crowd he saw a woman whose figure seemed familiar, and edging his way closer, he discovered that it was Mary, the maid of Mrs. Doremus.

Had morbid curiosity alone drawn her to the scene? He wondered that her mistress should have sanctioned such a step, and then remembered the girl's evident ascendancy over the woman she served.

An impulse to approach her sent him forward as quickly as the human obstacles barring his way would allow; but he was halted by a glimpse of Martin, one of Inspector Druet's aids, just behind her, and Yost almost abreast. Her presence at least would not go unrecorded, but he cursed the chance which had permitted the strange young man — Cunliffe's "drunk"—to slip again from under his hands.

He spent a restless afternoon reading the papers and pacing the floor of his room. Dennis had made use of a day off duty to go to see his sister and her baby in the country, and McCarty resented the defection of his confidant.

In the evening, impelled by an impulse too vague to be defined, he found himself back at the scene of the morning's event. It was after 9 o'clock, and the street was fairly deserted. A few crushed flowers in the gutter marked the house of bereavement, and as McCarty sauntered by on the other side of the street, he perceived a dark figure loitering in the shadow of the tradesmen's entrance.

He crossed at the corner and strolled back and the figure emerged from the gloom and approached him.

"Mac, what the devil brings you hanging around. There's two more across the way by Mr. Terhune's orders. It's beyond me why Quimby should be getting the double O."

It was the detective, Martin.

"What are you doing here, yourself?" retorted McCarty. "I thought you were trailing that servant girl of Mrs. Doremus's."

"I'm on the job now. She's in there." He pointed a thumb over his shoulder.

"In Quimby's house? What for?" McCarty was staggered.

"You can search me," the detective returned with a shrug. "She's nobody's fool, and she's on to it that she's being shadowed; but she came here straight from the Lavenham Hotel a matter of ten minutes ago, as open as if she did not care who followed her. She wasn't expected, either. There was talk and some little delay before the let her in. Whist—Get along with you, Mac. She's coming out now!"

McCarty promptly effaced himself, and returned to his room. She would be a witness at the inquest on the following day and undoubtedly this visit would be made the subject of query. What explanation would she give of her errand?

A natural sequence led his train of thought back to the girl's mistress, and the significant hint from "higher up" to eliminate Mrs. Doremus from the investigation.

Obviously the influence was at work to protect her mysterious guest, for she was scarcely in a position to command it for herself. This question, however, was in Terhune's hands, and like the inspector, McCarty felt convinced that he would compel an answer to it. But when he had done so, would they be any nearer a solution to the initial problem confronting them? When the man was found, would he prove to have been the slayer of Marion Rowntree?

As he finally dropped off to sleep, there appeared before McCarty in the darkness the long-jawed, jugubrious face of the man who had escaped him in the crowd that morning. It had changed greatly in the two days that had elapsed since their first encounter; the unhealthy pallor was accentuated, the lines more deeply marked, and even across the wide space which had separated them it seemed to McCarty that a harassed, hang-dog air pervaded him, as of one whose thoughts gave him no peace.

The inquest had been set for ten the next morning, but McCarty was on hand a good half-hour earlier. He selected a seat at the side of the room, and near the rail, where he could scan the faces, not only of the prospective witnesses as they filed in, but of the spectators as well. Terhune was busied with the coroner over a pile of typewritten sheets at the desk, but he favored his associate of two days before with a brisk nod.

Cunliffe, too hailed the ex-roundsman cheerfully, but his good humor turned to chagrin when McCarty told him how close he had been to the missing witness, and he swore energetically beneath his breath.

"That comes of being so darned anxious to see what's going on a ways off that you overlook a bet right under your nose!" he exclaimed bitterly. "My time was taken up watching the two near you, and I never thought of looking around me."

"The two——"

GLASS OF SALTS CLEANS KIDNEYS

If Your Back Hurts or Bladder Bothers You, Drink Lots of Water.

When your kidneys hurt and your back feels sore, don't get scared and proceed to load your stomach with a lot of drugs that excite the kidneys and irritate the entire urinary tract. Keep your kidneys clean like you keep your bowels clean, by flushing them with a mild, harmless salts, which removes the body's urinous waste and stimulates them to their normal activity. The function of the kidneys is to filter the blood. In 24 hours they strain from it 500 grains of acid and waste, so we can readily understand the vital importance of keeping the kidneys active.

Drink lots of water—you can't drink too much; also get from any pharmacist about four ounces of Jad Salts; take a tablespoonful in a glass of water before breakfast each morning for a few days and your kidneys will act fine. This famous salts is made from the acid of grapes and lemon juice, combined with lithia, and has been used for generations to clean and stimulate clogged kidneys; also to neutralize the acids in urine so it no longer is a source of irritation, thus ending bladder weakness.

Jad Salts is inexpensive; cannot injure; makes a delightful effervescent lithia-water drink which everyone should take now and then to keep their kidneys clean and active. Try this, also keep up the water drinking, and no doubt you will wonder what became of your kidney trouble and backache.

Makes His Own Castor Oil

A druggist at Santander, U. S. of Colombia, has discovered that he could produce his own castor oil far more cheaply than import it. This has started a great boom in growing castor oil plants, and shipments of castor seed meal and of the beans are being made to New York.

Kindliness Necessary.

We can dispense with a great many qualities in the people we love. It is not necessary for them to be brilliant or wise or witty or rich or beautiful. But we cannot imagine loving anyone who is incapable of kindliness. That is the characteristic we cannot do without.

Clean Water Bottles.

When the water bottle becomes lined with a sediment from the water, an easy way to remove it is by putting a teaspoonful of hydrochloric acid with a little water in the bottle. The glass will be perfectly clear in a few minutes.

Man.

They say he works like a dog, and dogs don't work; and they say he drinks like a fish, and fish don't drink; and they say he lies like a lawyer, and lawyers don't—Eh? How's that?

Water in Fruit.

Most fruits contain from 75 to 95 per cent water, and a balance of woody fiber or cellulose, fruit sugar and minerals. Thus the free use of fruit daily insures a greater supply of water to the body.

Dr. Jameson Passes Out

As David sang of Saul and Jonathan, "And in death they were not divided," so might we say of "Dr. Jim" and Cecil Rhodes, for the hero (or goat) of the famous Jameson raid has been laid beside his great friend, the Colossus of British Imperialism. If his life has not already inspired a historian it ought to do so, for Sir Leander Starr Jameson will be remembered as one of the pioneers of British Imperialism, one of the great men whose careers were laid in South Africa. One might easily fill a page with condensed accounts of his many vicissitudes and adventures. Few pioneers had such an eventful career. From invalid to leader of an army, from doctor to Prime Minister, are leaps that give a synopsis of his record, and without making any exception in favor of the author of the saying about the "chloroform age" or the Mayos, it may be asserted with definiteness that he, Sir Starr Jameson, was the best-known medical man of the past generation. This also "goes as it lays" for doctors of theology, pedagogy, chiropody, and allied sciences.

Like Rhodes, who was an invalid, Jameson went to South Africa because of failing health. In those days when the local doctors were unable to cure a disease—or diagnose it—they recommended change of climate. Dr. Jameson had spent a year or two in a London hospital before he was advised to go elsewhere, but it was partly due to an innate love of adventure that he chose South Africa. The dry climate suited him; the social atmosphere, then just clearing from the primitive pioneer stage, suited him as well, and after his health was restored he chose not to return to the Old Country. It was only a few years until he had the best medical practice in South Africa. Long before he led the famous raid he was earning about $50,000 a year, and throughout the gold-fields his name was known and respected. Early in his South African career he fell in with Cecil Rhodes. The two men had similar ideals: the greatest of them was a united South African, under the British flag, and though Rhodes continued as a mining magnate, and Jameson as the great doctor of the country, both were at heart British imperialists, whose chief ambition was to see the Union Jack flying over all South Africa.

In 1891 Dr. Jameson was appointed administrator of Rhodesia, the colony which he did so much to establish, for it was due to his personal influence with Lobengula that the first British settlers were allowed to go through Matabeleland and found Salisbury and Victoria, which became the nucleus of the new colony. As chief of the colony Dr. Jameson became also its military leader in the first Matabele war, which ended in favor of the colonists at slight cost, and in 1895 at a public dinner he predicted that the future of South Africa was British, and that even the Transvaal would become a British province like the others. The success of Rhodesia and the growth of the British element in South Africa were regarded by President Kruger, of the Transvaal, with misgivings. He came to the conclusion that British influence ought to be nipped in the bud. So the Transvaal encroached on Rhodesian territory, and a law was passed refusing the ordinary rights of citizenship to the British subjects on the Rand.

It is as well established as any historical fact can be, after only 20 years' time, says The New York Times, that Jameson was made the "goat" of the enterprise of December 29, 1895, to January 2, 1896, which had for its object the overthrow of the Kruger Government in the Transvaal. The British population of Johannesburg, including most of the financial elements of the Boer republic, had promised to support it not only with money, but with arms; Cecil Rhodes, then Premier of Cape Colony, had had a large part in planning it, and though he later became convinced that it was unwise, would undoubtedly have given it every aid possible; and no effectual denial has been made of the general belief that Joseph Chamberlain, then British Colonial Secretary, was a party to the plan. At any rate, Jameson enlisted a column of adventurers who were followers of his name and of the recently disbanded Bechuanaland Mounted Police and entered the Transvaal on December 29, 1895. The Johannesburg British failed to rise, the Boers mobilized quickly, and on January 2, after heavy losses, Jameson was forced to surrender. Because he had failed, Jameson, when turned over to the British authorities, was sentenced to ten months' imprisonment.

What makes the Jameson Raid a matter of historical interest outside of South Africa is that it inspired Emperor William of Germany to send to President Kruger of the Transvaal, a telegram of such a character that it warned millions of British subjects that Germany hated Great Britain. As for Dr. Jim, he served a few months of his sentence, and then came the South African war in which he fought the good fight. After peace was declared he became Premier of Cape Colony. He was ousted by Gen. Botha, but his personal popularity made him a great influence in South African politics until the day of his death.

Human Strength.

The strength of males increases rapidly from twelve to nineteen years, and at a rate similar to that of the weight, and more slowly and regularly up to thirty years, after which it declines at an increasing rate to the age of sixty years. The strength of females increases at a more uniform rate from nine to nineteen years, more slowly to thirty, after which it falls off in a manner similar to that of males. At eleven years females are weaker than males by 22 pounds, at twenty years of age by 36 pounds.

About Envelopes.

It is said that envelopes were invented during the early days of Louis XIV of France. In 1660 M. De Valyer established a private post and placed boxes at the corner of the streets for letters inclosed in envelopes that were sold in offices established for that purpose. It seems likely, however, that envelopes were in use before this period because envelopes so used in France were special post-paid envelopes. But precisely what year is marked by the first invention of envelopes is unknown.

Sell Wood by Pound.

Circassian walnut is sold by the pound or the ton and not by the foot. As early as 116 B. C. it was introduced into Italy from Persia. Russia is the chief source of Circassian walnut. The logs are so heavy that they will not float, and are sold from the forest with their bark on. Only the heart of the wood is used, and it is the crooked, irregular logs that possess the best-figured wood. Even very old trees rarely have a clear length of more than ten feet.

Mushroom, First Plant.

The mushroom in form of a slime fold was the first plant to evolve on earth. The algae plants of the first seas thrust out a fungus on land to draw minerals from the overhanging rocks. On this primitive fungus lichens evolved and the three plants interfed each other, three hundred million years ago and today. Later, true mushrooms evolved, at first with small caps, forming the first food supply for the later arriving living creatures.

Fair Warning.

In the reign of Charles II a certain worthy divine at Whitehall thus addressed himself to the auditory at the conclusion of his sermon: "In short, if you don't live up to the precepts of the gospel, but abandon yourselves to your irregular appetites, you must expect to receive your reward in a certain place which 'tis not good manners to mention here.

Our Heroes.

Man's great actions are performed in minor struggles. There are noble and mysterious triumphs which no eye sees, no renown rewards, and no flourish of trumpets salutes. Life, misfortune, isolation, abandonment, and poverty are battlefields which have their heroes.

Chauffeur's Prayer.

Sick Chauffeur (to chauffeur friend)—Say, bill, if I should die hire an auto hearse. And, Bill, I want you to drive it. And, old pard, on the way run it into a tree or something. I'd like to go in a manner fitting my position in life."

Help Yourself.

There is in this world infinitely more joy than pain to be shared, if you will only take your share when it is set before you.

Circumstantial Evidence.

The following instance of conclusive circumstantial evidence came to light in a case in which Lord Chancellor Eldon was employed on circuit. In later years he related it to one of his daughters in these words:

"I have heard some very extraordinary cases of murder trials. I remember in one, where I was counsel, for a long time the evidence did not appear to touch the prisoner at all, and he looked about him with the most perfect unconcern, seeming to think himself quite safe.

"At last the surgeon was called, who stated that the deceased had been killed by a shot—a gunshot—in the head, and he produced the matted hair and stuff cut from and taken out of the wound. It was all hardened with blood. A basin of warm water was brought into court, and as the blood was gradually softened a piece of printed paper appeared—the wadding of the gun—which proved to be half of a ballad.

"The other half had been found in the man's pocket when he was taken. He was hanged."

Death Record of a Monster Wave.

The greatest waves—apart from the true earthquake wave—are those caused by tornadoes or circular storms. In such a storm the barometer may be lower by three inches in the center of the storm than at its edge.

The consequence of this tremendous reduction of pressure is that the sea in the vortex rises high above the usual level and in this way are produced waves of appalling size and height.

It was a wave of this type which, in the dreadful tornado of 1876, swept upon the mouth of the Ganges and drove in over an area the size of Devonshire. By marks upon the trees it was ascertained that this great wall of salt water rolled in forty-five feet high. The damage done was appalling, and more than 100,000 unfortunate natives were drowned.—London Times.

Hiding Places For Money.

The woman who, as just revealed in the law courts, hid her savings on her mother's grave in Forest Hill cemetery probably hit upon a unique cache. But there is no saying. The person who mistrusts savings banks generally looks around for the most unlikely spot in which to deposit wealth, and more than one may hit on the same idea.

Old cannon, for instance, seem to form favorable depositories. Quite a quantity of jewelry was found some time ago in a solitary gun which stands in the fort at Shoreham, and about the same time a bag containing seventy sovereigns was discovered in an old cannon in Peel park, Bradford.

From one of the old Crimean cannon at Liverpool also some inquisitive youngsters once brought forth a soldier's discharge papers and notes to the value of £100.—London Standard.

A Cow For a Life.

The Ober Gabelhorn is a peak notorious for the dangerous cornices which decorate its upper ridges. Of many accidents reported in connection with it perhaps the most remarkable, says G. D. Abraham in "Swiss Mountain Climbs," was the adventure which befell an amateur and his young guide. In passing along the dangerous final cornice it suddenly gave way under the amateur, and he went flying through space to apparent destruction. The rope at the other end of the line seemed in hopeless plight, but with astounding presence of mind he flung himself down the opposite side of the ridge, thus saving two lives. The rope cut deep into the snow above, but held firm. The young guide's name was Ulrich Almer. His reward was a cow.

Suffered Great Agony FROM PAIN IN STOMACH FOR OVER 5 YEARS

Most of the misery and ill-health that humanity is burdened with arises from disorders of the stomach, liver and bowels. If you are feeling out of sorts, have pains in the stomach, especially after eating, bilious spells, headaches, sour stomach, coated tongue, sallow or muddy complexion, specks floating before the eyes, you should take a few doses of Milburn's Laxa-Liver Pills and note the change.

Miss Ida Hogan, Dunrobin, Ont., writes: "For over five years I have suffered great agony from pains in the stomach. I tried several remedies but got no relief until a friend advised me to take Milburn's Laxa-Liver Pills. I started with two vials and before I had one quite used, I found much relief. I continued until I used four vials, and they have completely cured me. That was fourteen months ago and I have not had the slightest return since. The best praise I could give them is not enough."

Milburn's Laxa-Liver Pills are 25c a vial at all dealers, or mailed direct on receipt of price by The T. Milburn Co., Limited, Toronto, Ont.

War Trade Board for Canada

THE industrial interests of Canada received the first suggestion, through THE GLOBE, that a War Trade Board was to be established. Canada's National Newspaper is first with the big domestic news, just as it is first with reports from overseas—and tens of thousands of people now appreciate the fact that its exclusive cable services make THE GLOBE indispensable.

THE Business and Industrial pages every Tuesday are a part of the Plus in THE GLOBE'S Super-service. They record the big things in Canada's onward march to industrial power.

Canada's National Newspaper

keeps at the head of the procession by keeping its readers posted. In the issue forecasting the Dominion's War Trade Board and the "blue-sky" legislation to protect industry, THE GLOBE'S Industrial Section also told of the opposition of sheep men to the lifting of export licenses, of the history of oleomargarine, of the commercial possibilities of Canada's new oil fields and of the shipbuilding revival in British Columbia.

THE Imperial Munitions Board placed fifteen million dollars' worth of orders for wooden ships on the Coast last year. Altogether Canada is building $46,000,000 worth of ships—that was another special story of THE GLOBE'S. This Tuesday feature, accepted as an authority by both Canadian and foreign Governments, is in itself worth the full subscription price of THE GLOBE.

Status of Apprentices.

For some time past, one of the great industrial problems in Australia, as in so many countries, has been that of obtaining a sufficient supply of skilled labor and, at the same time, of securing the youth of the country against the dangers of entering "blind-alley" employments or of entering employments quite foreign to their adaptability. The demand for labor of all kinds in Australia is very great, and the general wage rate is the highest in the world. There exists, therefore, a particularly strong temptation to the boy, just leaving school, to engage in the unskilled work which forms a part of almost every industry, and thus enter on an employment which leads nowhere.

The scheme of apprenticeship recently put forward by the Victorian Government is designed to surmount these difficulties. The Victorian authorities propose to meet the ever-growing requirements of the expanding industries of the state by educating the boys for occupations, by encouraging apprenticeship, and by constituting an industrial training commission to look after the interests of the apprentice.

It is clear, indeed, from the most cursory study of the plan that it has been carefully thought out. In recent years, the idea of apprenticeship has been losing in favor, amongst both employers and employes. From the employers' point of view, it was thought to be more profitable to carry the theory of the division of labor to its greatest limit, and to replace the all-round craftsman by the man skilled to the utmost in the execution of one particular process; whilst, from the employes' point of view, the length of the apprenticeship and the low wages paid to the apprentice were regarded with disfavor. Almost any trade policy requires many years before its effects are fully seen, and one of the chief defects of the system which abolished the apprentice was largely overlooked, namely, that such a system did not produce a skilled man, in any just sense of that word, and, when the call came to industry and manufacture to launch out into unaccustomed channels, the skilled man who could quickly adapt himself to changed conditions was at a premium. That there should be a large body of such men, and that means should be devised for keeping this body constantly reinforced, is coming to be very clearly seen, and, in Victoria, has given rise to the present proposals.

She Pinched 'Em.

To a hospital for wounded soldiers the Queen of England recently sent an exceptionally beautiful bouquet that had been presented to her, relates Youth's Companion. The inmates received the gift with much pleasure, says an English periodical, and to show their appreciation of her Majesty's kindness, and to prove that the flowers had arrived safely, they commissioned one of their number to stand at the hospital gate the following morning when the Queen passed. The result was a tremendous surprise. Queen Mary, seated in her car, saw the soldier standing at the gate, bouquet in hand, and, assuming that he wished to present it to her, she had the car stopped. As the soldier exhibited the bouquet, the Queen took it in her hand, remarked upon its beauty, calmly appropriated it, and gave word for the car to go on. The soldier stared in amusement. Then, recovering his speech, he said: "Well, she's pinched 'em!"

Ringing Chime Bells.

When first introduced, chime bells were rung by a number of men, each grasping a rope from one particular bell and striking it at the precise moment the leader pointed a finger at him for a signal. The custom originated in Europe, and was imported into this country when the first chimes were brought over. This was shortly after the country's independence was declared, the new bells being placed in Trinity church, New York city. It required seven men to ring the seven bells, and it was not until 1800 that a plan was devised whereby one man alone was able to ring the bells.

Nativity of Peach Tree.

The peach tree is a native of Persia and China. It was brought to Italy by the Romans in the time of the Emperor Claudius, was cultivated in Europe as early as 1550 and brought to America about 1680. Its name is derived from Persico, its native country. The ancients regarded it with distrust, as according to Pliny they supposed the king of Persia had sent it into Egypt to poison the inhabitants with whom he was at war. The Chinese have traditions of a peach tree of knowledge and another of immortality.

To Remove Oil Stains.

It has been found that oil stains on concrete floors may be removed by using a mixture of one pound of oxalic acid in three gallons of water, with enough wheat flour added to make a paste that can be applied with a brush. Allow the application to remain for two days, and then remove it with clean water and a scrubbing brush. A second application may be necessary in stubborn cases.

Migration of Birds.

Until the acquisition of Alaska by the United States it was a wonder where certain wild fowl went when they migrated from temperature climes on the approach of summer, as well as snowbirds and other small species of the feathered tribe. It was afterward found that their habitat in summer was the waters of Alaska—the Yukon river and the lakes of that hyperborean region.

The Only One Lacking.

"Because," replied the discouraged far man, "if there was I'd have it."

What He Laid By.

"Have you laid by anything since you took up the profession of authorship?"

"Yes; about 300 manuscripts."

We fancy that everybody is thinking of us. But he is not; he is like us—he is thinking of himself.—Charles Reade.

The Electric Fan.

Back in the early eighties Dr. S. S. Wheeler, an electrical engineer of New York, was experimenting with a small electric motor. In the course of his experiments the doctor conceived the idea that steamboats might be run with electricity if the propellers could be directly connected to high speed electric motors, doing away with all the gears then in use in steam propulsion. With this idea in mind he had a small screw propeller constructed and fastened it to the armature shaft of his small motor. To his surprise, the experiment resulted in a fine breeze of cooling air which more than delighted the experimenter, for the day was decidedly hot. It is needless to add that the experiments with screw propellers ended right there, and the engineer took up the study of the electric fan, with the result that he soon perfected the device until it was a commercial success.

Mill Girls and Shawls.

The working women and girls of Lancashire and Yorkshire regard the shawl as a necessity, and especially is this the case in the colliery districts. A writer in an English monthly says:

"Domestic duties, performed in varying temperatures, on washing days and cleaning days, in the house or about the yard, are rendered safe under the protection of a shawl. The mill girl could scarcely get on without it. It shields her between the mill and home, winter and summer, in snow or rain. It is easily donned and doffed. It is the handiest of all articles of wearing apparel and, as made in England today, is moderate in cost. A warm soft shawl would save many a racking cough and stave off incipient pulmonary troubles. It is a tried and proved sanatarian."

Mabel's Odd Request.

One morning Mabel's mother gave her a bunch of grapes; when she got through eating them, she gave the stem back, saying: "Mother, put some more on here."

Smart Sayings.

Do not think that you are saying smart things when you say things that make other people smart.—Youth's Companion.

Respected by Somebody.

Each man is a hero and an oracle to somebody, and to that person whatever he says has an enchanted value.

As Time Passes.

Song of the Poilus.

"Madelon" is Sung by the French Soldiers.

"Tipperary" did its bit and passed on, but "Madelon" remains. This song of the French army seems to suit every occasion. It is a gay tune for marching men, a plaintive tune for nights, a restful one for the weary, and a defiant chant for those who are going back up there. If its sentiment is a little heavier than that of "Tipperary," it is better written, and the air rollicks, although it is hardly as easy as the old marching song of the British.

Ruth Hale has set the words in English, as follows:

For all the soldiers, on their holidays,
There is a place, just tucked in by the woods,
A house with ivy growing on the walls—
A cabaret — "Aux Tourbeurous" — the goods!
The girl who serves is young and sweet as love,
She's light as any butterfly in spring,
Her eyes have got a sparkle like her wine,
We call her Madelon—it's got a swing!
The Soldiers' Girl! She leads us all a dance!
She's only Madelon, but she's Romance!

When Madelon comes out to serve us drinks,
We always know she's coming by her song!
And every man, he tells his little tale,
And Madelon, she listens all day long.
Our Madelon is never too severe—
A kiss or two is nothing much to her—
She laughs us up to love and life and God—
Madelon! Madelon! Madelon!

We all have girls for keeps that wait at home
Who'll marry us when fighting time is done;
But they are far away—too far to tell
What happens in these days of cut-and-run.
We sigh away such days as best we can,
And pray for Time to bring us nearer home,
But tales like ours won't wait till then to tell—
We have to run and boast to Madelon.
We steal a kiss—she takes it all in play:
We dream she is that other—far away.

When Madelon comes out to serve us drinks
We always know she's coming by her song!
And every man, he tells his little tale,
And Madelon, she listens all day long.
Our Madelon is never too severe—
A kiss or two is nothing much to her—
She laughs us up to love and life and God—
Madelon! Madelon! Madelon!

A corp'ral with a feather in his cap
Went courting Madelon one summer's day,
And, mad with love, he swore she was superb,
And he would wed her any day she'd say.
But Madelon was not for any such—
She danced away and laughed: "My stars above!
Why, how could I consent to marry you,
When I have my whole regiment to love?
I could not choose just one and leave the rest.
I am the Soldiers' Girl—I like that best!"

When Madelon comes out to serve us drinks
We always know she's coming by her song!
And every man he tells his little tale,
And Madelon is never too severe—
A kiss or two is nothing much to her—
She laughs us up to love and life and God—
Madelon! Madelon! Madelon!

No officer in any army looks quite so natty as a French officer, but on the other hand a poilu has a perfect genius for shabbiness. The long horizon blue coat which the soldier wears winter and summer was apparently made to gather dust. This is not the dust of a day or a week which one sees on the back of the French soldier. He seems to carry with him the grime of a whole campaign. Perhaps of a whole war. That is why he looks a little weary, but he can still sing "Madelon."

During the Honeymoon.

"I weigh 130 pounds. How much do you weigh, Mr. Sweetey?"

"Together with my wife exactly 250 pounds."

"And you alone?"

"I don't know that. We are always weighed together."—Fliegende Blaetter.

Seeing Double.

He—Why did you fail to recognize me in the street today? She—I didn't see you. He—That's strange. I saw you twice. She—Oh, that probably accounts for it. I never notice a man when he is in that condition.—London Telegraph.

Politeness.

"Politeness pays."

"So they say. I think the profits run mostly to deferred dividends."—Pittsburgh Post.

Constancy of purpose is certainly one of the secrets of success.

With Fingers! Corns Lift Off

Doesn't hurt a bit to lift any corn or callus right off. Try it!

For a few cents you can get a small bottle of the magic drug freezone recently discovered by a Cincinnati man.

Just ask at any drug store for a small bottle of freezone. Apply a few drops upon a tender, aching corn or callus and instantly all soreness disappears and shortly you will find the corn or callus so loose that you lift it off with the fingers.

Just think! Not one bit of pain before applying freezone or afterwards. It doesn't even irritate the surrounding skin.

Hard corns, soft corns, or corns between the toes, also hardened calluses on bottom of feet, shrivel up and fall off without hurting a particle. It is almost magical.

Ladies! Keep a tiny bottle on the dresser and never let a corn or callus ache twice.

The Food System The Source of Life

Any Derangements of Liver or Kidneys That Interfere With Digestion and Assimilation of Food Rob and Deplete the Body.

St. Catharines, Ont., Jan. 15.—It matters not how good your appetite, how you relish your food, or how much you eat, so long as there is anything to interfere with proper digestion and assimilation of the food by the body, strength and vigour will gradually decline and weakness and debility take their place.

The most frequent cause of disordered digestion is sluggish action of the liver, kidneys, and bowels. The whole alimentary canal, through which the food passes on its way through the body, becomes choked and clogged, and the system is poisoned and diseased.

Dr. Chase's Kidney-Liver Pills have been wonderfully successful in exactly this class of disease, principally because they act directly on the kidneys, liver, and bowels, regulating and invigorating their action, and restoring them to health.

Mr. John Nayes, 224 Munro Street, Peterborough, Ont., states: Having used Dr. Chase's Kidney-Liver Pills with success, I can strongly recommend them. For considerable time I was a sufferer from kidney disease and constipation, and besides being tortured by the shooting pains through the back put up with the other annoying and often distressing symptoms of kidney disorders. Sometimes I would go three or four days without a motion of the bowels and could get no relief.

"After using a few boxes of Dr. Chase's Kidney-Liver Pills I am well again and feeling fine. This treatment seemed to be exactly what I needed, and promptly brought relief and cure."

Training Snipers.

A new device with which instruction in aiming a rifle can be given, without the use of ammunition, has recently been tried out in teaching recruits the use of firearms. It consists essentially of a wooden rod, sixteen inches long, with a metal end which is slipped on and fastened to the muzzle of the rifle. The outer end carries an arrangement in which miniature celluloid targets are placed. There are also screws for moving the target up or down and to the right or left. On this end, too, is a small dotting apparatus and a place for cards to be dotted by it. In learning to aim, the pupil rests his rifle on the instructor's shoulder and directs the latter to move the target as he, the pupil, deems to accord with proper aim. When the man aiming believes that the sights and bull's-eye are in proper alignment he calls out "mark," and the instructor, by means of a finger key, actuates the dotter. The latter makes a mark on the card which serves as a record of the aim.—Popular Mechanics.

Vegetable Crop Failed.

An account of the situation of the vegetable supply in Germany is given in the Deutsche Tageszeitung. The paper says:

"The reports on this year's vegetable crop are for the most part quite hopeless, and one need not wonder if prices remain high. In the south and west of Germany a favorable condition of things is in general reported; but in the chief producing districts in north, east, and middle Germany the prospect is very melancholy. Probably the worst reports are from Mecklenburg and Pomerania, where almost the majority of the cultivation contracts cannot be carried out, or at least can be carried out to only a small extent. In certain parts of Silesia and Brandenburg, where thunderstorms occurred at the right time, a medium harvest may perhaps be obtained."

ANOTHER AIR ATTACK MADE ON LONDON

THE ITALIANS LAUNCH VIOLENT OFFENSIVE

London Is Once Again Attacked By Planes Of The Enemy

Only Five or Six Machines Managed to Reach the City and Londoners Witnessed Exciting Machine Gun Battle Between British and German Flyers---Enemy Machine is Brought Down in Flames Over Essex.

A SUMMARY OF TO-DAY'S WAR CABLES

LONDON, January 29.—Forty-seven persons were killed and 169 injured in last night's air raids.

(Canadian Press Despatch.)

LONDON, January 29. — The official announcement of the air raids says: "Latest information shows two groups of raiders crossed the Essex coast and one group the Kent coast, simultaneously at about 8 p.m. The two former detachments proceeded towards London on parallel courses across Essex. The capital was approached from the east and northeast shortly after 9. Of the machines which crossed the Kent coast two dropped bombs in the Isles of Thanet and Sheppey. The remainder, crossing the Thames estuary also approached East London through Essex. Apparently about fifteen machines took part in these attacks of which four or five reached the capital and dropped bombs in various districts between 9 and 10 a.m. Some time after the first atack terminated other enemy airplanes crossed the Essex coast. Only one of the mreached London, which it entered from the north, bombs being dropped between 12:15 and 12:30. A number of machines of the Royal Flying Corps went up. Two of our scouts encountered enemy airplanes over Essex. After brief fighting at close range a raider took fire and fell in flames to the ground, 10,000 feet below. All three members of its crew were burned to death. Several other engagements with enemy machines were reported by our pilots, one of whom pursued a raider across the coast and fought a indecisive engagement over the sea. All our pilots returned safely. Reports of casualties will be published when the complete lists are received.

All but eight of the victims were killed or wounded in London. Material damage was not serious.

(By Webb Miller.)

(Special to The Toronto Star and The Peterborough Examiner.)

LONDON, January 29.—Fourteen men, seventeen women and sixteen children were killed in two air raids over London and the coast last night, according to Lord French's official report to-day. "Almost all of these were in London," the report stated. The material damage, the statement asserted, was not serious.

LONDON, January 29.—Londoners last night witnessed a great machine gun battle between one German and several British airplanes high over the city. Flashing from the spitting guns were visible in the heavens and the rat-a-tat of the fire was plainly heard. Occasionally the machines themselves could be seen against the moon.

Meanwhile a violent and intermittent barrage circled the whole city. The fight in the sky seemed to continue a long while. The raider appeared in trouble and it was noted he descended considerably, but he fled away safely with many machines in pursuit. Eventually he reached the coast and was swallowed up in the night.

Many of the German raiders arrived over the coast in two raids, but few of the squadrons penetrated as far as London. It was five hours before the "all clear signal was sounded throughout the city.

"Fifteen machines participated in last night's raids," Lord French, Commander-in-Chief of Home Defences, reported to-day. "In the first attack four or five reached London and dropped bombs. In the latter attack one reached London and dropped bombs. A number of the Royal Flying Corps engaged the enemy. Two fought and fired on a raider at 10,000 feet above Essex, the enemy machine faling in flames. Its crew of three were burned."

(Canadian Press Despatch.)

LONDON, January 29.—Attacks by enemy airmen on London last night and early to-day lasted intermittently for nearly five hours, and for two hours there was heavy and almost continuous gunfire. Members of the Royal Geographical Society with many ladies in the large audience, were assembled to hear a speech by General Smuts. Sir Thomas Holdich, President, announced that notice had been received of an air raid and that the police had informed him the audience would be safe if they went to the basement of the building. There were loud cries of "carry on" and the audience remained in the hall. The majority of theatres went through with their performances with decreased audiences. The raid was carried out by a considerable number of airplanes which followed the familiar tactics of attacking in relays. As far as could be seen not more than three or four airplanes broke thoughr the London defences. The invaders were attacked by members of the British machines.

AMSTERDAM, January 29.—A denial that Count Czernin, the Austro-Hungarian Foreign Minister, sent a copy of his recent outline of peace aims to President Wilson prior to speaking, was made by the Berlin Tageblatt to-day.

Several Berlin newspapers had previously carried such a report.

The Tageblatt declared that Austro-Hungarian Socialists requested Czernin to do this, but he refused on the ground that the American President would learn of the offer from the newspapers.

(Canadian Press Despatch.)

LONDON, January 29.—Hostile artillery was active during the day in the neighbourhood of Havricourt and northeast of Ypres, says the official statement from British Headquarters last night. Nothing further of special interest.

(Canadian Press Despatch.)

LONDON, January 29.—To-day's official said: A hostile raiding party was driven off during the night in the neighbourhood of Arleux-en-Geohelle. Hostile artillery showed great activity in the Monchy Le Preux sector. One of our patrols northeast of Ypres has not returned.

(Special to The Toronto Star and The Peterborough Examiner.)

LONDON, January 29.—Russia is in the grip of an epidemic of diseases as the result of malnutrition, according to despatches to the Times.

All Russians have been warned of the necessity for careful sanitation. Spotted and gastric typhus fever and small-pox are prevalent. The present disorganization of the public health service and kindred institutions is increasing the danger.

(Canadian Press Despatch.)

AMSTERDAM, January 29.—The strike in Berlin, announced for Monday in leaflets distributed at the end of last week, did not materialize, according to a despatch from the German capital. The trades unions refused to co-operate, and only in a few sections did the factory workmen strike.

NO ANNEXATIONIST PEACE FOR RUSSIA

(Special to the Toronto Star and the Peterborough Examiner.)

(By Joseph Shaplen.)

PETROGRAD, Jan. 29. — "We will never conclude an annexationist, imperialistic peace," was the message to the pan Soviet Congress delivered to-day by Foreign Minister Trotsky.

Congress was also advised by an official statement from the Smolny Institute that twenty regiments of Don Cossacks had joined a revolution against Gen. Kaledine, Hetman of the Cossacks.

DOUBLE ACTIVITY IN AIR DURING THE COMING YEAR

Raoul Lufberry Prophesies Machines Travelling Two and Half Miles a Minute and Systematic Raids on German Munition Works

MANY PITCHED BATTLES

(Special to the Toronto Star and the Peterborough Examiner).

(By W. S. Forrest).

WITH THE FRENCH ARMIES IN THE FIELD, Jan. 29. — Aeroplanes capable of a speed of two and a half miles a minute, pitched battles between great numbers of machines on a side, systematic Allied air raiding of Germany's great munition making centres hitherto almost immune, and, generally, double the air activity of the past year. These are some of the things the French, under Lieut. (now Major in the American Army) Raoul Lufberry, of Wallingford, Conn., sees for the coming twelve months in the air.

He does not believe that aircraft will finish the war.

"Heavy guns and trained men will put the finishing touch to it," he declared, "but aviation in all its branches will undoubtedly play its big role, and certainly a larger role than ever before during the coming year. Personally, I don't look for any startling new inventions. We will have a steady and rapid improvement of existing material. The final outcome is, of course, difficult to forcast, though it is certain that the next few months will see faster and more powerful aeroplanes on both sides. It would not surprise me if we were able to fly at least 145 miles an hour by spring and 155 miles before the end of the year, and I mean average flying at those speeds, and not occasional spurts."

NEUTRALIZING THE STRAIN.

In predicting a speed of more than two miles per minute in the future, Lufberry related that the aviators' latest equipment is a mask neutralizing the tremendous strain which high speed in the air places on the heart and lungs.

"Few land battles in the future will be without important air co-operation on both sides. The larger the battle the more machines engaged above it," the flyer continued. "This means big clashes in the air, more machines, generally as air effectives increase, and they are increasing feverishly on both sides. The fighting over the lines will not only be far more intense than last year, and between speedier and more powerful machines, but between increasingly greater numbers and larger groups.

RAIDS ON ENEMY.

"Constant night bombardments with large fleets of Allied machines on enemy munition making centres are not only now possible, but promise to have an important effect on the outcome of the war. Groups of heavily armed bombing planes, each

Bolsheviki Leaders Leave For Brest-Litovsk—Trotsky Refuses to Give Guarantee That He Would Not Sign Separate Peace

A MINORITY PROTEST

Canadian Press Despatch:

PETROGRAD, Jan. 29. — Leon Trosky and M. Kamenoff left Petrograd for Brest-Litovsk to resume the peace negotiations. Congress of Workmen's and Soldiers' Delegates, while deploring the imperialistic tenor of German peace terms, approved all actions of the Russian delegation and charged the Government continue negotiations. The Congress adopted a resolution to this effect after a minority, made up of Minimalists and Social Revolutionists had sought vainly to persuade the adoption of a policy flatly against a separate peace. During the debate Trotsky declared he could not give the guarantee that he would not sign a separate peace, saying: "To call a separate peace a disgrace is blasphemy in the sight of blood-covered Europe."

Martin, a Canadian Mohawk Indian, who has been in Erie county jail since November, pending prosecution on a charge of bringing a seventeen year old girl into the United States for immoral purposes, will be deported, according to an order of the Immigration Department to-day. He was treated as a federal prisoner. It is alleged he persuaded the girl to go to a carnival that he was promoting. They crossed the border at Niagara Falls, and her condition became known when they reached Erie. Martin says that his home is in Hagersville, Canada.

Ontario Government To Recruit An Army For Work On Farms

Big Campaign to Be Inaugurated in the Near Future For Speeding Up of Farm Production--Recruiting Stations Are to Be Opened in Toronto to Secure Needed Help.

USE RETURNED MEN

Special to The Examiner:

TORONTO, Jan. 29.— A big campaign will likely soon be inaugurated by the Ontario government for the speeding up of farm production during the year. Recruiting stations are to be placed throughout the city where men who for some reason or other are unable to serve at the front, may serve at home by increasing food production.

It is the belief of government officials that as far as Ontario is concerned it may not be necessary to draft men to serve on the farms. If the draft method is decided upon by the Dominion government the volunteer system which is being planned by the Provincial government may be called off, but in the meantime arrangements are being carried out towards perfecting a plan whereby all those who desire to enroll for service at home may have a chance to sign up.

START IN TORONTO.

The campaign will likely be started in Toronto, and if it proves to be a success here it will be extended to other large centres in the province. In prominent places throughout the city recruiting stations will be opened in charge of returned soldiers, but in this case, instead of recruiting for the khaki clad army they will be recruiting the tillers of the soil. It is believed that the present food crisis and the imminent peril of the situation will be a sufficient inducement for the man who wants to render service to sign up. He will be asked to state how long he is willing to serve on the farm, beginning April 1st.

SPECIAL BADGES.

To those who enlist in the army of food producers special badges of recognition will be given. These will most likely be worn on the arm and will distinguish the men who are rendering service from those who are not.

The officials of the Great War Veterans' Association figure that five thousand soldiers can be taken from the convalescent homes and render full service on the farms. They will not only receive their soldiers pay in addition to the pay they are to receive from the farmer, but they will hasten their own convalescence at the same time.

WILL RESIST ANY FURTHER CALL ON COUNTRY'S MAN POWER

Messey Engineers and Shipbuilding Unions Decide Upon This Step Unless Government Adopts the Labour Party's War Aims

ONLY TWO DISSENTED

Canadian Press Despatch:

LIVERPOOL, Jan. 29.—The Mersey District Federation of Engineering and Shipbuilding Trades, at a meeting attended by 4,000 members, last night, adopted a resolution calling for all possible resistance to any further call upon the country's manpower, unless the Government immediately declares its willingness to adopt the Labour Party's war aims, promises to fanilitate the international workers' conference, and agrees to the conscription of wealth. There were only two dissenting votes. Sir Auckland Geddes, Director of National Service, was invited to attend, and surprised the meeting By accepting the invitation. He made a long speech, and was questioned for two hours, receiving an ovation when he concluded.

Coal Situation Worse Than Ever In New York

Canadian Press Despatch:

NEW YORK, Jan. 29.—After yesterday's snow and sleet storm, New York found its coal situation as threatening as ever, and with more snow promised, officials in charge of the situation are promptly pessimistic. Huge snow drifts on all lines entering the city have obstructed the freight traffic. Trucking was almost impossible in yesterday's storm, and the ice blockade in the harbour is the worst in thirty years.

Two Killed At Texas Camp In Air Accident

Canadian Press Despatch:

FORT WORTH, Texas, Jan. 29.— Lieut. W. S. MacDonald, and Cadet W. J. King were instantly killed, Lieut. J. J. Hickey probably fatally injured, and Cadet Simpson seriously hurt, in an airplane collision yesterday. All came here from Toronto.

M. H. A. Players in Police Court this Morning

Canadian Press Despatch:

TORONTO, Jan. 29.—Sad Joe Hall of the Canadians and Alf. Skinner of the Torontos, who roughed in a hockey match here last night and were arrested, appeared in the Police Court this morning, and Magistrate Ellis, after hearing the argument, discharged them on remand. The players left the court smiling, arm in arm.

COMPLICATION OVER PROTESTS UNDER THE NEW ELECTION ACT

Time Limit For Filing Protests Was Not Extended and Therefore Are Precluded Because No Member Can Be Returned Until Soldier Vote is Counted

A UNIQUE SITUATION

(Special to the Toronto Star and the Peterborough Examiner).

OTTAWA, Jan. 29.—Authorities on Federal franchise matters here are of the opinion that the recent general election furnishes a somewhat unique situation, in that the possibility of protesting the election of any member is precluded by circumstances arising out of the soldiers' vote. It appears that a protest has already been filed against the election of H. A. Charlton, the Liberal-Unionist in Norfolk, but while Mr. Charlton received a majority of the votes counted on December 17, he has not yet been returned, and will not be until after the soldiers' votes have been counted and tabulated some time toward the middle of next month, so that technically, there is nobody against whose election to file the protest since nobody has yet been selected.

Under the Controverted Election Act it is provided that protests have to be filed forty days after polling. No special provision for the extension of this period was made last session, though it was known that a month at least would elapse between polling day and the final count of the soldiers' vote. After that a period could elapse before members were officially returned.

According to the provision of the Controverted Election Act, the period allowed for the filing of protests expired on January 26 last, and it will be several weeks yet before anyone is officially returned with the exception of those elected by acclamation. It would therefore be impossible to file protests against any but acclaimed candidates, because they are the only ones so far returned. It has been suggested that some provision might be made by an Order-in-Council under the War Measures Act to meet this unique situation, but it is not at all clear that even that expansive and widely applicable measure could be employed for such a purpose unless such action might be interpreted as being for the promotion of "peace, order and good will" within the Dominion.

No Effect On Local Market

Canadian Packers Discount Accuracy of Report of Meat Shortage

Special to the Examiner:

TORONTO, Jan. 29.—Local packers are inclined to discount the accuracy of a Washington report that transportation difficulties have caused a meat shortage in the Eastern States. Even if the report were true, they agree, it would have absolutely no effect upon the Canadian market, because we are independent of American sources for our meat supplies.

RAILWAYS ARE CLEAR

Situation is Much Improved To-day

Canadian Press Despatch:

TORONTO, Jan. 29.—To-day is clear and calm, with ideal winter temperature, and the weather conditions east and west are reported similar to those here. With the cessation of the snowfall and the high wind of early yesterday, and with ceaseless work by track gangs, all routes out of Toronto are clear. Trains are running, although somewhat behind time, to Ottawa, Montreal, Detroit, and the Suspension Bridge. All branch lines are also reported open. For the present, therefore, there is a decided improvement in the situation.

"Peterborough Presents Possibilities Unsurpassed."

TUESDAY, JAN. 29, 1918

PROMPT'S THE WORD.

At last night's meeting of the Railway Committee of the City Council, Mr. E. G. Patterson, general superintendent of the Canadian General Electric Company, made application in the interests of the company for permission to use the railway sidings into the company's yards between the hours of seven o'clock in the morning and six o'clock in the evening.

There is no doubt that favourably considering this application the committee and Council will be interpreting the spirit of the general generous attitude of the citizens towards our manufacuring industries. The fact that the company is unable to so use these railway sidings now, must be to its distinct disadvantage in regard to the speedy receipt of raw material and the convenient shipping of finished products. Any such local disadvantage, added to the general difficulties of transportation, should be promptly remedied in order that our manufacturing plants may operate to the best advantage.

The Canadian General Electric Company is Peterborough's biggest manufacturing concern. It is no secret that the management are very favourable to Peterborough in the matter of proposed extensions, of which proof consists in the repeated extensions of, and additions to, the company's plant and buildings, and the large and steady growth of the company's manufacturing capacity. The Canadian General Electric Works in Peterborough are far different from what they were when first established.

It is necessary that any plants, to be in a position to meet the keen competition of the times, must not be hampered or retarded in any sense, especially in the viral matter of transportation facilities.

The application before the Railway Committee is a seriously important one for the company, and through its large association with our interests, to the city itself, and prompt action in dealing with it favourably, naturally becomes a duty of the Council.

Meatless and wheatless days are bad enough, but trainless days are far-reaching disturbances of industrial, commercial, and domestic interests.

A GOOD WORD FOR MR. HANNA.

The retirement of Food Controller Hanna gives rise to various opinions. Those who have made him the butt of many a weak joke, and those who have assailed him with many attacks, will think that his retirement doesn't much matter—"he wasn't any good, anyway." But to the thoughtful, the observant, who did not recognize as Mr. Hanna's chief duty, the reduction of food prices and the fixing of food prices, but national saving of food, will see that he has accomplished much.

In the first place he broke the ground—he was the first food controller appointed by any of the allied nations. He was appointed before Lord Rhondda of Britain, or Hoover of the United States. He assumed his office from a sense of public duty—without salary—and he had to face very difficult task. He had no precedents; he had to feel his way, and it was no surprise that he did not at once strike his pace. He may have been a little lavish in his detailed requirements, and have failed to exert enough direct authority; but in whatever other way he may have failed to meet unsophisticated expectation, he is to be credited with having accomplished the most important work in food saving, the educational work. That is the most necessary. He has led many indifferent householders to think and realize the need of economy, of saving to increase the bulk of exportable foods.

In this regard he has done a most important work, the most important, perhaps; for unless the people are educated in thrift and inspired to cooperate individually and nationally with a food controller, he will fail to accomplish the best, which is not reduction of prices, but conservation of food.

The great obstacle to this is the national propensity to waste food. If Mr. Hanna's educational propaganda has helped check this tendency and aroused popular attention, and more or less popular acquiescence, he has not only done a good work by itself, but has paved the way for the new Controller to apply the more stringent methods, he is credited with favouring.

Mr. Hanna preached the gospel of the duty and the wisdom of saving food; Mr. Thompson has now to build upon Mr. Hanna's foundation—make the people do what Mr. Hanna taught and asked them to do. The public have had fair warning and if they incur the penalty of neglect to discharge the most urgent and important duty of the hour—save food for export—they have only themselves to blame if the heavy hand of Mr. H. B. Thompson, the new Food Controller, falls upon them.

The war and its wants have effaced the economic distinction between city and country. The country can't produce the larger food supply demanded without the help of labour from the towns and cities.

GREATER PRODUCTION.

"I told you so," is generally a futile and exasperating form of retort, but it sometimes is justifiably apropos; when tremendous interests are involved. Those who insist on greater production as a national duty—a duty of the government, as well as of the people—and have been laughed at for their patriotic interest in war-winning measures, are justified in saying, "I told you so," when the government itself, or its apologists tardily recognizes the need and eminent authorities endorse what has been clamoured for.

Hon. George Langley, Minister of Municipal Affairs in the Saskatchewan government, and one of the recognized leaders of the organized farmers of the province, has written a very important letter to the Regina Leader, which contains definite proposals, somethings on the lines The Examiner has advocated for largely meeting the national and Empire problem of greater production of wheat.

For months and months farmers have been bombarded with reminders of the duty of producing to the limit of their powers and resources. We know the farmers will do their best; but the best won't be enough, and their efforts must be supplemented. The government, which has, by various agencies, been spurring the jaded farmer to put forth bigger efforts, should. Hon. Mr. Langley thinks, take a little of their own advice.

Hon. Mr. Langley's scheme is a large one, but not too large for the government with the powers it possesses. His scheme will involve the creation of efficient organization, the provision of tractor machinery, the mobilization of thousands of men, and the expenditure of a good deal of money. His scheme is a large one; but Canada, which has done so much—almost accomplished the impossible—should be equal to providing what is a corollary of the great things we have accomplished in waging the war. What we have done will be largely wasted if we do not do more; if we do do what we can do, not easily, perhaps, but by throwing into action, into effect, our national capabilities, we shall accomplish a service involving not only the sustenance, but even the very life of millions of our fellow subjects, and our comrades in this war.

Hon. Mr. Langley points out that there are twenty millions of acres of first rate wheat lands in the Northwest now lying idle, of which eleven millions alone are in Saskatchewan. He asserts that from these, one million could be secured by the government convenient to transportation facilities, and that with proper organization and a little enterprise these lands could be made to produce at the average rate, some fifteen or twenty millions of bushels of wheat, to be added to increased production by the ordinary methods and by the amount saved by control of wheat foods.

Hon. Mr. Langley who, it is necessary to remember, is a practical man, says that it would require about 3,000 gasoline tractor ploughs to break up a million acres during the months May, June and July. He says that the necessary labour could be secured, and he makes no difficulty of a necessary supply of gasoline. About 20,000 men would be needed in this scheme, and he shows that they can be secured by proper organization—something like military organization. In this connection it seems that farm battalions might be organized under military discipline from the third and fourth class men enrolled under the Military Service Act.

Hon. Mr. Langley's scheme may seem Utopian or impracticable; but why should it be more so than any other military achievement. When Britain provides the costly tanks by the thousands, surely Canada would be equal to assembling the number of tractors; and since Canada has enrolled and equipped and put into fighting trim some four hundred well equipped fighting soldiers, surely it is possible for the government, with its military experience, and its splendid military record of the past, to provide the 20,000 men Mr. Langley says are necessary to carry out his magnificent scheme of greater production. Hon. J. A. Calder, the Minister of Agriculture, in the new government, has declared that the government "will move in a big and aggressive way." This is a grand generality but it furnishes encouragement to hope that the government will find aggressive action in carrying out something like this specific, definite and practical scheme, suggested and, moreover, virtually provided for, by Hon. Mr. Langley.

We and the government must recognize and realize the fact that food provision at this stage of the war is as necessary as, if not more necessary than, the provision of fighting men—in fact the two go together as logically and necessarily as a rifle and its ammunition.

Fight or farm, is the slogan of the Canadian Food Bulletin; do both is the duty of every able men, and every man, woman and child, respectively.

The Australian Conscription Crisis

The political affairs of our sister Commonwealth, interesting at all times, are particularly so just now because Australia, like Canada, has been much disturbed by the question of military conscription. Labour interests have been much more prominent in Australia than here. The Labour party has had a large voice, and usually a prevailing voice, in the Commonwealth for some years. Mr. Hughes was a Labour leader, who became premier after Mr. Andrew Fisher retired to the ease of the High Commissionership in London. Mr. Hughes' support of conscription led to a break with the Labour organization, but he received enough support from other groups to enable him to form a kind of Union government, and to retain office. Twice Australia has been asked to decide the question of conscription by a referendum, and twice the people have rejected the conscription proposals. The electors apparently made distinctions in their own minds between men and things. They had condemned conscription, yet they had supported the Hughes government, which was responsible for the conscription law. In the case of the recent referendum contest, Mr. Hughes, in supporting conscription, said that if the law were not supported he would deem it his duty to resign, and leave to his opponents the responsibility of carrying on the affairs of government. Conscription having been defeated on the referendum Mr. Hughes thereupon resigned, and the Governor called on Mr. Tudor, the leader of the Opposition, to form a government. The despatches are not clear as to what part Mr. Tudor has played. It would seem, however, that when faced by the responsibilities of office he shrank from them. He had claimed that Australia would, by further efforts under the voluntary system, be able to raise all the men needed, but apparently he was not willing to put his theory to the test. With some ground he might have asked the Governor to grant him a dissolution of Parliament. Whether he made such a request is not stated. It appears however, that Mr. Tudor has failed to form a cabinet, that Mr. Hughes and his colleagues have been asked by the Governor to resume office, and that Parliament has again voted confidence in the Hughes Cabinet. The situation is an embarrassing one for Mr. Hughes. He has no faith in the raising of any considerable number of additional men by the voluntary system. But conscription having been twice distinctly condemned by the popular vote, the Premier can hardly be expected to proceed to enact a new conscription law. The development of events will be watched with much interest.

Treat 'Em Gently

Don't let your angry passions rise
And keep your temper tamed;
Be gentle with all Prussian spies
And make them feel ashamed.

If cunningly a spy destroys
A powder magazine,
Do not forget boys will be boys,
And keep your mind serene.

To kill a spy would be a sin;
Such methods we deplore;
We must remember we are in
A gentlemanly war.

Let dogs delight to bark and bite,
But we must have more sense,
And always strive to be polite
And never give offence.

Give good for evil to the spy,
Heap coals upon his head,
And we'll be happy bye and bye—
And maybe we'll be dead.

We realize it's human nature to be skeptical. We are a race of unbelievers. Our forefathers would scarcely have believed that to-day express trains would cross the prairies of our country where they used to travel in prairie schooners; that electric lights would supersede candles, or automobiles oxen; that people would fly like birds. But we of 1918 have seen and must believe. Seeing is believing, Come in and see for yourself.

The regular meeting of the Normal School Literary Society was held on Monday afternoon, 27th January.

The subject for discussion was that of the students' "At Home." It was decided that it be held the evening of 8th February, and be less formal than usual. Final arrangements were made regarding the committees, and everything is under way to make it a huge success.

DON'T BE DYSPEPTIC.

The dyspeptic has thought only of the stomach when the real source of trouble is the Liver, Kidneys and Bowels. Dr. Chase's Kidney-Liver Pills thoroughly cleanse and purify the digestive and excretory system and in this way put the organs of digestion into splendid working condition. A little patient urging on of the organs when ailing will restore the habit of healthful digestion.

EVERYDAY READING.

The only amarathine flow'r on earth
Is virtue; th' only lasting treasure, truth.
But what is truth? 'Twas Pilate's question put
To Truth itself, that deigned him no reply.
And wherefore? Will not God impart His light
To them that ask it? Freely—'tis His joy,
His glory, and His nature to impart.
But to the proud, uncandid, insincere,
Or negligent inquirer, not a spark.
What pearl is it, that rich men cannot buy,
That learning is too proud to gather up;
But which the poor, and despised of all,
Seek and obtain, and often find unsought;
Tell me—and I will tell thee what is truth.

During the year five of the old people died, three left the institution and eleven were admitted, some of them being returned inmates

The usual care as a result of old age and infirmities had to be administered and at the close of the year we found some of the old inmates giving evidence of nearing the end. Such must be expected considering the advanced age of the majority.

Considerable repairs were necessary throughout the year, and have been attended to.

We found the inmates apparently contented, save some weak-minded ones who are not responsible.

The stock is in good condition and everything appears to be well looked after

OUTLOOK GOOD FOR AUTOMOBILES

The President of one of the largest Motor Car Comanies has made the following statement for publication:

"The 1918 outlook, from the standpoint of motor car manufacturers, is not dark. On the contrary, in view of existing conditions it is most encouraging.

"With a frank statement from United States Government leaders to the effect that there is no probability of a serious curtailment of automobile production for months to come, at least, or of the supply of gasoline for private use, any clouds which may have hung over rapidly dispelled.

"As the situation stands now, the individual who wants to buy a new car can most conscientiously go ahead and make the purchase without in any way either handicapping the war ambitions of the government or interfering with the praise worthy tendency toward conservation. That is, he can do so, if he is in a financial position to afford the expenditure, and there is every reason to believe that there will be more persons with ample means for owning cars next year than ever before. Each day additional millions are being thrown into circulation and those millions eventually find their way to the purses of prospective buyers of motor cars as well as all other classes."

MISS DILLINGHAM

Last evening Miss Lillian Dillingham delighted a large audience in St. Paul's Presbyterian church with the excellence of her song numbers, punctuated by touching heart stories of the western battle front. The big church was filled to capacity when Miss Dillingham emerged from a small door at the side of the platform accompanied by Mrs. John Allan, who presided at the meeting. The lady members of the choir dressed in white costumes formed a guard of honour which was gracefully acknowledged by Miss Dillingham. Following the singing of the National Anthem, Mrs. Allan gave a brief address in which she referred to the work of Miss Dillingham on the western front, where the gifted singer formed a party of entertainers who gave several hundred concerts for the benefit of the boys in the hospital, rest camps, training points and other places where a khaki clad audience was to be found.

Miss Dillingham opened a delightful programme with a few stories of the work among the soldiers and also paid a tribute to the Y.M.C.A. This was followed by several song numbers of the same character that delighted and cheered the boys at the front and in many instances was the means of arousing them from a spirit of hopelessness, which had the effect of making speedy recuperation possible after all other methods failed.

Miss Dillingham has a charming personality. She possesses a well developed voice and her exceptional ability found ample scope in the eight or ten numbers which she contributed last evening, concluding with "Annie Laurie" by request. At the conclusion of the song numbers Miss Dillingham related many touching incidents concerning her work among the soldiers. On one occasion she sang to a khaki clad audience of eight thousand men grouped together in a valley and on the same evening made a similar effort in the interests of two thousand men as they marched away for a turn in the trenches, many of them never to return. "You don't know how you have helped us Miss" was the oft repeated ejaculation of the men as they marched away, while the tune of some old familiar hymn reverberated over the valley.

"Unmentioned in despatches," was the concluding contribution of Miss Dillingham. It was an eulogy to the many hundreds of men whose bravery pass unnoticed in the heat of battle and probably outnumber those to whom awards are made. It was a splendid effort and a fitting conclusion to a very complete and acceptable programme.

MEETING OF VESTRY OF ST. JOHN'S CHURCH

There was an unusually large attendance at the Vestry meeting of St. John's Church last night, when the usual reports of last year's work were presented. The Rector, Rev. Canon Davidson was in the chair.

The Warden's report for the nine months ending December 31st, presented by Dr. W. T. Halloway, showed that in spite of the upset condition of the parish and the difficulty arising out of the absence of the Rector and the impossibility to secure a permanent supply, the finances had been maintained but for parochial purposes and for the mission cause. In fact the missionary appropriation had been exceeded.

The report showed that $100.00 had been granted to the Halifax sufferers within a few hours of the disaster, and that other important work had been undertaken.

Warden W. F. Johnston, in seconding the report, thanked the members of the congregation for their support remarking that the spirit of the work had been maintained despite all difficulties.

The annual report of the Choir read by Mrs. R. J. Devey in the absence of Mr. Devey showed a most gratifying state of affairs The large and well trained choir, under the direction of Mr. Devey, had shown great improvement and done splendid work during the year. The annual outing given by the congregation, had been greatly enjoyed. The esprit de corps of the choir was exceedingly good and the members of the choir had not only led in the singing, but were enthusiastic in their attitude towards the general work of the Church.

Mr. W. F. Johnston and other speakers enthusiastically referred to the work of the choir.

The Sunday School report presented by Mr. W. H. Walkey, showed that good work had been done. Blinds and fixtures provided by Mr. A. W. Turner, had allowed the lantern to be used in the afternoon, and considerable educational work had been accomplished thereby. Many series of instructive pictures had been shown. The lantern was also being used for occasional services in the church.

A hearty vote of thanks was passed to the teachers.

After consulting with the retiring Wardens Canon Davidson announced that Dr. G. S. Cameron was his nominee for Warden, and Mr. J. A. Aylmer was enthusiastically elected as People's Warden.

The Wardens and retiring Wardens will be a committee to select the Advisory Board and the sidesmen and ushers.

Some discussion took place on the proposal to make the red end of the duplex envelope include all diocesian collections. Finally it was agreed, on motion of Mr. Kitely, to leave the matter to the new Advisory Board.

Mr. Robert Fair referred to the benefaction St. John's Church had enjoyed from the late Major George Bennett, and the late Dr. Burnham. It was announced that memorial tablets will be erected in the Church.

The actions of last night's meeting will be legalised and lay delegates appointed at a meeting on Easter Monday evening.

Double Activity In Air, etc.

carrying more than a ton of high explosives, can raid the most important German munitions towns and be practically immune from attack in the air. In the darkness they can steer by compass, launch their bombs and turn back homeward.

Smaller and faster airplanes are practically helpless in the darkness against big heavily armed raiders. The latter have a fixed object, that of dropping bombs, as they pass over their targets; the former are on the hunt, and it is no secret they are at an extreme disadvantage with their light armament against the more numerous guns of the larger machines.

"It is common knowledge that most German munition centres are systematically laid out in blocks, covering hundreds of acres, they present targets not easy to miss, even from a high altitude.

"Of course the Germans will make similar raids, but they will not have the advantage of finding Allied munition works built in the form of vast aerial targets. They would have to swoop low, where anti-aircraft guns can get them.

"Unless the Germans find some new way of protecting their shell factories, they are due for a very uncomfortable time."

LONDON IN ITS FOURTH YEAR OF WAR

A Fine Sunday Afternoon

All manner of pleasing, fine Sunday afternoon thoughts engrossed me as I strolled along the Mall, and through the Admiralty Arch into Trafalgar Square. I stopped to admire the fine equestrian statue of Charles I., still wearing his head, poor gentleman, quite in defiance of historic accuracy. How tactful it was of the authorities to set up Cromwell's statue out of sight beyond the far end of Whitehall. He and poor Charles never got on together.

Among the colossal lions at the base of Nelson's Column there seemed to be a committee holding a meeting. There generally is, you know, on a fine Sunday afternoon. Crossing the roadways, alert and hopeful that I would not get in the way of swishing motor cars, I reached the Forum Britannicum without being at all killed. The crowd impressed me as specially clean and well dressed, and most of the men in civilian clothes were wearing the silver badge. That honour is only granted to disabled soldiers and seamen.

I turned into the Strand. This olden highway was once a Roman suburb. Then in the Middle Ages it was a narrow mews connecting the stable yards for a mile or so of riverside palaces. It widened out into a main street of modern London, at times the professional way for gorgeous pageants, but in its working dress a resort for visitors to the town. All races of mankind were represented in the traffic and on the day of the declaration of war one of its quaintest episodes was a mob of destitute American millionaires who could not get their cheques cashed or find means of escape to their homes. The old-time traffic was always most amusing because it included not only the fine adventurers of England, but also the crooks, confidence men, swell-mobsmen, sneak thieves, and international spies. The private inquiry offices were here, the Police Institute round the corner, the Commissionaires' Headquarters up an alley, and detectives fairly swarmed.

The Strand is still a street of theatres and hotels, outfitting shops for visitors, eating houses, but the criminals and the detectives are in the Army now. The visitors are soldiers from the forces overseas, and seamen on leave from the Fleet, nurses, officers from the Armies of the Alliance, American Sammies and bluejackets—aye, and a-many wounded. Most of the people are in uniform, while almost every civilian has a badge to indicate War Service. You will see overstrain in some faces, the haunted eyes of shell-shock, the fatigue from desperately hard civilian work; but not in a day's watching the grotesque selfishness, the shifty dishonesty, the malign intrigue, or the bestial vice which used to be so common. Men are more manly, women more womanly now.

Of recent years the Dominions and their several states or provinces have put up buildings or rented shops in the Strand to advertise their states. These line the way on either hand so that one sees the minerals, fruit and grain, and portly vegetables, pictures of cities and crowded harbours of factories, and streets in all an Exhibition of the Empire. The shops may be almost empty of staff, but in front of them one sees Canadian, Australian, Africander, or New Zealand or Newfoundland soldiers, explaining things to the discharged men and the wounded; unpaid agents, missionaries, each for his own wholesome and thriving country.

There are few streets of such inspiring beauty and varied interest as this main thoroughfare of the British capital. The airy loggia of the Gaiety, Somerset House, one of the noblest buildings of modern times, the island churches in the highway, the grave, spired heights of the Law Courts, the byway glimpses of the Thames and the Surrey hills, make one forget the crowds, the urgent traffic, and catch out of the air a momentary sense of London's restful grandeur. Here is the throbbing heart of a people, not altogether given to sordid business, but widening the ways of life, and warring to the death against Phillip II., Napoleon the Great, or Wilhelm, or any other menace to human freedom.

PETERBOROUGH JUNIORS TO CLASH WITH OSHAWA

The Peterborough Juniors are almost certain to clash with their old rivals, the Oshawa team, in the second round of the Junior O. H. A. series, and the battle should be a memorable one. Oshawa have won their group from Whitby, Cobourg, and Port Hope, although they have one game left to play meeting Port Hope in the latter town to-morrow night. The Oshawa aggregation have nearly all of last year's team left, although in the lost of Rowden they are this year without the services of their former star player. They still, however have Goal-keeper Smith, Osborne, Swinyard, Venini and other last year's players, and they will be worthy opponents for the Petes Oshawa won both games with the Petes last year, winning by one goal at Oshawa and by the same margin here. Murray, Bartley and Cherrett are left of the seven which represented Peterborough in those games

FARMERS SEEKING EXEMPTION MUST OBTAIN FROM JUSTICE DUFF PERMISSION TO APPEAL

New instructions have been received from Ottawa by ex-Warden Brown and Mr. Robert Knox, who were appointed to represent the interests of the farmers of this county in their appeals for exemption from military service. Passing over the muddle that the County Council endeavoured to clear up in their visit to the Capital last week, advice has come from the office of Hon. Justice Duff, Central Appeal Judge, that the rural applicants for exemption must first petition him for permission to appeal. Hence the 120 young farmers of Peterborough county who had previously filed their claims with Mr. Brown and Mr. Knox are now required to forward to them as soon as possible their respective serial numbers with their names and addresses. This is the preliminary move, and each of the 120 eligibles are urged to write or telephone this information to the Court House this week if possible.

The list of names will then be sent to Justice Duff, who will notify by letter those men who are granted permission to appeal. When this consent has been announced applicants for exemption who are successful up to this stage must make sworn affidavits that the grounds upon which they base their claims are true. Messrs. Brown and Knox will then take these statements to Ottawa and present them to the Central Appeal Judge.

The first step is at present the most urgent one, and the farmers who are subject to draft should be impressed with the importance of sending their serial numbers, names and addresses to Messrs. Knox and Brown this week. Most of this information is already on record, but it is desired that none of the agriculturists shall be overlooked.

Ald. Edgar Has Plan To Avoid Big Tax Rate

In an effort to avoid a considerable increase in this year's tax rate, which will surely follow the Council's plan of raising 360,000 for the Patriotic Fund in this year's taxes, Ald. Edgar has prepared a scheme which he feels will meet with general approval from the ratepayers.

To raise this sum in one year by taxation would require 4 1-2 mills on the rate. If the debentures were spread over five years the annual tax rate required to provide for it would be 1.08 mills. Hence, the primary and principal object of Ald. Edgar's proposal is directly achieved in the circumvention of a heavy Patriotic Fund rate this year. Instead of 4 1-2 mills for 1918, the rate would be 1.08.

These debentures need not be issued for a few months, but the Council might advertise that applications for them would be received by the city treasurer. They would sell at $50 and bear interest at 6 per cent.

Ald. Edgar believes that they would strongly appeal to the citizens. As an investment they would be superior to the Victory Loan bonds. If they were all applied for, the debentures could then be issued; but if the plan failed the bonds could be sold through the regular channel.

This proposal will be brought to the attention of the Finance Committee at its next meeting.

SHARKEY WITH U.S. JACK TARS

LOS ANGELES.—Tom Sharkey, old-time heavy-weight boxer and now partner of Jim Jeffries in business here, is mighty proud of Uncle Sam's navy boys these days. Every time the Jack Tars down at San Pedro start a benefit to bolster up the athletic fund, Sharkey is with them with his aid and funds.

Sharkey saw eleven years of service in the navy, from 1885 to 1896, not only popularised boxing aboard ship, but developed into the undisputed champion scrapper of the navy and came mighty near developing into the champion of the world.

"I was the guy that introduced boxing in the navy," said Sharkey, recently. "When I first joined the navy I was on the old Vermont, which was at time in Brooklyn Harbor. I had a set of boxing gloves and some gymnasium apparatus with me when I went on board ship, and how the sailors looked at me as if I was a 'nut.'

Boxing a Naval Institution.

"I managed to dig up a few gloves at the time and some of the boys there took a bit of interest in it, and when I transferred to the Philadelphia and we were stationed at Honolulu for a long time, and I continued my boxing. I wasn't long before I was the real champion of the ship, and then other ships took up the sport.

"One time in Honolulu they picked a big fellow named Nig Burley to fight me and we battled on deck. I beat Burley in eight rounds and the officers who watched the scrap liked it, and from that time on boxing was encouraged.

"It wasn't long before other ships took up boxing, and before long every ship had its champion in the different divisions, and the game was on hand to stay.

Made Fighting a Business.

"I fought a number of regular scraps while I was in the navy, my biggest being with Jim Corbett and Joe Choynski. Then, when I got my discharge, I went into the game as a business and fought Fitzsimmons and Jeff and all the other good ones.

"My boxing days in the navy were a big help to me as a fighter. I had many a tough battle on shipboard, but in all my ring career I never met better sportsmen or gamer fighters than the sailors I had to tackle to keep my title as champion of the navy.

"I've had my ups and downs and never found the world a particularly easy fellow to battle, but of my whole life, I look back on my years in the navy as my happiest.

"Boxing has done a lot for the boys in the navy, and I hope the sport keeps up. There's no gamer, better bunch of boys in the world than Uncle Sam's sailors, and I'm prouder of the fact that I was the first real heavy-weight boxing champion of the navy than if I'd been champion of the world."

GEORGE STREET BOWLING ALLEYS

A very interesting game was played on the George Street Alleys last night between Ackerman's and Great War Veterans' Association. Many of Ackerman's staff, also returned soldiers, turned out to witness the game, which was very interesting, as both teams fought hard to win out—the G.W.V.A.'s only winning by the small margin of 76 pins in the three games.

The Bankers will play the winners on Wednesday night, which should be interesting to see.

The Henry Hope team will then challenge the winners of this game.

Good prizes will be given each week to the players making most strikes and spares.

Following are the scores of last night's game:

USE OF RAILWAY SIDING WANTED DURING THE DAY

Present Condition On C. G. E. Siding Leads to Unnecessary Detention of Freight Cars

The Railway Committee of the City Council met last evening to consider the application of the Canadian General Electric Company for the use of their railway siding between the hours of seven in the morning and six o'clock in the evening. Mr. E. G. Patterson appeared in support of the company's claim. At present the use of the siding is restricted between the hours named.

Mr. J. J. Turner, president of the Board of Trade, also supported the application. Mr. A. McNab, local agent for the Grand Trunk Railway, pointed out that the restriction resulted in the unnecessary detention of freight cars.

Mr. R. C. Braund opposed the application upon the grounds that it would injure his business property.

On motion of Ald. Taylor and Mayor Duncan, it was moved and carried that the Board of Railway Commissioners for Canada be informed that the Council is of the opinion that it would be in the interests of the city to have the restriction removed by granting the application, and that the suggestion be made to the Board that a flag signal should be given by the railways by means of a flagman when shunting is being done on the siding between 7 a.m. and 6 p.m.

Street Railway Extensions.

The matter of extending the street railway to the Monaghan Road was discussed, but no action taken. A letter was read from J. H. Taylor, suggesting that blind and deformed persons be allowed to ride on the street cars.

On motion of Mayor Duncan and Ald. McIntyre, it was moved and seconded that the Council has no jurisdiction over the street railway, and that if Mr. Taylor desires to further the matter, he should do so with the Hydro Electric Power Commission of Ontario, present owners of the street railway.

A Wood Supply.

T. Wedlock, of the Peterborough Fuel and Transfer Company, appeared before the committee and stated that they had about three thousand cords of wood about nine miles east of Peterborough (mile post 59), and wished a Grand Trunk railway siding for loading. Mr. Wedlock asked the committee to use its influence to have the siding laid. Mr. A. McNab was heard in support of the application.

The Mayor and chairman will write to the Board of Railway Commissioners and recommend that the Board expedite the consideration and granting of the application, as it will greatly facilitate the shipment of a large quantity of wood to this city, which is greatly needed at the present time.

Tribute To Private V. A. Henry, Taken Prisoner At Cambrai

A fine tribute to Private V. A. Henry, who was taken prisoner at Cambrai on 20th November, is contained in a letter received by his father, Mr. W. J. Henry, from Lieut. W. J. Cowan, M.C. Lieut. Cowan was under the impression that Pte. Henry was killed.

"I only hope," he wrote, "that he may turn up a prisoner in Germany. He was a splendid boy, willing and competent. He had been marked for promotion some time ago, for he had done an N.C.O.'s work for the past three months. He had been recommended twice for great bravery under fire while acting as stretcher-bearer and first aid man; but by the strange freaks of fate which seemed against our troop, he, as well as others, was overlooked when the decorations were awarded.

On November 20th he went through that mammoth charge with us, riding the little mare he was so proud and careful of, and after our horses were killed and we were making our way back to our lines in the dark, he undoubtedly saved my life by bandaging and dressing my neck after I had been hit by a machine gun bullet.

"He got separated from me on the way back, following some one who lost his way, and I hav heard no more of him.

"Your son was a credit to his parents and to his country, a model of cleanness in his life, and as a soldier beloved by every one in the 3rd Troop of our Squadron, of which we were all so proud to belong."

Lieut. Cowan wrote from Michelham Home, France.

SPANISH PROPOSED AS OPTIONAL SUBJECT IN THE HIGH SCHOOLS

Mr. B. D. Hall, secretary of the Board of Trade, has received a communication from the Department of Education, requesting him to obtain the opinions of local manufacturers on a proposal to make Spanish an optional subject in the High School curriculum. Mr. Hall will be pleased to hear from manufacturers in this matter. It may be stated that many schools in the United States have substituted Spanish for German or have added it to the modern language course. The purpose is principally to equip young Americans for business in South America, where Spanish is spoken in practically all the countries. American manufacturers sent a commission to the southern continent, and one of its recommendations was that Spanish be generally adopted in the secondary schools.

For Skins Affected By Winds and Weather

This is the season when she who would have a spotless, lily-white, satiny complexion should turn her thoughts to mercolized wax, the firm friend of the winter girl. Nothing so effectually overcomes the despoiling effects of piercing winds and biting cold temperatures. The wax literally absorbs the chapped, reddened or coarsened cuticle, bringing forth a brand new skin, clear, soft and girlishly beautiful. An ounce of mercolized wax, obtainable at any drug store, applied nightly like cold cream, and washed off mornings, will gradually improve the worst complexion.

She who coddles herself all day in an overheated house and finds her skin flushed and flabby as a consequence, can quickly freshen up for the evening by just bathing her face in a lotion made by dissolving an ounce of powdered saxolite in a half pint witch hazel. She'll find this most refreshing. It smooths out wrinkles and draws in the saggy tissue

Former Local Boys' Success In New York

Many Peterborough citizens will be interested to know of the great success that has been achieved by a former resident of the city, Mr. Horace E. Ayers, at one time physical director of the local Y.M.C.A., and one of the most popular young men ever connected with that institution. After leaving Peterborough some years ago, Mr. Ayers went to New York City and accepted a position as physical director of the East Side Branch Y.M.C.A., at the same time pursuing his studies in medicine, and in spite of tremendous difficulties, finished his course with high honours, and entered the medical profession.

Specialising in surgery, he has steadily made his way into the front ranks, and to-day stands practically at the head of his profession in that great city. Not only in his work as a surgeon, but as a teacher, he has made a name for himself, and he is Dean of the Faculty in one of that city's largest and most important medical colleges.

But high honours and the exceedingly strenuous life of New York City have not robbed him of any of the splendid characteristics that made him popular in Peterborough. His warm-hearted friendship, his ready smile, and his deep interest in everything human, have remained with him during the years, and made him as popular among a large circle of friends in that city as he was during his stay in Peterborough.

STRIKES IN GERMANY REPORTED TO BE SERIOUS

Northcliffe Would Rid the Army Of Caste and Make It Democratic

LONDON, Jan. 29. — Lord Northcliffe has left London for ten days' rest at his bungalow in Surrey, which he calls Nohall, Nowhere. It is six miles from the station, removed from all friends and haunts of men. He tok rations for himself and a friend in an automobile, no food being procurable in the immediate neighbourhood. He has been preparing Crewe House for the entertainment of the representatives of America, France, and the other allied nations coming to England on business. The banquet hall and ballroom are being renovated and paintings are coming from the National Gallery to adorn the walls.

In spite of his seeing forty or fifty men daily in business interviews, Lord Northcliffe is in the best of health. In an interview which I had with him yesterday at Crewe House in regard to the policies of his papers, he said:

"The campaign in which my newspapers are engaged is one that will eventually be followed by the United States. It is a drive for the democratisation of the army—that is to say, the allotment of high rank to civilians who, in this war, have had as much experience as our men from establishments corresponding to the United States West Point. At the present time, despite the fact that the flower and brain of he British people from every profession and business is in the army, no civilian except General Currie of the Canadians, has advanced beyond the rank of Brigadier General. This is grossly unfair and is having a bad effect. Of between 100,000 and 200000 officers in the army only some 10,000 are said to be of the old military caste.

"The reactionary newspapers which opposed my fight for aeroplanes and for shells have lined up in exactly the same groups as before, employing all sorts of newspaper camouflage. Some of them state that my claims, in which I am suported by practically the whole army, are attacks upon Sir Douglas Haig. It is difficult to understand how this great democratic movement can be so construed, but there is an innate hatred of change in certain British minds that cannot believe, for example, that a Vancouver real estate man like Currie is possibly as good a General as a man trained on the old lines, which lines, by the way, have been wiped out by the totally new experience of the present war. Napoleon made his Generals from every sort of human material. I claim that somewhere in the British armies, numbering five and a half millions of men, there must be a genius waiting to be discovered. It never can, never will, be discovered so long as a small, privileged class of whose splendid fighting there are no criticisms is allowed to claim all the higher ranks.

"The fight kill not be as long as the one to procure aeroplanes and shells, for the simple reason that every family in England has a man at the front and when that man comes home wounded or on leave he tells the facts. The criticisms of Sir Douglas Haig made in the House of Commons have nothing to do with this matter, but have to do with the suppression of the story of Cambrai, which was sent out to the world as a great British victory and was was dealt with in United States papers as a great British victory, as any one can see by looking back to the date on his own files of newspapers. The two subjects are entirely separate."

Careful physicians always point out that every cough wears human strength and tears down the body's resistive powers. The reason

FEARS DEMOBILIZATION.

Deputy Urges Protection for Dismissed German Soldiers.

In an article printed in a copy of the Vossische Zeitung recently received in London Paul Gohre, a member of the Scheidemann pro-Government group of Socialist Deputies in the Reichstag, makes the assertion that Germany now has more than 12,000,000 men mobilized. He lays down the following points to be borne in mind by the authorities when the time comes for their demobilization:

"Our soldiers will all return in great need of rest, but at the same time very hungry to return to their old caling at home.

"The fighters will all return more or less weakened in health, threatened with illness, a great many of them indeed, already having evident or still concealed seeds of sickness in them.

"Our soldiers will brink back from the field a strengthened sense of family ties.

"Our soldiers will return with clearer minds, less open to corruption, more energetic in will, and quicker in action."

Herr Gohre says that the country must accept special responsibility for the future health of all ex-soldiers, whether or not they are supposed to be sound at the time of demobilization. He attaches the greatest importance to the adequate solution of the housing question.

CATTLE MARKET

Business at the Cattle Market yesterday was practically suspended. The railroads gave out notice that cattle nor stock of any kind would be received for delivery for the next day or so, as a result of the big storm. There were, therefore, no fresh arrivals of stock at the maket yesterday. A few loads of cattle held over from Monday, about 11 all told, were picked up by the two or three buyers in the market, prices being about on a par with Monday Owing to the abnormal conditions of the market no changes are made from Monday's quotations.

It is stated by the packers that there will be no shortage of beef for the local trade as a result of the temporary block on the roads, as they have plenty of supplies on hand to carry them over a short siege.

HIGH POTATO PRICES IN ONTARIO EXPLAINED

TORONTO, Jan. 29. — A Toronto newspaper draws attention to the present high price of potatoes despite the exceptionally large crop in the United States and Canada, and gives the explanation offered by several expert agriculturists so far as this province is concerned.

A prominent agriculturist gave this explanation:

Farmers were too busy with ploughing and other fall work to market their potatoes when the crop was harvested and the cold and snow blockades have prevented marketing during a good deal of the time since the first freeze-up. There is another reason. Present prices at wholesale centres mean about $1.35 on board cars to farmers, and at present prices for mill feeds, boiled potatoes are worth nearly that amount as hog feed."

Another large dealer said:

"One cause of present high prices of potatoes is found in fear by wholesalers of action by the food controller, said Mr. Dawson, of the Dawson Company. "Wholesalers were afraid to stock up heavily in the fall, fearing that with their warehouses full, the food controller might fix a price at which sales could be made that would wipe out their margins. Then the severe weather and tie-up of transportation came, making shipments impossible. The consequence is that the whole city is now bare of supplies. The potatoes are in the country, however, plenty of them and they are in good shape. As soon as danger from cold weather is over they will begin to move."

LINDSAY COMMENT ON PETERBOROUGH FIRE

The Lindsay papers contain the following comment on Peterborough's big fire:

(Lindsay Warder.)

Mr. W. J. Carlisle, manager of the Lindsay branch of the R. Neill Shoe firm, spent a few hours in Peterborough Saturday looking over the ruins of the head branch and discussing business arrangements with Mr. Robt. Neill and staff.

The Neill store is a complete wreck, nothing remaining but the rear wall. There is absolutely no salvage, not even a tag for a shoe lace. The firm owned the building, which is a complete loss, while the stock was valued at $200,000 or over. A heavy insurance was carried, but even so the loss will be enormous.

Arrangements have already been made to secure temporary quarters for the retail store; also a temporary warehouse and the firm will commence rebuilding at once on the old site.

"No, there will be no fire sale in Lindsay and no cheap boots, as there is nothing left to sell," said Mr. Carlisle.

Lindsay fire brigade cannot speak too highly of the treatment received by the Peterborough brigade and vote them a lot of all round good fellows. Chief Grange is particularly well spoken of for his generalship and skill in handling a fire. Luckily there were no serious accidents during the day.

Fire Chief Beadle and his band of fire fighters arrived home early Sunday morning from Peterborough, where they rendered splendid assistance in fighting the destructive fire on Saturday morning. The special reached Peterborough in about forty minutes, there being a slight delay at Jones' to permit the Port Hope train to pass. When the train reached Peterborough the truck was unloaded and was taken to the fire hall, where it was left in charge of Fireman Humphries to respond to any calls sent in. Chief Beadle and his men then reported for service at the scene of the fire and relieved the well-nigh exhausted city firemen who were completely covered with ice and were unable to walk. Some forty firemen were engaged at intervals in fighting the flames. The Lindsay firemen remained on the job from about ten o'clock in the morning until after four o'clock in the afternoon and rendered yeoman service. They suffered severely from the cold, Chief Beadle having both ears frozen.

The firemen speak in the highest terms of the treatment accorded them by the authorities at Peterborough.

Every available foot of hose was used, in fact, the city was obliged to borrow hose from the different manufacturing concerns. The engine, too, was brought into requisition. The common belief in Peterborough was that the steamer was in the discard, but the engineer, it is said, had it at such high pressure that the base was jumping on the ground. Those who saw the engine work at the Flavelles cold storage fire, will hesitate before believing that the engine's usefulness is gone.

As evidence of the aggressiveness of the management it is stated that a short time after the fire Mr. Robert Neill had made arrangements for temporary quarters and plans carried out for an inventory of all the stocks in the branch stores in order that the Peterborough store might be stocked.

BRANTFORD FIXES COAL AT $10.00 TON

Farmers Protest Against the City's Treatment of Them—Adopt Hours Schedule.

BRANTFORD, Jan. 28.—That the price of coal would be fixed under authority of the Fuel Controller in Brantford was announced by Mayor MacBride as a special meeting of the City Council this evening. The fixed price will be $9.75 per quarter, $5.25 per half and $10.00 per full ton.

Farmers' Protest.

At the Council meeting the farmers of Brant backed up by a delegation a protest formally adopted by them calling for justice from the city, which has prevented the sale of coal to farmers during the great scarcity here. The farmers contended that the coal which came to the city was not all for city consumers, but, as in the past, for both country and city residents.

TURN HAIR DARK WITH SAGE TEA

If Mixed With Sulphur It Darkens So Naturally Nobody Can Tell

The old-time mixture of Sage Tea and Sulphur for darkening gray, streaked and faded hair is grandmother's recipe and folks are again using it to keep their hair a good, even colour, which is quite sensible, as we are living in an age when a youthful appearance is of the greatest advantage.

Nowadays, though, we don't have the troublesome task of gathering the sage and the mussy mixing at home. All drug stores sell the ready-to-use product, improved by the addition of other ingredients called "Wyeth's Sage and Sulphur Compound." It is very popular because nobody can discover it has been applied. Simply moisten your comb or a soft brush with it and draw this through your hair, taking one small strand at a time; by morning the gray hair disappears, but what delights the ladies with Wyeth's Sage and Sulphur Compound, is that, besides beautifully darkening the hair after a few applications, it also produces that soft lustre and appearance of abundance which is so attractive. This ready-to-use preparation is a delightful toilet requisite for those who desire a more youthful appearance. It is not intended for the cure, mitigation or prevention of disease.

If people were to get paid for the foolish things they do and say, poverty would soon be a thing of the past.

"THE CLUE IN THE AIR"

A DETECTIVE STORY—Isabel Ostrander

"Sure. That man Grafton Foxe, and his wife. I was thinking the woman would drop in the street to look at her. They beat it just after the coffin was brought out, and I lost track of them."

McCarty set his lips grimly. So he, too, had overlooked a bet. He would have given much to have edged near them, unperceived in the crowd, and listened to their comment. He mentally cursed his wasted opportunity.

But he had no time for further regret. The hands of the big clock pointed to five minutes before the hour; the room was filling rapidly and the jury already seated in their allotted place.

His eyes travelled over the assembled witnesses. Dr. Elmsford was there, and the hall boy, Mr. and Mrs. Grafton Foxe, the youthful inventor, Mr. Antonio; Mrs. Doremus, and the maid, Mary. There were several people, too, whom McCarty had never seen before, among them a shabby, shrinking little gray-haired woman; a tall young man with a weather-beaten face and keen eyes; a smartly attired girl, staring and round eyed, and an immaculate blond youth with an incipient mustache, and a broad, rather cynical expression.

Two chairs were still vacant, and even as McCarty noted them the door swung open once more. The first to enter was a little man with a hawk nose and shining, bald head, at sight of whom the ex-roundsman stiffened in his chair. It was Humboldt, one of the most brilliant as well as by far the most unscrupulous lawyers of the day. Who could have retained him to safeguard their interests?

Imemdiatel following him came Stephen Quimby, supporting the same frail, heavily veiled figure which had leaned upon his arm on the previous day.

They paused for an instant in the doorway, while Stephen Quimby swept the room with one of his keen lightning-like glances. Then he stooped slightly and whispered something into the ear of his companion. She made no reply, but swayed and clutched his arm in a convulsive grasp, and as if aware that all eyes were upon them, he steadied her and drew her toward the two empty chairs.

McCarty had just time to perceive that the lawyer, Humboldt, had sided in between Mrs. Doremus and her maid when the proceedings were opened and his own name called.

He gave his testimony with concise brevity and was followed on the stand by Dr. Elmsford, Officer Cunliffe, and the hall boy, Alfred Grimes. The latter had one fresh item to disclose, and although his evidence was given in a furtive and abashed manner it could not be shaken. He was positive that he had taken Mrs. Doremus's guest down in the elevator at ten o'clock, and seen him depart.

"How do you know that it was just ten o'clock?" Coroner Selby asked.

"Because I had just got through winding the clock on the telephone desk when the gentleman rang the elevator bell."

"He had been a frequent caller, son Mrs. Doremus?"

"N—no, sir."

"No?" The coroner eyed him sharply. "You told Mr. Tebrune two days ago that he came very often, but you had never heard his name."

The boy shook his head.

"No, sir. I said seems like I had seen him here before but I wasn't really certain. Then I done got thinking it over an' himeby I seen it was a mistake. I never did lay eyes on the gentleman till that night."

His testimony closed with a description of Marion Rowntree's first visit to the Glamorgan and a reiteration of his ignorance of her return on the night of her death.

The coroner's physician was called next and then Stephen Quimby took the stand. He told in a quiet, unemotional voice of the identification at the morgue and repeated his first statement to the police. He knew of no reason for his daughter's visit to the Glamorgan and no enemy who would have taken her life.

But even as he spoke his glance shot down straight before him to the waiting group of witnesses and for an instant it seemed to McCarty that a threat, a menace glared from his eyes.

It was gone the next moment, and his tone was as calmly controlled as ever as he continued his testimony. In reply to the questions put to him he stated that to his knowledge his daughter had been contented and happy, with no shadow of trouble preying on her mind, and full of plans for the future. She was of the athletic, outdoor type, but during the past few months she had developed an enthusiastic tendency toward literature, and had devoted much of her time to reading.

She had never had a serious love affair, only one or two mild attachments, which had come to no definite point. He had made every endeavor to bring her up with the most careful guardianship, as she was motherless, and her aunt had been her constant companion. She could scarcely have formed acquaintances without their knowledge and approval, and he was quite sure that she know no one living in the Glamorgan.

Although his responses were given firmly and without hesitation, there was a seeming lack of personal interest and feeling in his manner as well as his carefully guarded utterances, which could not fail to create an unpleasant impression upon his hearers. Even the coroner fell a prey to its influence, as evinced by the increasing brevity and peremptory tone of his inquiries.

"Mr. Quimby, what is known of Miss Rowntree's movements on the occasion of her first visit to the Glamorgan, three days before her death?"

"She went ostensibly for a visit to her dressmaker's. Miss Beckwith called there by appointment to meet her, but she had gone. She reached home somewhat later, and said she had walked through the park."

"You say you know of no reason for her presence in the apartment house, no enemies, no trouble, nothing, in fact, which can in any way aid our investigation. Surely you have formed some theory, Mr. Quimby; your auspicions must be aroused?"

He paused suggestively, but the banker eyed him with a courteous reserve and remained silent.

"Have you any theory or suspicions?" he demanded curtly, annoyed at being forced to frame a direct question.

"None. The affair is absolutely inexplicable to me."

"Is it your purpose to offer a reward for the apprehension of your stepdaughter's murderer?"

"No."

"May I ask why not, Mr. Quimby?"

"Really, I had not analyzed my mental attitude in anticipation of such a query." He paused and then added: "I am philosophical enough to realize that no amount of official inquiry or punishment of the guilty can bring my stepdaughter back to life again. That being so I do not feel the need of feeding the rapacity of the public with further sensation, and keeping alive a notoriety which is exceedingly distasteful to Mis Rowntree's relatives and friends."

He inclined his head slightly in the direction of the veiled figure; and the coroner, after a few final questions of trivial import, dismissed him and called Miss Pauline Beckwith.

The veiled lady rose trembling and, again supported by her brother-in-law, tottered to the stand. Before taking the oath she threw back the crape which had swathed her head, revealing a colorless, delicately lined face, which still retained traces of faded beauty.

Her chin was weak, her brows arched in a characterless semicircle, and the pale-blue eyes beneath, stained with much weeping, fluttered in a nervous panic from Stephen Quimby's impassive countenance to the coroner's professionally grave one.

Her first replies were made in a broken, almost toneless whisper, and she hesitated before even the most perfunctory questions. After establishing her position as the head of her brother-in-law's household, the coroner broached the identification of the body at the morgue.

"Yes, I saw the—the clothing." Her face twitched painfully with emotion. "Mr. Quimby attended to the rest. I—I could not bear to look upon her face."

She seemed upon the point of collapse, and the coroner reassured her hastily.

"I understand. The shock must have been great. Now, tell me please Miss Beckwith, of the preceding day. Miss Rowntree remained in the house until late in the afternoon?"

"Yes."

"Did you observe anything unusual in her manner?"

"No. She was a very self-contained girl and undemonstrative. I was quite busy; we were preparing to close the house and go to our country home in the Berkshires." She paused and her eyes sought Stephen Quimby. "But though we were not together except at luncheon I am sure I would have noticed anything out of the ordinary in her mood."

"She went shopping with you in the afternoon?"

"About four o'clock, or perhaps a little before."

"Where did you go?"

"To several of the department stores—Brainard's, Stein's, and Mollenhauer's."

"And you dined at home at seven o'clock?"

"Not until half past. I waited and waited——" She stopped with a little gasp, and again her gaze besought her brother-in-law, as if for help.

The coroner advanced a step toward her.

"For whom did you wait, Miss Beckwith? You knew of Mr. Quimby's previous engagement, and you expected no guest?"

"For—for Marion." Her voice, which had been gaining confidence, again sank into a fluttering whisper. "She went out alone then, after your return?"

"She did not come home with me. We—we became separated in Mollenhauer's, and I waited, then searched for her, and at length returned home, confident that she would follow almost at once."

"And she did not?"

"No, it was after seven when she appeared."

"What explanation did she offer?"

"She said that she had met friends, and after looking in vain for me had gone to tea with them and been detained."

"Who were these friends?"

The pause was longer now, and Miss Beckwith looked almost appealingly down into the group of witnesses. McCarty, following her gaze, saw the unknown girl stiffen in her chair even before the faltering answer came.

"Miss Gladys Hatfield, her aunt, Mrs. Wendle Hatfield, and guests of theirs from out of town."

"At what time did you lose sight of your niece? Please describe it as nearly as you can remember."

"About five o'clock. We were in the household linen department and I was talking to a saleswoman, across the counter. I turned to consult Marion about a purchase, believing her to be just behind me, but she had disappeared. That is all that I know."

Detailed questioning from the coroner brought forth a disjointed repetition of the unimportant conversation at dinner and the fact of Marion Rowntree's almost immediate retirement. As Stephen Rowntree had already related to the police, Miss Beckwith, in passing to her own room a little later, had tapped at her niece's door, and elicited a good night response. She knew of nothing more until the tragic tidings came in the early morning.

The coroner released her, and after a hurried scrutiny of his notes, called:

"Miss Gladys Hatfield."

TO SUFFER FROM HEADACHES
Makes Life Miserable

Headaches seems to be habitual with many people. Some are seldom, if ever, free from it, suffering continually with the dull throbbings, the intense pain, sometimes in one part, sometimes in another, and then over the whole head, varying in its severity by the cause which brings it on.

The varieties of headache most common are sick or bilious headache, nervous headache, headache from constipation, debility or indigestion and periodical and spasmodic headache, and undoubtedly the cause must be removed before permanent relief can be had.

Burdock Blood Bitters, that has been on the market for over 40 years, removes the cause of the headaches, and not only does this but also restores the entire system to healthy action and buoyant vigour.

Miss Emily Smith, 204 Bellwoods Ave., Toronto, Ont., writes: "I cannot speak too highly of Burdock Blood Bitters. For two years I was greatly troubled with violent headaches, particularly in the morning. I tried everything to cure me until a friend recommended B.B.B. I tried it, and now I am completely cured."

Yield to Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound. Thousands of Girls Benefited

St. Louis, Mo.—"When I was only fifteen years old mother had to put me to bed every month for two days because I suffered such pain. I also suffered from a weakness and mother took me to a doctor but he did not help me. Finally mother made me take Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound and it has made me strong and healthy. So when mother or I hear any woman complaining we tell them about Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound and what it did for me."—Mrs. JOHN FRAME, 1121 N. 18th St., St. Louis, Mo.

Girls who suffer as Mrs. Frame did should not hesitate to give this famous root and herb remedy, Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound, a trial, as the evidence that is constantly being published proves beyond question that this grand old remedy has relieved more suffering among women than any other medicine.

FUEL SCARCE AGAIN.

Many Orders Received by the Police and Most Coal Yards Have No Supplies.

The city's fuel fever has suffered a relapse. The police are swamped with orders and the R. Hicks Company is practically the only yard that has received new shipments recently and is in a position to meet the demand. The Fuel and Cartage Company had nothing but soft coal in their bins yesterday afternoon and there were no invoices in the office. Weir and McCarthy and the Scott Companies in East City are temporarily at a standstill. Mr. J. E. A. Fitzgerald delivered about forty orders for the city on Saturday, but to-day Chief Thompson has been forced to fall back on the Hicks Company. In the meantime the delivery teams in the other yards are idle and customers in need of coal have but one source of supply.

Has Only About One and a Half Days' Supply of Soft Coal.

BELLEVILLE, Jan. 28.—At a conference held here this afternoon of coal dealers and the Special Coal Committee, it was learned that the city is in a state of real destitution of coal, as the supply available will last only about one day and a half, most of that supply being soft coal. Scores of appeals for coal are coming in to Fuel Commissioner Wills. It was decided to at once apply to the Dominion Fuel Controller's Department to see if something cannot be done to relieve the immediate distress.

CHINA'S TEA INDUSTRY

GROWERS ARE TRYING TO RESTORE THE EXPORT TRADE.

The Popular Beverage, Which Is Now More Used Than Ever, Originally Came Only From the China Plantations, but India and Ceylon Captured the Business.

THE most important article of export from Hankow, and, in fact, one of the most important for all China, is tea. This product, locally called ch'a, was known as early as 400 B. C., but it is reported that it did not come into general use until about 700 A.D. The earliest use of tea was not as a beverage, but as a vegetable dish, and even to-day in Tibet the ordinary every-day meal consists of a doughy mass made of tea, barley meal, butter, and salt. Since the eighth century the demand for tea has become world-wide, and in China, its place of origin, the annual consumption is now estimated to be five pounds per inhabitant.

The great tea-growing districts of China are by no means so widespread as is generally supposed. The plant flourishes best between the latitude of 24 and 30 degrees and its quality depends very largely on the altitude at which it is grown. For example, the celebrated black tea from Anhui is produced on the slopes of the L' mountains at an altitude of over 3,000 feet, while the famous "Hulen-ya" tea comes from even greater heights in the mountains of Kiang-si, Hu-nan, Hu-peh, Fu-Kient Kiang-si, An-hui, Che-kiang, Kwang-tung, and Yun-nan are the chief tea-producing provinces of China. Hunan exports the greatest quantity destined for foreign countries, but Anhui's output is considered superior in quality.

During the last 25 or 30 years China's export trade in tea has fallen off to a large extent primarily because of a lack of co-operation among the growers, the employment of antiquated methods in the plant's production, heavy taxation and somewhat of late, to disturbed political conditions in the regions where the plant is cultivated. India and Ceylon during the last sixty years have gradually won much of the trade away from China, until to-day they are supplying the bulk of the world's demand, especially for the coarser and darker-colored teas. This is in spite of the acknowledged fact that Chinese teas are superior to all others in their delicacy of flavor. During the last ten years, however, China has begun to realize the extreme importance of retaining this trade, and government measures have been adopted in an effort to regain its old-time prestige.

Tea is usually grown on small farms located on the slopes of hills and never on large plantations. Each family does its own cultivating, picking, and drying. When prices are not prohibitive, bean and rapeseed cakes are used as fertilizers. Wood ashes are also used as a fertilizer. As a general thing, these products are applied to the fields in February; and during the next month, when the young sprouts begin to appear, the corn husks, which have been placed around the plant as a shield from the weather, are removed and the ground hoed and cleared of weeds. The first picking of the tea leaves usually occurs in early April, the second in May, and the third and last in August. The land is then ploughed and harrowed, after which it is allowed to remain untouched during the winter months.

The tea-picking season extends over a period of about four months. The first crop, which is gathered in April, is always the most valuable. In some sections the leaves are covered with a downy growth, and this output, known as "Pekoe," is considered one of the best grades of Chinese tea. The bushes continue to put forth leaves; but, as a rule, the natives pick too heavily at the beginning of the season, and the result is that the second crop is of a far coarser variety and suitable only in supplying the demand for cheap and poor quality teas.

There are five distinct processes in the manufacture of tea—withering, rolling, fermenting, firing, and sifting. As the name signifies, the withering process consists in drying the leaf, which is usually accomplished by simply laying the plucked leaves out in the sunshine on straw mats and occasionally turning them so that they dry evenly on all sides. Under this treatment the tea gradually darkens in color. When a rich green stage is reached tests are made to see that the drying is not carried to a point where the leaves become brittle. When the weather forbids outdoor drying, the withering is accomplished in artificially heated rooms, care being taken to see that all stale air and gases are promptly removed from the drying chamber.

The second process, known as rolling, is really a further stage in the withering process, as its object is to squeeze any remaining moisture or sap from the leaf. In India and Ceylon this work is usually done by machinery, which not only expresses all the moisture from the leaf, but gives it the proper twist. In China, however, this is done by hand, the product being placed on wicker or bamboo trays and rolled backward and forward with the palms of the hands for a period ranging from 30 minutes to an hour.

The third, or fermentation, process determines whether the product is to become black tea or green. At this stage in the preparation of the tea the leaves are placed on some flat surface and covered with a damp cloth.

The process is sometimes hurried in another way, that being the use of covered wicker baskets, under which a slow fire is built. This treatment, which usually requires from two to six hours (depending on the weather and on the methods used), is terminated when the leaf takes on a copperish tinge. If green tea is desired the fermentation is either done away with entirely or checked before any change in the color of the leaf occurs.

The most important stage in the preparation of the tea is that of firing, for the flavor of the product is determined in this process. In India and Ceylon the firing of the tea is accomplished by placing it on wire trays, which are then transferred to large desiccators, through which passes a blast of air heated to 210 degrees or 220 degrees. In China the methods employed are very crude. A basket measuring about 30 inches in diameter, three feet high, open at both ends and having a light bamboo bottom placed halfway of the basket, is the most common receptacle used for firing. The tea leaves are placed in the upper half and a charcoal fire is built below.

In this manner all remaining moisture is driven off, and the desired flavor given to the tea. When an artificially scented product is desired, a variety of jasmine flower is fired with the tea. The same fragrance may also be imparted in a lesser degree by sprinkling the tea with the flower after packing, but this method is followed only in the manufacture of inferior teas.

The fifth, and last, process is the sifting and grading of the tea, which is accomplished by means of sieves, each smaller in mesh than the preceding one, a careful grading of the tea taking place after each sifting.

China has at last realized the importance of at least attempting to regain its position as the chief source of the world's supply of tea, and to this end has established an agricultural commission with the betterment of the tea trade as its main object.

The first step in this direction was taken in 1905, when an investigating committee was sent to India and Ceylon in order to study the methods practiced by the tea growers of that region. As a result of this movement a school was established at Nanking where the latest methods of tea culture were taught. A station was also established in the famous Keemen district in the province of Anhui, where the growing of the tea plant under scientific methods is now demonstrated to the planters of that region.

Lastly, a 20 per cent. reduction in the export duty on tea was put into effect during 1915. While this step materially aided the growers, the Chinese Government will have to take further action along this same line in order that Chinese tea may meet the competition of Indian leaf, for in India there is no tax on either the production or the exportation of tea. The Chinese grower is under the further burden of having to pay a series of transit taxes, known as liken, which are levied on the article from the place of production to the place of shipment. These taxes often amount to more than the original export tax.

A Fight for Life

It has been fight or die for many of us in the past and the lucky people are those who have suffered, but who are now well because they heeded nature's warning signal in time to correct their trouble with that wonderful new discovery of Dr. Pierce's, called "An-uric." You should promptly heed these warnings, some of which are dizzy spells, backache, irregularity of the urine or the painful twinges of rheumatism, sciatica or lumbago. To delay may make possible the dangerous forms of kidney disease, such as diabetes or stone in bladder.

To overcome these distressing conditions take plenty of exercise in the open air, avoid a heavy meat diet, drink freely of water and at each meal take Anuric (double strength). You will, in a short time, find that you are one of the firm indorsers of Anuric.

Hamilton, Ont.—"For kidney ailments I have never known any medicine to equal Anuric. When I started to take it I was very miserable with lame back, pains in the cords of my neck and shoulders and all over my body. The water was high colored and offensive. All of these conditions left me after one week's use of Anuric and I consider it to be the greatest of all kidney medicines."—Mrs. JENNIE CLARK, 79 Queen St. So.

Toronto, Ont.—"My husband suffered severely with pains in his back for three or four weeks. He commenced to take Anuric and in three or four days he not only looked better, but remarked that his back felt much better, and now he says that his pain has all gone. It is with pleasure that we recommend Anuric."—Mrs. MARY EVAN, 54 Seaton St.

The Sultan's Treasures.

It is believed that in certain vaults at Constantinople there lie many hidden treasures of immense value belonging to the Sultan of Turkey. A throne of beaten gold, adorned with quantities of rubies, pearls, diamonds, and emeralds set in mosaic, is perhaps the most dazzling object in the treasury. Selim the First brought it from Persia early in the sixteenth century. There is a second throne of ebony and sandalwood, encrusted with mother-of-pearl, gold, rubies, emeralds, and sapphires.

Nowhere in the world are there precious stones to compare with the two great emeralds found here, one of which weighs two kilograms and is as large as a man's hand, and the other of which is only a little smaller.

There are diamonds, turquoises, rubies, emeralds, and pearls by the half-bushel. Formerly the jewels were kept in drawers, but when last seen they were in bowls, each of which held two gallons.

In describing a luncheon that she attended in the harem of the present Sultan Miss Grace Ellison, author of "An Englishwoman in a Turkish Harem," tells of diamond flowers that stretched from shoulder to shoulder of the High Controller of the harem and of earrings made in the shape of birds, holding in their beaks a pearl as large as a cherry. The Sultan's granddaughter, a child of twelve years of age, she pictures as having her hair in a knot on the top of her head inside a diamond crown, the front of her dress covered with diamonds, and her hands encased in gold mittens studded with rubies and diamonds.

No museum in the world can boast a richer collection of armour, scimitars, shields, pistols, saddles, sandals, canes, and the like, all jewelled or wrought of gold.

Ancient Thessalonica.

Salonica, in the days when St. Paul addressed his Epistles to the Thessalonians, was not modern, for it was built about 315 B.C. on the site of an older city called Therme, and was named by its founder after his wife, a sister of Alexander the Great. It has always been a place of importance, as it is the chief harbor of Macedonia, and was a point on the ancient highway from Rome to the East. With a few fine buildings, like the old mosque which had been in turn a temple of Venus and a Christian church, it has always been a collection of houses largely of wood and therefore highly inflammable in the extreme continuous heat of summer.

Smell Proved It.

Jack was fond of toilet water and was always good to make a trip to the barber shop. One day after having his hair cut his mamma asked him if he got a good haircut, and he jerked off his cap and said: "Til say I did. Just smell it."

Weeping and Rejoicing.

Weep with them that weep, and for them also that weep not for themselves. Rejoice with them that rejoice, and likewise rejoice for them that rejoice not for themselves when there is much to make them rejoice.

Abraham's Chair.

The origin of chairs is lost in the dim past. The Jewish legends declare that Abraham made a chair with his own hands from a tooth that fell out of the mouth of Og, a huge giant in his employ.

Gasoline Money Now.

We can remember the time when a man used to have to run back to the house to borrow car fare from his wife now and then. Nowadays he touches her for gasoline money.—Exchange.

Blue Water and Air.

Pure water, according to Lord Rayleigh, is greenish blue, while pure air is blue, because, according to Newton's dictum, the molecules of the air are sufficiently large to reflect blue rays.

Heart Beat So Fast

Could Not Sleep
HAD TO SIT UP IN BED

Heart trouble has of late years become very prevalent. Sometimes a pain catches you in the region of the heart, now and then your heart skips beats, palpitates, throbs, or beats with such rapidity and violence you think it will burst. You have weak and dizzy spells, are nervous, irritable and depressed, and if you attempt to walk upstairs or any distance you get all out of breath.

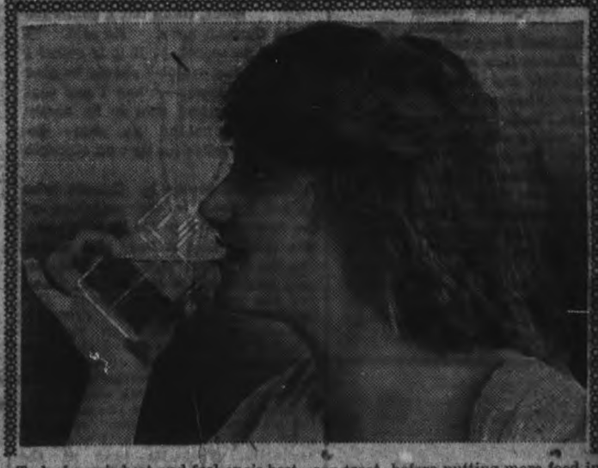
There is no other remedy will do you so much good, restore your heart to a natural condition, build up your strength and give you back vigor and vitality as Milburn's Heart and Nerve Pills.

Mrs. A. Russell, Niagara Falls, Ont., writes: "At nights I could not sleep, and had to sit up in bed, my heart would beast so fast.

"When I went to walk very far I would get all out of breath, and would have to sit down and rest before I could go any further. I was advised to get Milburn's Heart and Nerve Pills, and before I had used two boxes I could sleep and walk as far as I liked without any trouble."

Milburn's Heart and Nerve Pills are 50c per box at all dealers, or mailed direct on receipt of price by The T. Milburn Co., Limited, Toronto, Ont.

Hot Water Each Morning Puts Roses in Your Cheeks



To look one's best and feel one's best is to enjoy an inside bath each morning to flush from the system the previous day's waste, sour fermentations and poisonous toxins before it is absorbed into the blood. Just as coal, when it burns, leaves behind a certain amount of incombustible material in the form of ashes, so the food and drink taken each day leave in the alimentary organs a certain amount of indigestible material, which if not eliminated, form toxins and poisons which are then sucked into the blood through the very ducts which are intended to suck in only, nourishment to sustain the body.

If you want to see the glow of healthy bloom in your cheeks, to see your skin get clearer and clearer, you are told to drink every morning upon arising, a glass of hot water with a teaspoonful of limestone phosphate in it, which is a harmless means of washing the waste material and toxins from the stomach, liver, kidneys and bowels, thus cleansing, sweetening and purifying the entire alimentary tract, before putting more food into the stomach.

Girls and women with sallow skins, liver spots, pimples or pallid complexion, also those who wake up with a coated tongue, bad taste, nasty breath, others who are bothered with headaches, bilious spells, acid stomach or constipation should begin this phosphated hot water drinking and are assured of very pronounced results in one or two weeks.

A quarter pound of limestone phosphate costs very little at the drug store but is sufficient to demonstrate that just as soap and hot water cleanses, purifies and freshens the skin on the outside, so hot water and limestone phosphate act on the inside organs. We must always consider that internal sanitation is vastly more important than outside cleanliness, because the skin pores do not absorb impurities into the blood, while the bowel pores do.

Women who desire to enhance the beauty of their complexion should just try this for a week and notice results.

SERGEANT GOWDY IS HONORED BY LEAGUE.

Boston. — "I have notified Hank Gowdy, of the Boston Braves, the first ball player to enlist, that the National League will take good care of his dependents in the event of his disability or effacement," John K. Tener, president of the National League, said while here as chairman of the Elks' committee, which is to build a hospital in Boston for crippled soldiers. "Already I have plans to make it plain to Sergeant Gowdy on his return just how much we feel indebted to him for the honor he conferred on the National League by being the first to forsake the comparatively easy ways of baseball for the active service of his country," Mr. Tener added.

Clever Plants.

The cleverness of some plants is indisputable. A sundew, or fly eater, deceived by a piece of chalk, seized it in its tendrils, but upon discovering the fraud immediately withdrew them. A fly, held just out of its reach, did not tempt it to move, but as soon as it was brought a little nearer the plant prepared to take possession of it. Darwin showed that a begonia had a habit of searching for a hole to insert its tendrils into and even of withdrawing the tendril to insert it in another hole if the first proved unsuitable.

Nor is this power of selecting confined to any particular class. Climbers like the lianas will refuse to coil round a branch not strong enough to bear their weight.

Cunning of a Cat.

A cat once had the misfortune to break one of its forelegs and was carefully tended by its owner. One of the members of the family, a kind hearted old woman, was especially kind to the animal and gave it numerous extra delicacies. In due time the cat recovered, but it had the wit to see the connection between its broken leg and the solicitude of the woman and accordingly concealed the fact. When unobserved it ran about like any other cat, but on the approach of the tender hearted woman immediately began limping on three legs.

Britain's Grand Fleet Has Swept North Sea As Though by a Broom

THE head of the British Admiralty, speaking the other day in the House of Commons, flung out a challenge to the German navy. He said: "I disclose no secret, or if it is secret I disclose a fact which I should be glad to tell the enemy—when I say that the British grand fleet in its northern base lies behind no shore defenses, but relies on its own strength alone."

There are people in Canada who do not appreciate the activities of the British navy in its home waters, who think that it lies in idleness, like the German high seas fleet, behind impenetrable landlocked bases. For the purpose of removing this impression, the Associated Press representative was asked to visit the grand fleet, live on board the first-line battleships, and observe just what sort of day's work it puts in day after day and week after week.

Ceaseless activity is the motto of the grand fleet. Neither men nor ships are permitted to gather rust or barnacles. From its base at the northern tip of the British isles, it sweeps day and night the 140,000 square miles of the North Sea on ceaseless vigil, in unflagging hope that one day its watching will be rewarded by a meeting with the enemy under circumstances wherein he cannot avoid battle. Moreover, this sweeping of the North Sea is no mere aimless patrol. In the most casual moves of ships and men there is always a directing mind and a directing plan. The North sea is as well swept in relation to its size as the drawing room of a well-ordered house. The enemy's coastline is still the British navy's frontier.

The harbor which has been the home of the grand fleet for three years is probably the finest of its kind in the world. The whole area comprised in this British northern base is about equal to the hundred-odd square miles which the Germans evacuated in France last spring. The battleship squadrons, for example, within their own particular section of this great base, have room for every kind of practice manoeuver, including target practice.

On a sunny afternoon the correspondent saw eight battleships at turret or target practice, a detachment of cruisers in manoeuvers, a sea-plane-balloon ship at work under conditions simulating those of actual warfare, and off around the edges, various operations by innumerable small craft and auxiliaries.

Night target practice, which also is conducted within the harbor, is always an interesting sight. The battleships steam down the nine-mile course. Suddenly a searchlight picks up a target. Instantly every turret is trained, every gun directed. Then a button is pressed somewhere, and the guns speak as with one voice in a gigantic broadside that awakens the echoes from the hills.

There is an infinite variety to the turret practice on a big battleship. The officer in charge of the turret speaks: "An enemy shell has come in through the turret, killing men numbers 1, 3, 4, and 6. Right gun disabled. Connection with rest of ship lost. 'Carry on.'" The "dead men" file off to one side and watch their comrades work as they would in actual battle. There is the zest of a game to it.

The officer speaks again: "Shell has hit turret, killing all men except Numbers 1 and 3. Number 3 is seriously wounded. Ammunition hoisting machinery disabled. Fire started in pile of waste behind gun. 'Carry on.'" The one unwounded man left in the turret must now endeavor to keep the gun in action single-handed, besides dealing with a fire and a seriously-wounded man. The "dead men" stand along the edge of the turret and watch their comrade's efforts to "carry on" with interest and amusement.

It is play, but play with a deadly efficiency behind it, for it is intended that in actual battle there shall not be a single possibility with which these men will not be ready to deal.

EAT What You Like

Use Stuart's Dyspepsia Tablets to Help Your Stomach and Do Not Worry.

"Believe Me, I Enjoy My Meals to the Limit. No Fear of Consequences, Either, While I Have Stuart's Dyspepsia Tablets to Fall Back Upon."

Dyspepsia, indigestion, weak stomach and similar names simply mean that the supply of digestive juices is inadequate. That is where Stuart's Dyspepsia Tablets come in—by supplying this deficiency.

If you will eat a Stuart's Dyspepsia Tablet after each meal and one just before you go to bed, you will learn that there is no harm in your meals.

The reason is clearly plain. Your system lacks the proper digestive juices to make your meals easily digested. Stuart's Dyspepsia Tablets give the stomach and other organs of the digestive apparatus the wherewithal to digest food.

"The Widow's Mite."

Lord John Russell's diminutive stature earned him other nicknames besides the inevitable "Johnny." The neatest is the one recorded by Creevey, which was bestowed by some wag upon him when he married the widow of the second Lord Ribblesdale—"the Widow's Mite."

John Russell was a frail and delicate child from the first, but his physique cannot have been helped by the hardship of his school days. He had to be taken away from Westminster because he could not stand the fagging and unwholesome food. And before that came a private school at Sunbury, where, as he recalled in later life, he found the mutton fat so intolerable that he dropped it under the table. But the master, a clergyman made him sweep it up off the dusty floor and eat it, dirt and all.—London Chronicle.

Poor Man's Paradise.

Described as "very near being an earthly paradise for the poor," the island of Cozumel is inhabited mainly by the poor, being satisfied to lead a hand to mouth existence. To gain a livelihood requires the minimum of effort. The natives pay no rent because they are able to squat on a building site with all necessary material at hand from which to construct a cottage; free fuel, free fodder for cows, food for hogs and fowls; small game and wild fruits plentiful. Fish for the trouble of throwing in a line, turtles for the taking, to say nothing of turtles' eggs, and to provide such things as the island does not produce—clothing, for instance—a day's work for asking. Cozumel is near Yucatan

After the third of fourth application of this grand Ointment I obtained relief and a few boxes were sufficient to make a thorough cure

East Africa Campaign Described by General Who Defeated Germans

A DISPATCH from Brigadier-General Northey, C.B., dated Ubena, German East Africa, March 10, 1917, was published in a supplement to The London Gazette recently.

The dispatch, which is very brief, deals with the operations carried out by the forces under General Northey's command, based on Lakes Tanganyika and Nyasa, from January 1916, to February, 1917, in German East Africa. It was forwarded through the Governor of Nyasaland, who transmitted it with a covering letter in which he gives expression to the feeling of security experienced by himself and all in Nyasaland throughout General Northey's operations and refers to the record as being "one of consummate success at all times and at all points, the more so when regard is had to the small striking force at his disposal, the large area involved, and the difficulties in establishing and maintaining long lines of communication in a wild and unhealthy country.

The dispatch commences with a reference to the "list of officers, N. C. O.'s, and men recommended for mention in dispatches for their splendid work during the past year." A brief summary of the operations given is as follows:

From January to May, 1916, the time was spent in reorganizing the forces on the border, converting the garrisons between Lakes Nyasa and Tanganyika into mobile columns, and arranging for supply and transport. The results since obtained reflect the greatest credit on the administrative services. I think the difficulties to be overcome can hardly be realized by any but those who have experienced them.

Arrangements were made by which we were able in a few months to deploy, feed, and munition columns operating 100 miles north of Bismarckburg, at the east of Iringa, and 50 miles east of both Lupembe and Songea. The distances by road from Bismarckburg to New Langenburg; thence to Iringa, and from Iringa to Songea, are each about 200 miles. None of the roads are more than improved native paths, and the country is all hilly or mountainous, "much of it being dense bush and very unhealthy." It must also be remembered that, up to our own frontier, all supplies had to be brought either through Rhodesia, some 600 miles from the nearest railway, by native porters, or from Chinde up the Zambesi through Nyasaland and up the lake a distance of 700 miles, with constant transfers from seagoing ship to sternwheeler, railway, motor, carriers, and lake steamer. In addition to the troops with columns, many thousands of carriers had to be fed, and it must be borne in mind that each carrier eats the equivalent in weight of his own load in three weeks.

This colossal task was considerably helped later by the arrival of light motor lorries, but the untiring efforts of the mechanical transport units, and splendid work of the South African engineers, under Maj. Colin Clark in cutting and maintaining roads through most difficult hilly country. In six months 450 miles of motor road were made, and from Mwaya to the Poroto Hills, just north of New Langeburg, the road level varied from 1,500 to 8,000 feet above sea level.

On May 25 we attacked the enemy all along the frontier and by the end of July had cleared him out of the whole of the New Langenburg and Bismarckburg districts, occupying about 20,000 square miles of very rich and fertile country, and capturing many prisoners and much war material.

During August and September we made a complete wheel to the eastward, pivoting on the north end of Lake Nyasa and driving our enemy, who had now been reinforced from the north, eastwards from the districts of Iringa, Ubena, and Songea, the occupation of Iringa being timed to synchronize with the arrival of General Van Deventer at Kilossa.

From October to February, the troops under my command had some very hard fighting. In addition to our original opponents we had to deal with Major Kraut (the late adversary of the second division) on our right while the Tabora forces, under General Wahle, ordered to join Kraut, came down on our left and across our lines of communication. Kraut, in his attempt to contain Colonels Hawthorn and Murray, suffered very heavily on the Ruhudje river, and the Tabora forces lost about half their numbers in getting across.

Between Oct. 30 and Nov. 26 we inflicted over 600 known casualties on the enemy. The known enemy casualties we have inflicted up to date are: European, 56 killed, 275 captured; native soldiers, 326 killed, 1,093 captured. To them must be added the many hundred askaris wounded and deserters, who have got away. Our casualties have been slight in proportion.

We have also captured two out of four 10.5 cm. howitzers, one 8.8 gun, one 6 cm. gun, three smaller guns, nine machine guns, and forced General Wahle to abandon two naval 13-pounders soon after he captured them from us near Iringa on his way to join Kraut.

The enemy companies which recently escaped southwards to the Portuguese border under Kraut, have been reduced to an average of 10 Europeans and 50 askaris each, about one-third of their strength in September.

The dispatch concludes with references to the various officers and officials and services, to whom General Northey finds himself specially indebted.

"IT PUT ME BACK ON JOB" SAYS STEVENS

Says It is Astonishing the Way Tanlac Overcame His Troubles

The stomach regulates the condition of the blood and is the fountain head of health or disease as the case may be. Tanlac is intended primarily for the regulation of the stomach and the correction of catarrhal inflammation, but, it is no uncommon thing for persons who have used it, to find that it has relieved them, not only of indigestion but also of rheumatism, kidney derangements and many other ailments not generally recognized as having their origin in stomach trouble.

The experience of Albert Stevens, a well-known employee of the Archibald & Holmes Construction Company, who lives at 17 Osler Avenue, Toronto, as related in the following statement, very forcibly demonstrates the remarkable powers of the "Premier Preparation." Mr. Stevens says:

"Off and on for several years I have been bothered with my kidneys and have had frequent pains in the small of my back. So, during the past Summer I had an attack which completely disabled me for doing anything in the way of work. I simply had to give up my job, which was paying me seven dollars a day, and go to bed. If my back had been broken it could not have hurt worse. It was something like lumbago and extended all down through my hips and the muscles and leaders of my legs. I could hardly bear to turn over in bed, the pain was so severe, and the only way I could raise myself up in bed was by catching hold of the bed-post, and when I did get up I was barely able to hobble around. Well, I was laid up this way for two months and while I tried the best things I knew of, I never did get up and out until I got Tanlac.

"One day I saw a Tanlac testimonial from a man I know personally, so I decided to try it. I was flat on my back in bed when I began on Tanlac, and it may seem astonishing, but it's a fact, by the time I finished my first bottle I was able to go back to work and I haven't lost a day from that time until now. My kidneys don't bother me any more, my back never hurts and I'm enjoying fine health. I have never found anything that did the work like Tanlac and I certainly appreciate what it has done for me enough to tell others about it."

Tanlac is sold in Peterborough by W. B. Warne Drug Co., Ltd., in Havelock by A. C. Denike, in Lakefield by Tanner Drug Co., Ltd.

Insect Language.

Insects, like birds and animals, have their calls, naturalists say. But the sounds they produce include the rubbing together of their limbs or wing covers and the vibration of the wings, so they cannot always be spoken of as voices. Flies and bees undoubtedly mean something when they hum louder and louder.

The Newest Theology.

A boy at a recent examination in Scripture was asked where Cain went after he killed Abel. He replied that he went to bed. The teacher wanted to know how he made that out. He said: "It's in the chapter, sir, that Cain after he had killed Abel, went to the land of Nod."

Be Optimistic.

Believe and hope, says a writer. Hope so much that it will be difficult to believe all of it, but believe it any way. In short—believe and hope that all you believe will come true; and hope and believe that all you hope will come to pass some day.

The Dread Of An Operation

Keeps Many Pile Sufferers From This Risky and Expensive Method of Treatment—You Can Be Cured Without an Operation.

ST. JEAN, Que., Jan. 30.—Possibly you are a sufferer from piles, and have been disheartened and discouraged because your physician has told you that nothing short of an operation will cure you.

You dread the thought of a surgical operation, for, besides the expense and strain on the nervous system, there is the risk of life itself. Dr. Chase's Ointment has frequently cured piles after surgical operations have failed. It is every day curing cases which physicians have stated to be incurable by any treatment short of an operation.

If you could read a few of the letters we receive from persons who have been cured of piles by using Dr. Chase's Ointment, you would soon be convinced of its wonderful control over this frightfully common disease.

Mr. Charles Beauvois, a well-known citizen of St. Jean, Que., writes: "For fourteen years I suffered from chronic piles and considered my case very serious. I was treated by a celebrated doctor, who could not help me and ordered a surgical operation as the only means of relief. However, I decided to try Dr. Chase's Ointment, and obtained great relief from the first box. By the use of three boxes I was entirely cured. This is why it gives me great pleasure to recommend Dr. Chase's Ointment to all who suffer from piles as a treatment of the greatest value."

CHILDREN ARE DRILLED.

Taught How to Escape Bombs From Airships.

Children in the public schools of London's East End have been taught just what to do when the approach of enemy raiders is signalled. By means of a system of whistles the children know just what to do and there is no confusion. They are taught to lie flat on the floor with intervals of space between them. It has been found that this method has prevented serious loss of life among the little ones in the school buildings.

The police are doing their best to lessen excitement during air raids and to provide protection. The system of warnings are not issued prematurely, and they are withdrawn promptly when all is clear. There are various methods of giving notice of impending danger, and they are proving adequate. By day sirens are sounded, sound rockets are sent up from London fire stations and other points, and constables on motor cycles and ordinary cycles, and in motor cars, are sent out blowing whistles and exhibiting "Take Cover" notices, motor cars bearing the warning illuminated are employed. There are no rockets used from half an hour after sunset to half an hour before sunrise.

When the people have the warning in any of these forms they should at once obey it. Warnings are only issued after information has been received from the military authorities. Adequate cover in the first instance is not so much for protection against bombs, but to avoid the danger of falling shrapnel. Every projectile which bursts in the air scatters five hundred separate bullets or pieces of shell, which, falling to the ground, are just as deadly as rifle-fire.

Much depends on the discretion and prompt action of the police. London is a vast working community, and the one object which the enemy has in view is to interrupt business. The policy of the police is to defeat this purpose by only issuing warnings when absolutely necessary. There is installed at the office of the Commissioner of Police a vast network of telephones which reach all parts of London—all the police stations and sub-stations—and communication is also made by means of column tape printing machines. Orders are carried out without delay, as promptitude is all-essential in these matters. The police have also organized a great system of air-raid shelters—ready-made dug-outs and bomb-proof buildings. These consist of tunnels, the Tubes, arches, strongly built schools, police stations, etc. Accommodation is found in this way for half a million people, without undue congestion. In addition, there are innumerable private buildings available for the public.—Boston Transcript.

READY!

In the newspapers there recently appeared articles telling of the arrival of the American fleet at Queenstown—telling how the Officers of the English Navy had gone to Vice-Admiral Sims and asked him when he would be ready for action. Every American thrilled with pride at his answer—

"WE CAN START AT ONCE."

"READY TO START AT ONCE"—What a wonderful motto for every man, and yet how many of us realize that at any moment we may suddenly be called away from Business, from Home and Friends, from this world of ours to pass in to the Great Beyond.

Are you Mr. Reader, "READY TO START AT ONCE?" Have you made provision for those dependent on you should the call come?

"READY TO START AT ONCE." No man can do more—we cannot afford to do less.

If your loved ones are not already protected against such an emergency you had better act while you have the opportunity. To-morrow may be too late.

Many Industrial Disturbances In Germany

75,000 WORKMEN ARE ON STRIKE IN BERLIN

Industrial Disturbances Spread in Germany--German Socialistic Parties Are United For the First Time ---Workmen's Council Formed and Makes Important Demands Upon the Government--Finnish Revolution is Suppressed.

A SUMMARY OF TO-DAY'S WAR CABLES

(Special to The Toronto Star and The Peterborough Examiner.)

ZURICH, January 30.—Two hundred and fifty thousand workmen were striking in Berlin early yesterday, and 50,000 additional were to go out before night, according to a copy of the Berlin Vorwaerts Socialist organ, received here to-day.

Official Berlin despatches reaching here to-day declared that Socialists "still adhered to the strike."

On good authority it was reported some of the workmen at the great Krupp Works are striking.

The entire war industry is at a standstill, according to the Vorwaerts.

At Hamburg shipworkers in the great Vulcan Yards quit their places. Munition makers in Kiel and navy yards employees there have been out since Sunday.

In Rheinish Westphalia miners are quitting in great numbers, the Vorwaerts said.

SAYS 500,000 ARE OUT.

(Special to The Toronto Star and The Peterborough Examiner.)

AMSTERDAM, January 30.—Five hundred thousand strikers were out on Monday in the city of Berlin alone, according to a copy of the Socialist newspaper Vorwaerts received here to-day.

Five aeroplane factories were shut down on one day the newspaper asserted.

A railroad strike is possible. Railway employees, according to the Vorwaerts met to discuss their future course, but the police dispersed them.

The article mentioned many arrests and encounters, presumably between police and strikers.

(Canadian Press Despatch.)

LONDON, January 30.—Exchange Telegraph despatches via Amsterdam state the grain elevators in Vienna are burning. Enormous damage has been done. Revolutionists are suspected.

(Special to The Toronto Star and The Peterborough Examiner.)

COPENHAGEN, January 30.—In connection with the disturbances in Germany it is of tremendous significance that Philip Cchiedemann, the German Majority Socialist leader, has joined the German Minority Leaders Germany it is of tremendous significance that Philip Schiedemann, the German Socialist parties are united. Heretofore Schiedemann's subservience to the German Government's policy has been so marked as to raise the suspicion he was merely a tool of the Governmnet. It was Schiedemann who conceived the idea of a Stockholm conference of Socialists of the world to discuss peace, a conference which was exposed at the outset as a scheme to twist socialist sentiment into the support of Germany, by the "planting" of a majority of German Socialists in the convention.

Scheidemann as late as last summer was named by the Kaiser to head a Reichstag committee considering constitutional reforms, indicating the Government relied upon him as "safe."

Last week, however, Scheidemann apparently experienced a violent change of heart. Despatches quoted him as making a bitter assault on Chancellor Von Hertling, for his conduct of the Brest-Litovsk peace negotiations.

The German Majority Socialists have consistently supported the German Government, although professing radical belief. The Minority Socialists have as consistently opposed every move of the junkers. It was their persistence that precipitated the cabinet crisis over Chancellor Bethmann-Hollweg.

WORKMEN'S COUNCIL IS FORMED.

The workmen's council, the despatches reported, is to be represented by an "action commission" composed of ten men and women.

Dr. Haase, Ledebour, Dittmann, Philip Schiedemann, Dr. Ebert and Dr. Braund, all Socialists of varying degrees, have joined the council.

prohibited all labour meeting and announced he would not negotiate with German Under-Secretary for the Interior Von Wallrolf formally strikers. He declared, however, that he would receive a delegation of Reichstag members of the Socialists parties.

Philip Schiedemann, German Majority Socialist party leader, with Dr. Haase, leader of the Independent Socialists, and two workmen, formally told Wallrolf of the formation of the workmen's council and demanded that all negotiations relative to the strike be held in the presence of the workmen.

Berlin reported that "it was not known whether Wallrolf would agree to this."

One despatch passed by the German censor estimated the number of Berlin's strikers at 40,000. Another, apparently filed early this morning, put the total number then out at 75,000. The first named message declared "hundreds were joining every hour."

Rumours were circulated here to-day that German soldiers on the east front had shot some of their officers. It was also reported that there were disturbances among the sailors of the German fleet at Kiel. No direct confirmation was obtainable.

Authoritative American sources confirmed the news of the spread of the German strike movement as reported in the press despatches.

Bolsheviki Invitation Has Met With Success

(By J. W. T. Mason.)

(Special to The Toronto Star and The Peterborough Examiner.)

NEW YORK, January 30.—The invitation of the Bolsheviki to the German workingmen to revolt against the Kaiser's Imperialistic Government has won its first serious success.

The formation of a workingmen's council in Germany demanding the right to negotiate with the Government is due to the influence of the German democracy. When workingmen in a semi-autocratic country like Germany form central committees and insist that they be recognized by the government as spokesmen for labour, that is the beginning of a revolution. The extent to which the revolution may be carried depends on the determination of leaders and the spirit of the people.

To predict is unnecessary, rather must the developments speak for themselves. The fact is important, however, that the anti-Government movement in Germany is both economical and political. The workingmen are striking, not only for higher wages but also as a protest against continuing the war to realize pan-German ambitions. A union of aims such as these is always, in itself, a sign of revolution.

This Sum Executive Estimates Will Be Needed to Cover the Cost of Rental and of Heat and Light For the G. W. V. A's New Club Rooms

THE BAND INSTRUMENTS

At a meeting of the executive of the Peterborough branch of the Great War Veterans' Association held last night in the Barrie Building, it was decided to ask the City Council for a grant of $500 to cover the rental, water, lighting, etc., of the association's new club rooms.

A committee composed of the members of the executive and of all former bandsmen who are members of the association was appointed to deal with the agreement from the City Council in respect to the 93rd Band instruments.

A deputation from the Trades and Labour Council waited on the Veterans the other night in regard to the question of the Patriotic Fund, separation allowance, soldiers' pay, etc., and it was decided last night to send to the Trades and Labour Council a copy of a resolution passed by the Veterans, in which the taking over of the Patriotic Fund by the Dominion Government was advocated.

NO MILITARY DAMAGE DONE

German Raiders Apparently Satisfied to Kill Women and Children —Last Night's Raid Failed to Reach Centre of London But Bombs Were Dropped in Suburbs

BODIES RECOVERED

Canadian Press:

LONDON, Jan. 30.— German airmen, as far as could be learned early to-day, failed last night to penetrate to the heart of London. Bombs, however, were dropped in the suburbs.

The enemy raiders during the past two nights did not succeed, and apparently did not attempt, to bomb any military objectives. They merely attempted to kill civilians, and the majority of victims, as usual, were women and children.

Large numbers of the persons killed in Monday night's air raid, according to the Central News, met their deaths in a building, the basement of which was used as shelters. It is believed two bombs struck the building, as the walls were blown out in large sections and all the floors collapsed. In addition to persons from outside being sheltered in the building there was a large night staff at work at the time of the raid. This accounted for the serious mortality.

One of the touching incidents in connection with the raid was the death of a minister who, whenever raid warnings were given, had been in the habit of visiting the various shelters. Monday night he was addressing the people who had collected in one shelter when a bomb dropped on it, killing the minister and a number of others.

29 IN ONE BUILDING.

The Central News says twenty-nine bodies have already been recovered from one building. Firemen and soldiers are still pouring water on the burning buildings. Many bodies were burned most severely. Among the number was that of a woman who still clasped two small children to her breast.

The success of the British airmen against the German invaders in Monday night's raid has caused a discussion in some quarters that the heavy barrage over London during a raid is rather more harmful than helpful. It is said the Air Board should give the British airmen a clear field in dealing with the raiders, instead of employing gunfire, which causes damage to property and some casualties through falling shrapnel.

Record Houses Are Expected

"A Greek Slave" Will Be Produced In Aid of Great War Veterans

Through the kindness of Mr. Kent the available photographs of those taking the principal parts in the forthcoming production of "A Greek Slave" are now on view in Mr. Kent's south window.

A general census of tickets sold was taken last night and the result was most gratifying, pointing to record houses for both performances.

The booking for the performances starts next Monday morning and on Saturday Lieut.-Col. Johnston will draw the lucky numbers by which any one who holds one has the privilege of occupying a box and taking a party with them for 50c.

The numbers will be announced through the medium of the local press on Saturday night. "A Greek Slave" is being staged this time for the benefit of the G.W.V.A. to help furnish the new club rooms, so it is hoped that everyone will help by purchasing a ticket and attending one of the performances.

FRANK JENNE Says:

Better order your suit now and beat the higher prices. After the first of March there will be an advance of from 10 to 20 per cent. in the cost of clothing. Order a Semi-ready, made-to-measure suit now; genuine custom-made; price in the pocket. This will be true economy for you. "Come to me."

RUSSIA WILL REJECT THE TERMS OFFERED BY GERMANY

BRITISH PRESS ON GERMAN SITUATION

(Canadian Press Despatch.)

LONDON, January 30.—While some morning newspapers print with much prominence despatches from Holland and Switzerland representing strikes in Germany as being on a great scale and very serious, the Rotterdam correspondent of the Daily News warns against an exaggerated idea of the size and importance of the industrial upheaval. Other newspapers report workmen in forty war material factories in Berlin alone struck and that many strikes elsewhere have been accompanied by grave disturbances.

The Daily News correspondent says the cessation of work in Berlin apparently was not general in character. The Central Committee of the trades unions intended a general strike, but this was revoked after a speech made by Dr. Von Kuehlmann with which the labour leaders professed to be satisfied temporarily. The strikes which occurred consequently were sporadic. In any case the trades unions committees made their demands very mild in character.

AIR RAIDS BY BRITISH FLYERS REACH THEIR MARK

Six Tons of Bombs Dropped on Enemy Billets, Railway Stations, Trains and Airdromes and Other Military Objectives

ACTIVITY IN AIR

Canadian Press Despatch.

LONDON, Jan. 30. — The second moonlight raid of this year, carried out by Gotha aeroplanes, of which there were about fifteen, was checked by the combined activity of aeroplanes and anti-aircraft guns, which kept the raiders from the heart of London. Conditions were favourable for the raid, the sky being clear and the wind light. Bombs were dropped at various places in Essex and Kent. One machine dropped bombs in the south-western outskirts of London and another in the outlying north-eastern districts. There were a few casualties in south-western London. Several air fights took place and all the British machines returned safely.

LONDON, Jan. 30. — An official statement on aerial operations reads: Good visibility Monday enabled much aviation work in conjunction with the artillery and also some photography to be carried out. British airmen dropped four hundred bombs on various objectives, including Roulers, Menin and the airdrome near Tournai. Several thousand rounds were fired at enemy troops from machines in the air. In the fighting throughout the day, two hostile machines were shot down and six brought down out of control. Three of our machines are missing.

During the night of Monday-Tuesday six tons of bombs were dropped on enemy billets, railway stations and trains and airdromes. All the British machines returned safely.

LONDON, Jan. 0.—In last night's air raid three persons were killed and ten injured. It is feared the bodies of six other persons are buried in the ruins of a house.

LABOUR DELEGATES IN CONFERENCE WITH THE WAR COMMITTEE

Representatives of Labour Are Against Industrial Conscription and the Importation of Any Asiatic Labour

SHIPBUILDING CONDITIONS

(Special to the Toronto Star and The Peterborough Examiner.)

OTTAWA, Jan. 30.— Labour delegates from all over Canada have assembled in Ottawa to-day to continue the conference with the War committee of the Cabinet, which commenced two weeks ago. It is understood that at the last conference the Labour men made many suggestions, and also asked frankly for much specific information from the government.

The discussions are, it is learned, of an informal nature upon two questions. The Labour men have pronounced themselves emphatically that they are against any form of industrial conscription or importation of Asiatic labour.

As the government is to control the great shipbuilding industry in Canada it is proposed that a Shipping Board be established, with representation from Labour on the Board. The Government is urged to establish relations between the shipbuilding industry and employees similar to those arranged in the U. S. A. shipyards. With fair conditions and a thorough understanding it is believed the supply of labour for this great industry can easily be obtained.

It is also declared that a proposal was made by the Labour delegation that the order-in-council respecting prohibition be lightened, so that a light beer, stronger than the one allowed to be sold in Ontario may be manufactured in Canada. At to-day's conference at least fifty delegates were in attendance from every province in Canada. The conferences as before, are of a confidential nature.

Fancy Bread To Be Cut Out

(Special to the Toronto Star and The Peterborough Examiner.)

OTTAWA, Jan. 30.—"Fancy" bread, which it is intended shall be cut out in the future, includes all loaves to a special shape or size, with a special quantity of shortening or other ingredients, such as French bread, etc. It will not include cakes, pies, or pastry. It is understood, however, that a special order regulating the manufacture of the latter will be passed by the Food Controller at an early date.

TERMS ARE ASSAILED

(Special to the Toronto Star and The Peterborough Examiner.)

(By Joseph Shaplen.)

PETROGRAD, Jan. 30. — Russia's Pan-Soviet Congress, the voice of the people, will reject Germany's peace, as offered at Brest-Litovsk, according to every indication to-day.

There is a distinct division of opinion among the Soviet delegates, but the majority, including the extremists or the social revolutionaries of the left, favour such a course, to be followed by the "use of the revolution against German Imperialism."

Speaking in the Soviet Assembly Monday night, Foreign Minister Tretsky frankly declared that he abandoned all hope of a just peace agreement.

"There is no hope for a non-annexation peace now," he declared. "Only a compromise if possible. I cannot promise we will not conclude a separate peace.

"We will declare at Brest-Litovsk that the world considers the German terms murderous.

"We hope Western Europe will not blame Russia if she is forced into a separate peace."

Following Tretsky's pessimistic speech, the Congress adopted resolutions assailing the German peace terms and approving the course of the Bolsheviki delegates at Brest-Litovsk. This delegation was given a free hand in any future negotiations.

TEUTON MINISTERS THERE.

THE HAGUE, Jan. 30.—German Foreign Minister Kuehlmann and Austo-Hungarian Foreign Minister Czernin arrived at Brest-Litovsky on Monday, according to Berlin advices. Despatches quoted Czernin as declaring, prior to his departure from Berlin, that he "might soon return to Vienna on very important state business."

"Peterborough Presents Possibilities Unsurpassed."

WEDNESDAY, JAN. 30, 1918

BE FAIR.

If, in other places the crusade for the exemption of farmers' sons from military service, is associated with as much partizan claptrap, as it is in Peterborough, it is doubtful if the best of the desired results will follow. It is very properly claimed that the exemption of farmers' sons is necessary to keep the farms of the country under productive tillage; for there is no one war need more large and more urgent than greater food supply. But the exemption must be in good faith, and the condition that exempted farmers' sons must, to maintain their exemption, remain on the farms, needs in fairness to be literally and strictly carried out. Reports come from the west of the province that farmers' sons, exempted on these conditions, are not observing them; but many of the exempted farmers' sons, living adjacent to cities and towns, instead of staying on the farms, as required to do, are working in factories in cities and towns. If this is the case and if anything like this is taking place in Peterborough, a distinct breach of faith has been committed, and all the excitement and effort expended in futile attempts to bring influence to bear to interfere—as is virtually impossible—with the decisions of the appeal tribunals, is not only "playing to the gallery," but securing exemptions under false pretensions, and intruding the competition in the urban labour markets of men who have been exempted for specific cause, and on specific conditions, to take the places of men who not having been able to secure the services of solicitious politicians, who have an axe to grind, have been refused exemption and drafted into the ranks.

If farmers' sons who are exempted do not fulfil one of the chief conditions of exemption by remaining on the farm, but seek employment in the cities, not only is the Military Service Act nullified to that extent, and the interests it is intended to promote vitally prejudiced, and the interests of greater production menaced, but an injustice is committed towards the young men who could not secure exemption on the ground of the value of their home services, but were drafted into the ranks and made to don the King's uniform.

Kingston Utilities Commission is encouraging citizens to adopt electric heating by offering "juice" at one cent per killowatt.

A DECIDING FACTOR.

It is welcome news to the allies that the United States will have half a million thoroughly trained and equipped fighting soldiers upon the war front early this spring; and that a million more similarly trained and equipped soldiers, will follow as soon as ships can be made available for transportation.

Such an announcement, made by the Secretary of War of the United States, may seem to contravene the "blue pencil laws" of the censor—by giving authentic information that may be to the advantage of the enemy. But no doubt the United States war authorities are fairly sure of their ground. It may be foreseen that the submarine menace, as a disturber of transportation, has had its teeth pretty well drawn, and that measures have been taken to see that the U-boats will not be a serious factor in interfering with the transport of Uncle Sam's soldiers and their impediments.

Since the United States went into the war about nine months ago, it has not allowed much grass to grow upon the path it has marked out and trodden. While President Wilson has been very busy and business-like in placing the attitude, aims and determination of his country in this tournament of world liberty known in unmistakable terms to the world, active preparations have been literally seething in the great melting pot of war preparation. Allied missions have come and been heard and heeded; conferences with great men, fresh from the great arena of conflict have thrown the whilte light of practicability upon tremendous war plans, whose fulfilment has been pushed with the electric enterprise of our neighbours, energized by the unstinted employment of colossal reserves in materials and money.

In her feverish preparation for taking her place beside the warring allies, and giving inestimable backing, the United States has been working with a success that has magnificently disappointed the most sanguine expectations in building an army, providing for its industrial support at home, transporting soldiers overseas, constructing railways in France, and in other ways preparing the stage, and assembling the "properties" for the last act of the great drama of the war.

This announcement of the Secretary of War sets our minds thinking in new directions. We have for three and a half years been reading and thinking of the tremendously monotonous but always onward grind of the great war machines of the allies. The struggle has been tremendous, and the waiting long, but what at times has seemed unending, now seems to be reaching the triumphant end. The allies have put the Germans and their allies "groggy," and lo, Uncle Sam shies his castor into the ring, ready and willing to swing, or help swing, the knock-out blow. When the great battle lines of democracy seem sometimes to be wavering, it is cheering and inspiring and every way satisfactory, to see the greatest democracy of the world, bringing up its tremendous reserves, to insure the fortunes of the day.

Italy is not only "solid" with the Entente allies, but is putting in some good solid work in wearing down the enemy.

FLAX.

One argument urged against the campaign for breaking up and preparing for cultivation a million or more acres of land in the Northwest, is that the first year such land is only suitable for growing flax. Even if that is the case the work of breaking up the land will not be lost. There is a larger market in Ireland for flax seed than ever before. Domestic disturbances have lessened the supply of flax in the interest of a chief industry of Ireland, the linen trade. Last year the west sent 22 thousand bushels of flax seed to Ireland, at $4.50 per bushel as compared with $2.50 before the war; and the prospect for a profitable market is so good that Northwest farmers next year will increase the acreage under flax from 7,113 acres last year to 12,000 acres this year; so that even a very largely increased acreage of flax in the Northwest would be profitable, as the shortage in other countries will maintain the demand.

Besides, we do not know when the war will end, and it would be no risk to have a million acres broken in readiness for a crop in 1919. If the war is over there will be demand for the increased production, and, besides, the land would even if it were, unwisely, not used for cropping, be broken ready for receiving those of our returned soldiers, whom it is proposed after the war to settle on the land.

People who are best qualified to know assert that within four or five months the question in regard to the world's food supply will be, not what we want but what we can can get.

CANADA'S POSTAL HOLD-UP ON READING FOR SOLDIERS.

Postage	$1.92

That was the amount a battery auxiliary paid in postage on sixty copies of a weekly magazine mailed to a Toronto artillery unit in France.

In England a paper or a weekly or monthly magazine can be left at the nearest post office and will go to the soldiers free of charge.

In the United States a one-cent stamp will carry a magazine from any American post office to an American soldier overseas.

Canada's government is not ashamed to bleed soldiers' relatives for more in postage on a magazine, than the original cost of the magazine. Canada's army in France is an army of readers. This country's rulers are revealed as a Shylock government in the appalling rates of postage they exact from parents, wives and sisters who mail newspapers and magazines to sons, husbands and brothers at the front.—Toronto Telegram.

PLYMOUTH BROTHER IS REFUSED EXEMPTION.

Judge Could Not Find This Sect Opposes Combatant Service.

KINGSTON, Jan. 29.—Judge Lavell refused an application for exemption made by R. R. Wallace, a member of the Plymouth Brethren, on the ground of religious scruples, as he could find no proof that this sect does not recognise combatant service.

The Judge has given him the right to appeal to the Central Appeal Judge.

The Retired Food Controller Communicates A Postscript

Hon. Mr. Hanna Makes a Post-official Appeal Through the Press to Canadian People

Sir,—It is unnecessary for me to point out to you the serious world food situation and the imperative need of encouraging increased production during 1918. I am writing to thank the newspaper editors for what they are doing to make known the facts and to arouse the people to a realisation of the gravity of the problem. I want also to suggest the advisability of stimulating local interest, as much as possible, in ways and means by which production may be increased in each and every community. In this work, the newspapers can perform an invaluable public service and at the same time interest their readers in practicable discussions which have a direct bearing upon local problems in connection with the effort for increased production. I am taking the liberty of suggesting a few of the questions which might be so discussed.

In some of our provinces there is certain legislation restrictive of agricultural production. It may be necessary under normal conditions, but in times of national peril such laws should be suspended or amended. Then, too, most of the provinces control their own game and fish laws; the supply of food could be considerably increased by making use of game and fish to a greater extent than is possible at present, if these laws were carefully considered in the light of the urgent need for food and special regulations put in force with a view to utilising to the utmost every available source of food supply while the present emergency continues. The keeping of hogs within the limits of Canadian municipalities has been strongly advocated, but is practically prohibited by existing municipal restrictions. The people living in suburban areas adjoining the cities and towns of Germany maintain and raise in this way nearly half a million hogs in excess of the total hog population of Canada. Poultry-keeping within municipal areas, under reasonable restrictions, would also be of general benefit. Legislation controlling and reducing the number of useless dogs in the country would do much to promote production of sheep.

Small lot gardening should also be encouraged. In this way an abundant supply of fresh vegetables would be assured and land now devoted to market gardens could be used for grain crops. This year the idea ought to be not merely to grow good potatoes and all kinds of vegetables. Last year thousands of city people did a little gardening for the first time. This year their experience will be of value, and the results should be in proportion to their proficiency.

You are conversant with local conditions in your municipality, and, doubtless, can add to the suggestions which I have made. Greater production offers the only permanent solution of the food problem and I am confident that the press of Canada will do its utmost to impress the facts upon the people of this country.

Closely connected with the problem of increased production is the necessity of organising the man power of the cities so that it may be the greatest possible factor in the successful prosecution of the war. This at once suggests a large number of questions in regard to the employment of men in unnecessary work, multiplication of services, etc. By discussion of some of these problems through the newspapers much good could be accomplished.

Information which this office can give you in connection with any of these matters will be supplied gladly and we shall welcome any suggestions which you may be good enough to offer. We have established a general information division which is engaged in collecting the latest available data in regard to the questions which I have mentioned. This division is at your service.

Yours very truly,
W. J. Hanna,

Arts and Crafts Column

HUGHSON JOHNSTONE, painter and decorator, 416 Water street, will answer in this column each Wednesday for Examiner readers, questions relating to painting, sign-writing, paper-hanging, kalsomining, furniture polishing, decorating, etc., for the benefit of those who might like doing their own work. Questions sent to the Examiner will receive attention in due course.

"Ignorant," City: Through your very helpful "Arts and Crafts" column, will you kindly publish some safe method to refresh oil paintings. I am told it can be done.

Ans.—I am a little timid, just a little afraid, to suggest anything, especially if your paintings are at all valuable. There are many ways that have been adopted to freshen them up, but oftentimes at some expense to the painting. I am told, however, an application of fuller's earth has a very refreshing effect, and is harmless. But be careful if it is an old master. You may destroy it by careless dusting.

"Constant Reader," Peterborough: I have had some painting done lately and it has the appearance in places of the dried skin of an apple after having stood for a long time. It has sort of frizzled or shrunk, and does not shine in those places. Can you explain the cause?

Ans.—Your paint has the undesirable earmark of the novice. It was not painted; it was slopped or daubed on. Painting consists of infinitely more than merely laying paint on a surface with a brush. There's a certain art and knack to it that is acquired only after years of practice. I say this with all due respect to many who think otherwise. The word paint is so elastic that it is impossible to describe it in a word, or even a sentence. There are hundreds of combinations called paint, and as many ways of treatment, to say nothing of the multitudinous surfaces to which paint is applied. Your paint was evidently laid on too heavy.

T.T.T., East City: Will you please tell me what to put into paste to make burlap stay on my wall?

Ans.—Usually the addition of Canada balsam, Venice turpentine, or molasses will do. But when the walls are sand finished, porous, or hot with lime, some special preparation is necessary. Let me know the conditions.

"Vexed," Otonabee, Ont.: I have just had my bedroom papered and the paper is all cracking in the corners. Can you kindly tell me, through your "Arts and Crafts" column, what is the cause of it?

Ans.—There are a great many causes, some by the house settling, some because the paper was not cut in the corners. Vibration will cause it, and in many cases it really seems inexplicable. I have known it to crack in corners where the house was old and apparently had ceased settling, the paper cut in the corners and little or no vibration. But whether we know the reason or not, we cannot get away from the fact that there is a cause for every effect even though we cannot find it.

"Dressmaker," Lakefield, Ont.: I had a little sign with "Dressmaking" painted on it in gold letters only two months ago, and now the gold has all nearly gone off. Someone told me it was German gold, and that British gold stands better.

Ans.—It is quite evident that neither German nor British gold leaf was used to letter your sign. As either one should last longer than two months, I imagine it was gold bronze that was used, and as there are many very inferior bronzes, some of which turn dark quicker than others, I guess one of them was used on your sign.

"White Lead," Lindsay, Ont.: I will feel very grateful if through your very instructive "Arts and Crafts" column you will tell me how I can discover whiting or whatever it is that white lead is adulterated with? I am sure your many readers will welcome the information.

Ans.—I am neither a chemist nor an analyst, and so cannot enlighten you very much, but I do know that all lead is not adulterated, and I think I can safely say no lead is adulterated with whiting. I also know that many painters will not agree with me. Space will not permit my reasons. Suffice it to say whiting would cost as much to grind up as pure white lead, so why whiting? There are far better adulterants, such as Barytes. A simple test used by some painters is simply to place some white lead (after extracting the oil) on say a little fire shovel and allow it to become red hot, enough to melt the lead. The adulterants will burn and leave an ash, the lead will not; so, the more ashes, the more adulterant.

Peterborough, Jan. 29, 1918.

Editor, Examiner:

Dear Sir,—The letter from "Fairplay" in last night's issue has on the face of it a semblance of logic. It would be most unfair if one man had to go and another could stay because Mr. Knox advised it, if the matter was an arbitrary one. But it is not.

The men that stay at home on the advice of the agricultural representatives are kept here not for their own sakes but because we MUST have food. Not a fit man has been exempted for his own sake—not one—the national good is the only criterion both for the man who goes and the man who stays.

Fairplay is making a great mistake if he thinks the tribunals care one jot about the individual and quite rightly too. The country needs every fit man, either in the trenches or on the farm.

But there is another view. Fairplay speaks of the magnificent salary the country pays the conscript. Here there is a kick. I think the farmer's son, aye and the farmer, too, should be conscripted. I think every man should be pressed into the country's service whether it be to fight, to make munitions, or to produce food and any other essential thing required to win the war, and pay all alike, and let all work to the State and be equally paid.

This could easily be done if an act was passed to suspend all payments—interest, rent, taxes, and all debts and making the law of outlawry of debts, etc., stand in abeyance till the end of the war, and all produce of every kind belong to the state in lieu of taxes, and all the people be rationed and clothed, etc., out of the produce of all the labour.

So, too, the foreigner who lives here under the protection of Canadian institutions grabs the big wages, and is immune from conscription would have to toe the mark with the rest, and he that would not work for the state, neither should he eat, and if fit, he should go and fight for the liberties he now enjoys.

I remain, etc.,
JUSTICE.

FRENCH FINANCES.

Paris, January 30. — France has appropriated for the expenses of the war 87,200,000,000 francs from Aug. 1, 1914, to December 31, 1917. Not all the appropriations have yet been spent. During the same period the interest paid on the public debt was 10,700,000,000 francs, and additional civil expenses amounted to 8,000,000,000 francs; a total of 106,500,000,000 francs. The government receipts cover 101,000,000,000 francs. Of this sum 15,300,000,000 was raised by taxes and the remainder by loans. Nineteen billion three hundred million francs was obtained abroad.

TALES OF THE RANKS

A CHIP OF THE OLD BLOCK

By 2nd Lieut. E. Eve

Sergeant William Perkins was a fighter to the backbone. He came of a seasoned fighting stock. Three brothers were stalwart serving members of the Service—two of them winners of the D.C.M., and all of them as hard as nails and still "carrying on." A fourth brother—"one o' them dare-devil sort o' chaps," as the sergeant explained—had left home five years before the war, and though nothing had been heard of him, it was presumed that he was indulging his dare-devilry on the field of war.

His father was one of the Regular Army's "old 'uns"—a grizzled veteran of seventy, but still straight-spined and active, and with a certain brusqueness of manner that betokened the professional warrior of former days. Even his mother had to be reckoned in the family's fighting strength. She, Amazon that she was, fought his father—mostly on the disturbing question of finance.

Perkins himself had joined up at the outbreak of war; had given up a fairly lucrative business as purveyor of food for cats. Subsequently he got rather badly "plugged" at the first battle of Ypres, and now was acting as bombing instructor at home. He chafed at the comparative inaction, but the nature of his disability always challenged his fighting spirit and compelled him to remain where he was. His days of field service were over.

He must have been in some such questioning mood on a particular morning in September, when, with a man to help him, he was detonating bombs in readiness for a "stunt" which the brigade bombing officer was to observe.

"'Ealthy work, this," he remarked to the man, with sarcasm.

"It's got to be done though, sergeant, ain't it?" replied the man, who knew something of his grievance. "An' I should like to meet the feller who knows more about bombs than you."

"Bombs—and babies—is my line, I s'pose," agreed the sergeant, gloomily. Whether, by "babies," he referred unkindly to the people he instructed, or to his particular quiver of nine, was not quite clear.

The bombing party marched up and began to remove the bombs in preparation for the attack. The sergeant moved across to the bombing trench, satisfied himself that everything was in order, and took up a position of observation.

The practice attack then proceeded. Posts were stuck up in the trench representing the enemy, and these the men assailed with bombs as they advanced. Stuffed sacks—instead of posts—also representing the enemy, were grouped behind occasional traverses, and these the men had to deal with according to position, both of themselves and the enemy. The bayonet was to come prominently into action in these cases.

Everything was going well, and the sergeant smiled with satisfaction.

The first bayonet man suddenly darted forward, wildly excited. Like one infuriated, he dodged round a traverse, and shouting madly, charged the sacks, driving his bayonet deep into them, withdrawing and driving in again, uttering a savage growl as he did so.

At the moment when the bayonet man started off so unexpectedly, a bomb had been thrown, evidently intended for the same objective. It landed just behind the man at the sacks, who was so blindly intent on his task that he did not realise his danger.

A queer expression came over the sergeant's face as he looked at the man and the bomb. Then he moved. With lightning rapidity he flung himself into the trench. As he jumped down into it, the man with the bayonet turned, and the sergeant, glancing at him, seemed to hesitate for one breathless moment. He then pounced on the bomb and flung it desperately over the parapet. No sooner had it left his hands than it exploded, blowing off three of the sergeant's fingers and wounding him severely about the face and arm.

As they carried him away, quite conscious but wracked with agony, the man whose life he had saved uttered an exclamation which drew the sergeant's eye on him again. They looked fixedly at each other, and then the man spoke.

"Bill!" was all he said, but with much agitation.

The sergeant looked strangely puzzled.

"I'm your brother Alf," the voice went on, "and you've gorn and knocked yerself about all for me . . . Bill, don't yer know me?"

The sergeant made an effort to grasp the situation.

"It ain't dare-devil Alf?" he said weakly. "Thought yer name was Jones."

"It's me right enough, Bill. 'Spect I've changed a bit in eight years . . . felt mad, I did, Bill . . . and thought they was real Germans. I'll tell yer about the name later on . . . Bill!"

Sergeant William Perkins extended his unshattered hand.

THE ROMANCE OF LABOUR ORGANIZATION

Splendid and Well Prepared Address Delivered by Mr. Joseph Wearing to the Members of the Trades and Labour Council—Progress Made Since Beginning of Last Century is Reviewed.

"With the reading of a good deal of history to my credit I can truly say that for romantic, thrilling story, gripping human interest, and wide range of positive information the phase of history dealing with the record of the growth of labour organizations, particularly in Great Britain, will take a place second to none," said Mr. Joseph Wearing in beginning a most interesting address on the subject, "The Romance of Labour Organization," before the members of the local Trades and Labour Council at a largely attended meeting last night.

"The real beginning of labour organization such as we know it," said Mr. Wearing, "is found in the early part of the last century, and was due to the economic revolution through which industry was passing. Briefly, the case for Trade Unionism at that time was this: Formerly producers worked independently or in families or small groups, they themselves controlling the processes and owning the materials and the products of their labour. A simple illustration of this phase of industry would be the Indians in their reservations making and disposing of their baskets and brooms. Under this system there were masters and servants of course, but their relations were close and their interests practically identical.

Machinery Made Change.

"With the invention of modern machinery, however, and the introduction of what is known as the factory system, there followed a division of labour among the wage-earning classes and a concentration of capital controlling the sources of production and the finished products on the part of employers. The result of this was a distinct cleavage between the great mass of toilers on the one hand, each unable to turn out and market any finished product himself and being therefore at the mercy of his employer, and on the other hand the smaller capitalistic class with the whole power of concentrated wealth behind them. The burning iniquity of the times was that employers with all the advantage on their side, had the legal right to combine to keep wages down, while working men, with all the odds against them, were prohibited by law from combining to keep wages up. Thousands of poor journeymen were punished for the crime of combination with all the rigors of the harsh law of a hundred years ago, but there is absolutely no case on record where an employer was punished for the same offence. For a quarter of a century or more during the repression period fierce battles raged around this issue, but in 1825, in the reign of George IV., after a momentous struggle, an Act was passed which effected a real emancipation, inasmuch as the right of collective bargaining on the part of workmen involving the power to withhold labour from the market by concerted action was for the first time established.

"From 1829 to 1842 we have the revolutionary period of labour organization. Although combination for the sole purpose of fixing hours or wages had ceased to be illegal it was possible to prosecute workmen upon various pretexts, and every obstacle was placed in the path of the progress of Trade Unionism.

First Real Progress.

"The first real progress took place between 1843 and 1860. During these years the Trade Union world adopted a new model of organization under which Trade Unionism obtained a financial strength, a trained staff of salaried officers, and a permanence of members hitherto unknown.' A strong revival of Trade Unionism during the early part of this period culminated in the formation in 1845 of the National Associaton of United Trades for the Protection of Labour, which was based on the two facts, namely, that the industrial classes were not receiving a fair wage for a fair day's' work, and that up to that time all efforts to obtain a fair wage for a fair day's work were entirely unsuccessful. Strange to say, however, we find with the growth of Trade Union a tendency to discourage strikes because of the general harm resulting and a tendency rather to seek bases of understanding with employers. The first really great Trade Union grew out of these times (a Trade Union meaning a union of Labour Unions within the same trade), this Union being the Amalgamated Society of Engineers, a truly remarkable society, which, with its salaried officers and complete organization combining the functions of a trade protective society with those of a permanent insurance company, set 'a new model' for labour organizations.

The Junta.

Trade Unionism for the next ten years or so was dominated by the influence of five men commonly known as the Junta. The work of these five men was directed toward political action through the Trades Council, which had been growing up in the leading industrial centres with the object of alleviating the law as affected the working classes. Up to this time the Master and Servants Act had been the means of intolerable oppression on the part of employers. A workman breaking his contract of service was sentenced as a criminal and was not even allowed to give evidence on his own behalf. From the time of the Black Death, in the reign of Edward III., thousands of poor workmen had been imprisoned for a single breach of contract of service. Through the efforts of the Junta this law was remedied in 1867, marking the first positive success of Trade Unionis in the legislative field. A further advance was also made later on in the matter of picketing. This right was only won after many bitter conflicts with employers and officers of the law. As late as 1867 a famous judge, the late Baron Bramwell, held that pickets were guilty of molestation and liable to imprisonment if they even gave a 'scab' a black look. The year 1875 marked 'the culmination of legal victory.' In this year, by the passing of the Employers and Workmen Act imprisonment for breach of engagement was totally abolished, peaceful picketing was expressly permitted, and collective bargaining, the real object of Trade Unionism with all its necessary accompaniments, was after fifty years of legislative struggle finally recognized by the law of the land.

Much Ground Gained.

"Time will not permit me to give any detail of all the ground gained in the legislative field: the legislation regulating factories, the shortening by law of the hours of labour, the restriction of child labour, the modification of the common law doctrine of common employment which enabled employers to escape damages for injuries where the injury was due to the negligence of a fellow-workman. The fact is, however, that Trade Unions, after the seventies, became a very important factor in British politics, particularly after the great dock strike of 1889. The first labour members elected to Parliament in Great Britain were Alex. MacDonald, returned for Stafford, and Thomas Burt, returned for Morpeth in the general elections of 1875. Later years brought to the House of Commons such men as Ben. Tillet, John Burns, Will Thorne, Kerr Hardie and Tom Mann, men whose names are household words in every workman's home. John Burns eventually becoming President of the Local Government Board, the first labour member to obtain Cabinet rank.

"Time will not permit me to touch on the history of labour organization in America. In any case our historic associations are with Great Britain, and the history of Trade Unionism there has much more value for us. Our labour affiliations are, however, with the United States, and for his reason it may be profitable to say a word with regard to conditions in that country.

The American Situation.

"There are two distinct classes of labour organizations in America: Trade Unions proper, that is, unions of workmen engaged in the same trade and industrial unions, or industrial, as they are called, that is, unions of workmen engaged in the same industry, irrespective of the different trades engaged in that industry. An example of the Trade Union would be the International Typographical Union, and an example of the industrial would be the United Mine Workers' Union. Then too there are unions in both of these classes which have joined together in federations and there are other unions which have held out against federation.

Some Labour Problems.

"In conclusion I would like to briefly indicate some of the problems facing labour and touch also on some of the methods of solution. No one can study closely the conditions arising out of this war without coming to the conclusion that a class consciousness is awakening among the workers of the world that will concentrate in immediate action after the war is over. The wage-earners have now got their eyes open to the effects of class privilege and private monopoly as never before, and are preparing to state their views with no uncertain sound. The recent election of Ben Tillet in North Salford over the Union candidate, endorsed by the Government, was one of the straws showing which way the wind is blowing. These are some of the things which workers positively demand: (1) The right of collective bargaining everywhere with all that this right entails. You are aware of course that this right has certainly not yet been won. For instance, the United States Steel Corporation consistently refuses to recognize any union whatever, and you probably remember the battle royal with that old war-horse, Lord Penrhyn, owner of the Bethesda State Quarries, who stood on his right of closing his quarries against the world rather than treat with any labour union. (2) A minimum wage. 'The best economists have declared that wages should never fluctuate below the line of proper subsistence, and that a minimum wage should become a fixed charge on industry like taxes. (3) Public ownership of natural resources, such as minerals, water power, etc., and the prevention of private monopoly of any of these things. (4) Public ownership of all great public utilities such as railways, street car service, express, telephone and telegraphs, electric power for public service; in fact, all those utilities which are for the benefit of the general public. (5) An equitable system of taxation. Our present system of taxation is neither scientific nor fair. It misses those who should pay the most, hampers development, tends to make the poor poorer, and is designed to prevent squealing where squealing would do the most harm to those in power. The burden imposed upon us by this war will fall where it has always fallen, upon the broad backs of the industrial classes, unless we have a more equitable system of taxation. (6) Representation of labour in legislative administration. There should be a labour representative on the Workmen's Compensation Board, for instance.

About Methods.

"As to the methods to be adopted to bring about desired results, perhaps a word should be said. In the struggle between Trade Unions and employers, the main weapons of the unions have been the strike and the boycott, and the main weapons of the employers, the closed shop and the black list. Time will not permit me to discuss the use of these weapons, but I would like to say that strikes have been economically proved to be expensive remedies. Long experience has proved that a conciliatory attitude along with full publicity will in time break down the stiffest opposition. When the general public once becomes fully conscious of a wrong, measures will be taken to remedy that wrong. It is upon this principle that our own Canadian Act for dealing with labour disputes is based. I know this Act is far from perfect, but I believe, too, it is a start in the right direction. After all, the relation between employers and workmen should be co-operation and not antagonism, and both have the right to a fair reward for what they put into their work, whether it be brawn and muscle, or brains and foresight. It is my very strong opinion that on the whole the methods employed by the American Federation of Labour will be productive of the best results.

Through Parliament.

"Some labour demands must come through Parliament, and the future of the Labour Party in Parliament in this country is of vital interest to all labour men. My personal opinion is that for many years, perhaps, until we have large industrial centres, the best policy of labour men is to support that candidate of one of the two great parties who will be their best friend if elected; at the same time taking every means to educate the public to their requirements and giving the fullest publicity to all their endeavours. Be fair with the public; make no unreasonable demands; stick together; and you are bound to win out. Above all, beware of demagogues in public life, who will exploit you for their own advancement.

"This war has proved that the hearts of the industrial classes generally beat right and true. They are opposed to tyranny in any form and are dying every day that liberty may be established. My message to you in the face of all I have said to-night is this: 'Be Strong!'

"It matters not how deep entrenched the wrong,
How hard the battle goes, the day how long;
Faint not—fight on! To-morrow comes the song."

MERCHANTS WOULD PUT BAN ON LARGE BAGS AND MUFFS

Owing to the heavy losses suffered recently by Ottawa merchants at the hands of shoplifters, drastic steps are expected to be taken in an attempt to stamp out this crime. Proprietors of Sparks street stores have signified their intentions of going into the matter of female shoppers carrying large "knitting bags" and muffs while making purchasing expeditions.

One merchant who has suffered considerably at the hands of light-fingered individuals, declares his intention of having the Retail Merchants' Association take up the menace at a meeting to be held shortly.

It is not believed to be the intention to go so far as to ban shoppers who carry bags or muffs of moving van proportions, but it is likely an appeal will be issued to women to disregard this dictate of Dame Fashion in this line. Shoppers will be notified that the best way for respectable customers of stores to avoid being regarded with suspicion and watched is by shedding this portion of their street make-up.

"You could carry off a fur coat in some of these bags women are carrying now," says a dealer. "The great majority of women use them patriotically to help along the 'carry-your-parcels' campaign, but there are a few who put them to other uses and these are the ones we must be protected against."

"KNITTING DAY" AT BASEBALL GROUNDS.

Chicago, Ill. — "Knitting Day", once a week, may be established at the National League parks this season if arrangements under way here are carried to completion. The Chicago club formerly admitted women free one day a week, but a year ago the National League passed a rule abolishing "ladies' day." Officials of the local team now propose to ask a renewal of the custom at the next meeting of the league, but instead of calling it "ladies' day" it will be known as "knitting day." It is said that five of the eight clubs of the National League favor a free day for women. It prevails at the local American League park.

German Masses More Concerned About Their Economic Troubles.

Despite the heated discussions on the platform and in the press over the bill to remove a few of the inequalities of the Prussian franchise system, the working masses of Germany are not taking any great interest in the proceedings, according to an article written for a recent issue of Die Glocke of Berlin by August Winnig, a prominent pro-Government Socialist and labour union leader. As summarized in the London press, Herr Winnig asserts that the spirit of the people is very like that of 1848, when the workmen of Berlin are said to have met the announcements of revolutionary reform by saying, "That does not help us poor people."

Winnig represents the German working classes as absorbed in their economic troubles and as recognizing that no amount of democracy in the Government can remove the blockade. He also says that there is now great bitterness about the increasing militarist control of labour. Until a few months ago the necessary labour for the munitions industries was provided by dismissing men from the army. Such men were compelled to work, and were subject to the provisions of the auxiliary service law, but within these limits they were "free citizens."

Since the removal of General Croner from the War Bureau the military authorities have adopted a different practice. They have sent back to the front thousands of the men who had been released, and they have filled their places with soldiers who are merely "on leave for work." These measures are considered to be directed against the trade unions, and to serve the interests only of the employers, while at the same time there is the utmost possible restriction of freedom of speech as regards wages and conditions of work.

British Women At All The Fronts

By LIEUT. C. VINCE

Where are the British? said the American writer the other day, repeating the question which the German propagandists in America have been asking; and he answered it at once:

"They are everywhere. They are holding their own line in France and Belgium, rendering aid to the French line wherever needed, helping Italy batter her way to Trieste, cleaning Germany out of Africa, furnishing the bulk of Sarrail's army in Macedonia, fighting their way through Mesopotamia, protecting Egypt, guarding that vital waterway, the Suez Canal, aiding the Russians in Galicia, battling with the Germans and Turks in Palestine, and policing all the Seven Seas by day and night, scouring them of mines and submarines. There is no nation whose troops are so ubiquitous."

That answer is true of more than Britain's armies and her men; it is equally true of her hospitals and her women. "They are everywhere." The British women could find honourable work to do for the cause of the Allies in the security of their own uninvaded country, yet they were not content only to do that. They were no even content to serve only in their own army as thousands of women are now serving, in the base camps and hospitals overseas, in France, in Macedonia, in Malta, in Egypt, and in the casualty clearing stations close behind the British lines. They were not content only with this war service. They have gone to all the fronts. They are helping France and Belgium, Russia and Serbia, Italy and Roumania, and in the invaded countries they have suffered many of the dangers and hardships and seen the worst horrors of invasion. They did not wait to go. They went at once, when help was most needed and most hard to give.

Before the end of the second month of the war a complete hospital of 120 beds staffed entirely by British women was established in Antwerp. It was there through the whole siege, and left only when the last of its wounded had been moved in safety, and when the inhabitants had fled. It returned to England. A month later that same hospital, re-equipped, was at work in France. While this hospital was with the Belgians all through the siege, other British women, working in field ambulances, were with the Belgian army during its retreat to the Yser. They were with it at Ghent, at Furnes, at Dixmude, and at Fervyse, where their dressing station was in a cellar, only twenty yards behind the trenches; and a little later, in November, when the Belgians were established on their new line, British women, doctors and nurses, were in charge of a Belgian typhoid hospital at Calais. This was typical of the help given to the Belgian army in the first months of the war. Its value was the greater because it was given at once, and at the moment of Belgium's greatest peril. She had British women working for her before even the armies of her Allies were ready to come to her support.

First Hospital.

Early in December, 1914, the first large hospital, organised and staffed by British women, for service under the French Red Cross, left Britain. It was set up in the old Abbaye de Royaumont, and in those early days had a hundred beds. It has since increased them to 400, and in the first twenty months of its work treated over 2,000 patients. It was of this hospital that the Chef de Laberatoire of the Pasteur Institute said, that of the hundreds of military hospitals which he had seen none so completely won his admiration.

Six months later another large hospital of women left Great Britain to work with the French Army. It went to Troyes, but did no long remain there, for it had the honour to be invited to go with the French Expeditionary Force to Salonika, and has been with that force through all its operations.

At the same time that the first large hospital went to France, a unit of 30 British women went to Serbia. It was quickly followed by others, and by the summer of 1915 five were at work with close on 2,000 beds. It fell to them to fight the terrible plague of typhus, which had been left by the retreating Austrian army, and swept like a fire through Serbia. The horrors and the unceasing labour of that time, none but those who saw them can imagine. In one town, nearly every house was a hospital, and the sick were lying close packed and untended on the floors of empty rooms and passages.

A few months after the plague came the German invasion. It carried army and hospitals before it. Some of the British women went with the retreating Serbians over the passes; others stayed with their hospitals, fell into Austrian hands, and for three months were kept prisoners of war. Those who went with the Srbians were seven weeks toiling Serbians were seven weeks toiling writer has told the story of what they suffered; how through it all they made no complaint, sang by their camp fires at night, and in the "impassive lines of their faces, and in their even temper," showed no sign of what they suffered.

When the Serbian refugees began to arrive at Corsica, yet another unit of women doctors and nurses from Great Britain took charge of the camps. When the reconstructed Serbian army took the field again there were three hospitals with it, staffed by British women, though one of them was supported by American money. One of them is with the Serbian army which has re-won part of Serbia; the other two joined the Serbians fighting with the Roumanian army.

Ambulance Units.

Only a few months after Italy joined the Grand Alliance at the end of May, 1915, a small unit of British women were at work on the Alpine front.

It was one of the four British Red Cross motor ambulance units which had gone to the help of Italy, within the first eight months of the war. This unit has done a special work, travelling from hospital to hospital to make X-ray examinations and photographs. It has often worked under fire, and the two British women in charge of it have both been decorated with the Italian bronze medal for military valour, an honour which has rarely if ever been given to a woman before.

In the spring and summer of 1915 came the great German blow at Russia. Poland was lost; town after town fell into German hands; and before the slowly retreating armies poured the inhabitants of the evacuated territory.

In the following spring British women doctors and nurses went to Russia to work among these refugees. They went from place to place, through a countryside crowded with homeless people. They worked in the village hospitals which already existed, and opened new hospitals where there were none. Some of them were in the Kieff hospitals during Brusiloff's great advance, when 9,000 wounded were arriving in a night; and some fought an epidemic of smallpox in a Galician village among scenes as terrible as those of the typhus plague in Serbia, and in a few weeks had inoculated 15,000 Russian troops.

This is one part, but only one part, of Great Britain's work to help her Allies, wherever their need has been greatest. It is one part of the immense work Britain's women have done, seeking our the dangers of war from which their own homes were secure.

NELSON ROUTLEY'S STORE WAS SCENE OF DISASTROUS FIRE

Fire Broke Out Shortly After Five O'clock Last Evening—Damage to Building and Contents Will Likey Exceed Six Thousand Dollars

DEFECTIVE WIRING

Another serious blaze was added yesterday afternoon at 5 o'clock to the series of disastrous fires which have visited the city during the last month, when the Grocery and Meat shop, owned and operated by Nelson Routley, corner of Park and Brock streets, was damaged to the extent of well over $6,000.

THE CAUSE.

The fire, which was started by defective wiring between the floor of the upstairs and ceiling of the shop, was first noticed by Miss McIlroy, a clerk, who detected smoke, and noticed a wire hanging from the ceiling, spitting sparks. The Fire Department was notified by telephone that a small blaze had been started and could be extinguished by chemicals. Assistant Fire Chief Johnson immediately responded to the call, but on investigation found the fire to be more serious than at first anticipated. He called the Chief, who was at the ruins of Saturday's fire, and the entire Department arrived.

GAINED HEADWAY.

By this time the fire had gained rapid headway in the wooden rafters and floor and the metal ceiling rendered the job of locating the source of the fire difficult. However, the Chief tore down the metal and luckily struck the exact spot. A line of hose was laid and the fight begun in earnest.

FIREMAN SUDDARDS SUFFOCATED.

Fireman Suddards, who carried the line of hose into the upstairs, was overcome by the smoke. He was rescued by another fireman and Dr. Eastwood called. In half an hour he returned to the job of fighting the fire.

THE DAMAGE.

This building is seriously damaged by the fire, the entire roof of the grocery store being torn down and burnt. The more serious loss, however, lies in the damage to the extensive stock, which is practically ruined by smoke and water. The piano won by Miss Lillian Routley in a recent contest, was saved. The West End was without light for some time during the fire.

METAL CEILINGS DANGEROUS.

As a result of the fire Chief Grange will make a request for a by-law prohibiting metal ceilings, which, he claims, are dangerous in the fact they seriously retard locating defective wiring.

Former German Ships Carrying U. S. Soldiers

The Leviathan, Formerly the Vaterland, Among Vessels to Arrive in Europe

(Special to the Toronto Star and The Peterborough Examiner.)

PARIS, Jan. 30.—The great steamer Leviathan, formerly the Vaterland, has arrived at a European port, carrying thousands of American soldiers. They had an uneventful voyage and did not sight a submarine.

It is permissible to announce today that the transports Covington, Cincinnati, President Lincoln, President Grant, Powhattan and Madawaska, all of which were seized by the United States at the outbreak of the war, together with the German-Lloyd steamships George Washington, the Mount Vernon, Agemenon, the Aftolus, Mercury, Pocahontas, Huron and Antigon have all arrived.

All these vessels had a safe voyage. They carried thousands of American troops and thousands of tons of supplies.

Every one of these transports has arrived at a European port ten months earlier than their former German crews anticipated when they smashed the machinery aboard each liner.

The announcement may also now be made that the steamers Baron Von Steuben and Baron De Kalbar are now actively engaged in service.

A half million tons of shipping formerly the property of the enemy, is now capable of being utilized by the United States and the Allies.

17 Pairs Of Rubber Boots And 10 Rubber Coats For Firemen

The Fire, Water and Light committee last night authorized the purchase of seventeen pairs of hip-length rubber boots and ten rubber coats for the Fire Department. The coats are manufactured by the Gutta Percha Co., and are bought at $6.75 each through their local agent, Mr. J. E. Firth.

The boots are made by the B. F. Goodrich Co., of Akron, O., and are sold by the Dunlop Tire Company of Toronto. The price quoted by Mr. W. Felderman, of the Dunlop Company, was $11.50 a pair, but the committee felt that this was too high, and also urged that the city receive a consideration in view of the recent purchase of hose. A sample of brown rubber hip boots was shown at $7.50 a pair, and long blacks at $6.90.

Ald. Jones and Ald. M. McIntyre urged that the white boots were none too good for the firemen. They possessed features of comfort, strength and durability that recommended them in spite of the four dollars a pair difference in price.

Mayor Duncan and Ald. Dobbin admitted the superior qualities of the white boots, but failed to see the extra four dollars in value. Ald. Dobbin stated that two sets of the brown boots could be purchased for only $50 more than one set of whites, and he believed this would be more economical.

Mr. Felderman stated that the company might offer some discount on the whites, and Mayor Duncan, Ald. Dobbin and Chief Grange were appointed to negotiate with the Dunlop company for a reduced price. This morning they were offered the white boots at $10.50, which represents a saving of $17 in the purchase of the full equipment for the Department. They will report to the committee on Monday night and the purchase ratified.

HAVE OPTION OF RETURNING TO OWN COUNTRY

Agreement Between United States, Great Britain and Canada

Canadian Press Despatch:

WASHINGTON, Jan. 30.— An agreement between the United States, Great Britain and Canada on the terms of the conscription conventions, which only awaited the signatures of representatives of the governments concerned, was announced to-day by Secretary Lansing in a letter to Chairman Dent of the House Military committee. The conventions give to citizens of each country the option of returning to their country for military service within a fixed period, after which they would be subject to military duty under the laws and regulations of the country in which they reside.

PTE. HENRY STAYED TO ATTEND A DYING COMRADE AT CAMBRAI

In a letter from Trooper P. Mackley, of the Fort Garry Horse, Mr. W. J. Henry has received further details of the celebrated cavalry charge at Cambrai, in which his son was taken prisoner:

B Squadron, Fort Garry Horse,
France, 4th Jan., 1918.

Dear Sir,

Having received various papers and parcels which were intended for your son, Vernon A. Henry, I take the liberty of writing this to you to let you know the circumstances under which your son is missing, for I was along with him at the time.

When we had gone as far as possible we dismounted, after losing almost all our horses. We were surrounded by Germans, so lay low until dusk, and then started to fight our way back to our lines. On the way we came across one of our boys who was seriously hit, and Vern. and two other boys stayed behind to try and bring him in, which was almost impossible, risking their own lives as well, for we were two or three miles in enemy country, and had to fight our way through. We wandered around for hours, and at last, when we thought we should never regain our direction, we stumbled on a German outpost, captured four men in it, and made them tell us our way back. One of our officers was able to speak German.

We had hoped to try and bring in the wounded, but after so long, the way we had wandered around, it was impossible to do so. We all, I speak for the Old Boys in the troop, have the very highest opinion of Henry and the others who stayed rather than leave a wounded chum who was dying.

We have heard from several who are prisoners of war, and I hope to hear from him any time, for he was quite all right when we last saw him. I might mention that any papers or parcels that come to him are opened and the Old Boys share them, for the Post Office people don't take them back. We received two or three parcels lately, and also some papers, which I was interested in reading. I took the cutting out where it mentioned Henry being missing.

Well, I must close, hoping you hear the best of news soon. I shall be glad to hear from my old chum from you, for I have been along with him all the time in France.

GIFT OF SOCKS IS ACKNOWLEDGED

Mrs. Pelty, 274 John street, has received the following letters from Peterborough boys overseas:

France, Jan. 1st.

Mrs. Pelty, 274 John St.:

Dear Mrs. Pelty,—I owe an apology for not answering your parcel of socks which I received and gave out to the Peterborough boys in the Battalion about a month ago. At the time I received them it was impossible for me to write, and when I got to where I could write I had absolutely forgotten about it. However I want to thank you and your club on behalf of the Peterborough boys for their kindness in sending those socks which are appreciated very much out here, and more especially at this time of the year when there is so much mud and water.

Thanking you again, I remain,

Yours Sincerely,
HAROLD HARRISON,
20th Battalion, France.

January 3.

Mrs. Pelty, 274 John St.

Dear Mrs. Pelty, — I take great pleasure in writing this note to you and your friends thanking you for your parcel of socks which were very welcome. I gave them out as far as they would go; also the cigarettes. Some of the boys got the addresses of the persons that knit the socks and will also write. The boys that did not get the names of the people asked me to thank you for them, which I do with pleasure. We had a very good time at Xmas out here, although we are at war, and also at New Years.

I can safely say the Kitchener League is doing its share by the way the boys get the parcels from home.

I will close thanking you again for your kind gift and hoping you will excuse this writing. I remain,

Yours sincerely,
DRIVER G. D. GRAHAM,
80041, C.F.A.

P.S.—The boys and myself also enjoyed the book with the Mutt and Jeff series in it.

Y. W. C. A. NOTES

A programme of unusual interest is to be given at the Young Women's Christian Association on Saturday evening next, in the form of an interpretative recital by Miss Caroline Littlefield and Miss Winnifred Parker.

During the Christmas vacation Miss Littlefield spent a very busy fortnight in New York city, studying with famous teachers various phases of physical culture and expression, which she will use in her gymnasium work at the Y.W.C.A. Miss Littlefield also brought back with her several interpretative studies in motion, two of which will be given by her for the first time in Peterborough, on Saturday evening—"On to Victory," a representation of the spirit of the French nation, and a Russian rhapsody, illustrative of the evolution of the Russian peasant from bondage to freedom.

Miss Parker's readings will also be of a descriptive character, and Miss Mabel Penrose will assist with piano accompaniments. This will be the first of a series of programmes to be given in the green room at the Y.W. C.A. Further announcements will be made later.

* * *

The Association has been exceedingly fortunate in securing Mrs. Jenne to take over the classes in Expression. This department was commenced by Miss Parker during the fall, but, since Miss Parker has succeeded Mrs. Douglas as general secretary, it has been necessary to find another teacher for this work. Mrs. Jenne comes from Montreal, is a graduate of McGill University, and since her graduation has been a teacher of Expression in the Conservatory of Music in connection with McGill. Mrs. Jenne, though but recently come to Peterborough, has already won a place for herself both by her winning personality and her excellence as a reader, and it is confidently expected that the work in the department of Expression and Dramatic Art at the Y.W.C.A. will flourish under her direction.

The class in Home Nursing under the direction of Dr. G. S. Cameron, commenced last evening, with a large enrollment. If any others wish to take advantage of this course of lectures on Tuesday evenings, it would be advisable for them to join the class immediately.

Mr. D. G. Maloney, of East City, has purchased the livery business of Mr. E. A. Stinson, Chambers street. Mr. Maloney will take possession on February the first, and will conduct the business along the same business-like principles that characterized the former ownership.

ENEMY SPY ABOARD OPENS SEA COCKS.

Halifax. — A steamer now in port was one of a convoy of ships which left a United States port recently. When a few hundred miles at sea the ship began to settle, and it was quickly discovered that a deliberate attempt by some one on board had been made to sink the vessel, by opening the sea cocks. The steamer loaded with supplies for the allies, was compelled to leave the convoyed flotilla, and with all speed hasten to Halifax, where she arrived none too soon to save her from going to the bottom. The steamer was weathering a heavy storm at the time the foul deed was discovered, consequently there was no other course to pursue but to run for Halifax. It was evident that there was an enemy spy aboard, perhaps more than one, but there the story ends, for if there was a capture it will never be known to any but the authorities.

FASCINATING STORY OF BIRD LIFE IS TOLD BY MR. JACK MINER

Interesting, instructive and unique was the splendid lecture given last night in Trinity Methodist basement by Jack Miner. An audience of about four hundred, consisting mostly of schol children, heard the famous natural scientist tell of his intimate knowledge with the ways of our wild feathered friends. The speaker, who has studied nature, not from a scientific standpoint, but rather from a natural love of birds, told an almost incredible story of his intimate friendship with the wildest of bird species.

Mr. Miner, who came from Iowa, settled in Kingsville, Ontario, where he gradually developed a keen interest in birds. Closer study awakened greater inquisitiveness until he finally arrived at a "speaking" acquaintance with wild geese, ducks, robins, martins, etc. He became inquisitive as to whether birds returned to the same place each year. This he conclusively proved by tagging his feathered friends before they left. Five consecutive years one wild duck returned and likewise several other of the geese and ducks. By tagging the birds with his name and address, Miner found, through the medium of hunters that shot some of them, that his friends covered 4,000,000 square miles. He heard from hunters in twenty-eight States and Provinces of his pets.

FRATERNAL INSTINCT.

Mr. Miner said that never in man or beast had he seen the fraternal instinct so strongly developed as in the Canadian wild goose. At one time a wild gander, which had been winged, droped at Miner's very door. He carefully bound the broken leg. The goose called to its companions, which had apparently deserted the wounded comrade and one suddenly returned. This goose stayed by the wounded friend and remained practically a prisoner at Miner's home for years, never deserting the friend which could not fly.

ACTUAL PHOTOGRAPHS.

Any who doubted Mr. Miner's straightforward story had their doubts dissolved when actual photographs and moving pictures of the flock of wild geese and ducks which come yearly to the Miner property, were shown.

CRUELTY TO BIRDS.

Mr. Miner emphasized the cruelty of hunters shooting birds for their plumage, which is taken in 90 per cent. of the cases in nesting season, leaving desolated little families to die.

POSED AS A V. C. HERO.

People of Leeds Now Doubt the Exploit of Sergt-Major Martin.

LONDON, Jan. 29.—Gratified newspaper comment appeared here regarding Sergeant-Major Charles Martin, Canadians, as having brought lustre to the Hebrew persuasion by winning the Victoria Cross. Enquiries show that no Canadian of that name received such a decoration. A soldier giving the name recently called on the Lord Mayor and stipendary magistrate of Leeds, and said he was born in Canada, and had won the Cross by getting information in the German lines, resulting in the capture of six guns. The Hebrews of Leeds subscribed £16 for the hero, promising him more in a few days. Later he wrote for the balance of the subscription, but Leeds in the meantime had made enquiries, so, instead of receiving a further testimonial, the "hero" got some straight enquiries, which he ignored. Leeds' Jews, and Gentiles, too, are now inclined to declare at leisure the same sentiments that King David said in haste.

Peterborough Boy Helps To Supply Sammies With Lots Of Smokes

The Ohio Moving Picture Bulletin has an interesting reference to Mr. James Thompson, son of Plumbing Inspector Thompson, of this city.

The Bulletin says:

"The Eclair theatre, Cleveland, has just pulled off a very successful Christmas stunt. The manager of the Eclair is Jim Thompson. He has had everybody in his neighbourhood donating for a Christmas fund for the soldiers. He himself has contributed the profits of a series of benefit performances. And here is the result. Each soldier boy stationed in America who belongs to the district from which the Eclair draws its patronage, received on Christmas day two packages of Bull Durham, two packages of cigarettes, two plugs of chewing tobacco, two tins of smoking tobacco, four packages of chewing gum, one pound of Christmas cake and a crisp new dollar bill. This went to 72 boys. The six boys who are serving in France received double amounts of each of the items.

"We've getting letters every day from the boys," said Thompson, "telling us how delighted they are with the stuff. In fact they were so appreciative that we intend to keep them supplied with tobacco right along. To do this I shall give a benefit performance once in every five weeks and turn all the profits over to the tobacco fund."

Mr. Thompson certainly has struck the secret of success in the show business. He knows how to get 'em to come to his house and to keep on coming.

JANUARY WAS WINTRY MONTH BUT HAS BROKEN NO RECORDS

Monday's Four Inch Snowfall Small Compared With Fifteen Inches In 1873

January, 1918, has been very, very cold, and very, very snowy, but it is not likely to break any records. The weather man is able to tell of other Januaries that were colder and had heavier snowfalls. The coldest on record was in 1857 (the year of the Indian Mutiny), when the mean temperature was 12.8.

The heaviest snowfall was also in a January of war, in 1871, when the Prusians had won their sensational victories over the French. In fact, yesterday, Jan. 28th, was the anniversary of the capitulation of Paris. In 1871 the snowfall during January was over 43 inches. Two years later there was the record snowfall of 15.3 inches in 24 hours. This makes Monday's fall of four inches between 8.30 a.m. and 5 p.m. look quite moderate. But the drift Monday was phenomenal, with the wind blowing 54 miles an hour, as it was at noon.

The theory has been advanced for our consolation that a very cold winter is followed by an early spring. The weatherman dashes these pleasing hopes to the ground. "As a matter of fact," he says, "great accumulations of ice and snow in the Dominion are a retarding influence to an early spring." Records show that no rule can be laid down. There are instances of very cold winters being followed by very warm and early summers, but there are also instances of the contrary kind. In 1857, when the January was the coldest ever, February was warm, but March was cold and April was very cold.

Tried To Rescue Wounded Soldier

Mr. William Henry, assessor, has received another letter containing information concerning his son, Vernon A. Henry, who was taken prisoner during the advance on Cambrai. It appears that Trooper Henry, together with a couple of companions, penetrated the enemy lines to such an extent that they were surrounded by Germans. Realizing their position they lay down until dusk would enable them to return to their lines. They were on their way back when they ran across a wounded comrade, and in an effort to bring the wounded man in were surrounded and captured.

WALTER DAVIDSON HANDS OUT STIFF JOLT TO EVADERS

Former Peterboro' Boy, Police Magistrate at Calgary, Gives Five Year Term to Two M. S. A. Offenders

Calgary. — Five years with hard labour in the Edmonton Penitentiary, was the sentence given by Magistrate Davidson, (formerly of Peterboro), at the police court to Christopher Kinsel and Robert Oswald Knaggs, who were charged with evading the Military Service Act. Both men positively refused to don the King's uniform. Knaggs refused on religious grounds, although he is not a conscientious objector, while Kinsel did not state his reason for refusing to enlist, but a great deal of I.W.W. literature was found in his possession at the time of his arrest.

Kinsel was born in the United States but is naturalized. Knaggs is about 28 years old, and was born in Owen Sound, Ont.

"BOB'S" PRAYER IN FACE OF THE ENEMY

A copy of the following prayer by the late Lord Roberts was presented by him to the soldiers serving under him during the South African war, and is not inappticable to this week of prayer in this terrible war:

"Almighty Father, I have often sinned against Thee. Oh, wash me in the precious blood of the Lamb of God. Fill me with Thy Holy Spirit that I may lead a new life. Spare me to see those whom I love at home, or fit me for Thy presence in peace. Strengthen us to acquit ourselves like men in our right and just cause. Keep us faithful until death, calm in danger, patient in suffering, merciful, as well as brave true to our Queen, our country and colours. If it be Thy will enable us to win victory, but, above, all, grant us a better victory over temptation and sin, over life and death, that we may be more than conquerors, through Him who loved us and laid down His life for us, Jesus our Saviour, the Captain of the Army of God. Amen."

"G. & W." WELL CLOSED.

Belmont Home Disposed of 48 Bottles of Whiskey in Five Days.

County Magistrate Langley issued an order this morning prohibiting George A. Parcels of Havelock from having or receiving liquor, also prohibiting the railways and other agents and persons from supplying him.

Parcels was charged with keeping liquor for sale at his home in Belmont. Forty-eight bottles disappeared in five days in this "G. & W." oasis in the eastern township. The evidence was taken at Havelock and the argument heard here to-day. The Magistrate decimed to make a conviction, but he hung Parcels high and dry on the "Indian" list. His Worship was not satisfied that there was evidence of sales, but felt that an excess of liquor had been received at the Parcels home.

ZARA CLINTON AS "ROBINSON CRUSOE"

One of the most popular songs in F. Stuart-Whyte's new super-musical extravaganza, "Robinson Crusoe," is "Love, Come From Your Hiding Place," sung by Miss Anne Lochead. This song has proved the most successful since "Queen of the Earth" in England, and is destined to become an immense favourite in Canada and the States.

Other musical numbers destined to delight local audiitors are "I've Never Had No Luck Since I've Been a Canuck," "Take Me Back to Blighty," the Allies new Trench song. "Made in our Empire," a thrilling patriotic number, all sung by Miss Zara Clinton. "The Coster's Oneymoon," "Silly Ass," "I've Had a Glass of Ginger Wine," three terrific comedy hits. "My Little Dutch Doll," a delightful exclusive number and "The Prehistoric Rag," a real novelty. Among the more classical song may be mentioned "The Star of Love," and "Harbour Lights." There are thirty musical numbers in all and a dozen brilliant dancing events.

"Robinson Crusoe" comes to the Grand Theatre on Feb. 1 and 2.

Ald. Dobbin Proposes That The City Buy a Water Tower For Fires In Business Area

Alderman Dobbin tried to persuade the Fire, Water and Light Committee last night to purchase a water tower as a special apparatus for fighting fires in the business and mercantile sections of the city. To intimate that he failed to impress the Committee with the need and the desirability of having a water tower for fires such as last Saturday's would be unfair to his colleagues. Their general attitude may be expressed in the dilatory—not yet, or the Russian "nitchevo."

Ald. Malcolm McIntyre said: "Let us strike our restimates first."

Mayor Duncan added—"We want to go slow."

Alderman Dobbin—"We are told that we've been going too slow."

Mayor Duncan—"I mean let us get more information in order, that we may consider this proposal fully."

Alderman Dobbin—"I believe we should have this piece, and from what I saw on Saturday I am satisfied that we need it."

From these casual comments it should not be inferred that the Committee has put all thoughts of a water tower out of its collective mind. It was undoubtedly broached as a feeler, although apparently Alderman Dobbin had expected a more spontaneous response to his proposal. The cost was indefinitely placed at "around $6,000," and while the Committee recognized the efficiency of a tower in fighting fires in the downtown area, action was deferred until the chairman obtains prices and other concrete details.

Buy By Debentures.

In introducing this subject Alderman Dobbin pointed out that the business men were paying heavy taxes, and should be protected with the best firefighting equipment the city could afford.

"Seven-tenths of the water used on Saturday didn't go to put the fire out. We could have had a higher pressure, but it should be understood that the pressure is limited to a certain point beyond which it would destroy plumbing in homes and break services. There were 1¼ miles of hose used around that block and the longest stretch was across the market.

"With a water-tower sixty feet high it would pour a great volume of water down into the buildings and smother the fire."

Alderman Dobbin proposed that the tower could be purchased by an issue of debentures for the required amount, under legislation that could be sought forthwith.

Ald. M. McIntyre wanted to know why the firemen didn't climb to the roofs to fight Saturday's fire.

"It wasn't safe," Alderman Dobbin replied. "Two men went into the Dominion Bank building and one of them was overcome with smoke."

The Committee adjourned at 11:15 o'clock without further discussion of the water tower idea.

A New York Opinion Of Miss Agnes Logan

The following despatch from New York appears in the Montreal Standard:

New York. — A little Canadian pianist came to New York a few days ago. She is Miss Agnes Logan, just twelve years old. Her home is in Peterborough, Canada. Her only brother, eighteen years old, is Second Lieutenant George Colin Logan, of the British Royal Flying Corps who has been training in England and soon will be at the front, if he is not already there. Her parents are Mr. and Mrs. William A. Logan. Her mother, like thousands of Canadian mothers who have given their sons to the army, gives all her time from home duties to Red Cross work. There was little war work a child of twelve could do, but Agnes was anxious to do her bit with the rest of the family. She has played the piano since she was five, and now she thought that if she could best help by keeping on with her music, she would do that. If not she would turn to something else. Friends wanted her to come to New York and be heard by some of the big men in music before she decided anything.

So she came. Some thought that no one in New York would bother to listen to a child in music. She could count on the fingers of her two little hands all the friends she had in this part of the world, though her fame has travelled quite a little way beyond her home city. Her teacher, Miss Killmaster, of Toronto, came with her.

And this is what happened. She played at the Metropolitan Opera House. To be sure it was not on the stage at a great recital, but busy musical experts of that institution left their work to listen to the little Canadian. One was Edward Ziegler, administrative secretary of the company. Another was Gennaro Papi, Italian conductor. Agnes played for them a Bach fugue, Weber's "Moto Perpetuo," Field's midi nocturne and a selection by Sapellnikoff.

Her hearers agreed that the little girl has quite amazing technique, a memory out of proportion to her little body and a clean cut style of playing. They said if she will keep on she may become one of the great pianists.

She played for Ossip Gabrilowitsch. The afternoon of his own recital he stopped long enough to hear her play the same pieces she had played at the Metropolitan. Mr. Gabrilowitsch told the child she had an excellent musical foundation, and encouraged her to go home and study hard to become a really great artist. Felix Lamond, organist of Trinity Chapel, and a pianist of experience, and H. E. Johnston, who has managed the tours of stars, who has managed the world's greatest pianists, heard her play Haydn's "Variazoni" in F minor and said things that made the little girl very proud.

So Agnes went back to Canada last week very glad she had come to New York. She thought she would not find anyone to listen to her, and she found many kind and helpful friends, who aided her with encouragement and advice.

PETROGRAD, January 30. — An ultimatum declaring the American Ambassador "would be held personally responsible for the life and liberty of Alexander Berkman," was forwarded to David R. Francis by the anarchist group of sailors and workmen at Helsingfors.

LITERARY AFTERNOON

A literary afternoon was held yesterday afternoon in St. Peter's school, when Rev. Father O'Brien donated a picture of Sir John A. Macdonald, won by him at the Immaculate Conception bazaar, to the school, and gave a history of Sir John's life.

Mr. Tom McCabe gave a card of thanks on behalf of the school.

A debate was held on the subject, that inventions are more beneficial to mankind than discovery, with Mr. C. Begley and Mr. O'Brien upholding the affirmative and Mr. J. Theobald and V. O'Brien upholding the negative. The decision was reserved.

Bishop O'Brien was in attendance.

GOOD ROADS AND COUNTY COUNCIL

Editor of the Examiner.

Sir,—I am sure that it was with a feeling of indignation that all good wishers for the good name of Peterborough City and County read of the decision of the County Council that the time had not arrived when this county, usually at the front in all progressive measures, should avail ourselves of the Provincial Government County Road System.

When it is considered that of all the counties in the Province our county is one of three that have not adopted this system of building and maintaining our roads, the suspicion is aroused that "There must be a nigger in the wood pile."

Surely all the County Councillors of all the counties that have adopted this system are not dunderheads, and that our own Council know everything that should be known as to the best system by which the county roads should be built and maintained.

As a humble ratepayer in the Township of North Monaghan, I would like to ask you to publish the names of the all-wise members of the County Council who knock this proposition year after year, so that by proper organisation of all those who want to see this County kept up in its proper place, these gentlemen will be retired to private life at the next election.

It is about time that the progressive element of the farming community, and the one thousand automobile owners of the county, should get together, and find out the cause of the opposition to this Government plan.

Now, gentlemen, all together; and let's have some action.

Yours, for the long-suffering public,

C. R. Banks.

WALTER VARTY'S CASE MAY BE SENT TO THE ATTORNEY GENERAL

Magistrate Langley Will Either Dismiss the Charge of Making False Statment Before Havelock Tribunal or Forward Depositions to Ottawa

The charge against Walter Varty, of Belmont Township, of having made false statements before the Military Tribunal at Havelock, reached its final stage in the jurisdiction of County Magistrate Langley this morning.

Mr. J. A. O'Brien, solicitor for the accused, and Crown Attorney Hatton presented their arguments based on the evidence that had been taken at a former session of the County Police Court at Havelock.

Under the Military Service Act, a conviction could not be made without the consent of the Attorney-General.

This had not been obtained, and Magistrate Langley announced that after weighing the evidence he would either dismiss the charge or forward the depositions to the proper authorities at Ottawa.

Varty had stated that he helped his father work a fifty-acre farm in Belmont. In June, July, September, and October last year he was employed at the C.P.R. shops in Havelock, and in April, May, and August he was farming at home. Previously he had worked a few months in Trenton.

Mr. Hatton pointed out that Varty did not appear to be indispensable as a farmer if he were not needed at home during the busy months of June, July, and September.

(4) for income and statute labour, that the amount he paid for statute labour to be allowed on his income tax, and that if both taxes were paid that the statute labour tax be refunded.

Canadian Press Despatch:

ST. JOHNS, N.B., Jan. 30.— Hon. W. P. Jones, counsel for the New Brunswick government, announced today at a session of the Valley railway investigation, that certain four men will be prosecuted for conspiracy and an attempt will be made to secure the restitution of the money paid by contractors for political purposes.

CITY EMPLOYEES WILL BE HELD RESPONSIBLE FOR THEIR NEGLIGENCE

The Legal committee made a departure last night in a notice to the City Engineer's Department that in future employees responsible for carelessness that results in damage suits against the city will have personally to pay the sum awarded by the courts. Last year one damage action cost the city $50, and another is pending. Mr. A. Fitzgerald's name was mentioned by some members of the committee last night in both these cases, but Ald. Weir stated that if an censure was to be made it should be first turned upon the whole Council.

"Not excluding the Board of Works," was Ald. Dobbin's dry comment.

Mr. T. B. McGrath, Jr., asked for an adjustment of his taxes, stating that he had been assessed as a property holder and also for income and statute labour.

Ald. Dobbin moved, seconded by Ald. McIntyre, that if he were assess-

CRIME RAGES IN GERMANY.

Teuton Theft Insurance Risks Have Trebled in Many Cases.

Reports in the German press show that there is increasing rapidly in all parts of Germany.

According to the Leipzig Police Department, "offences against property are mainly committed in the large towns, but the smallest places are also affected. Countless thefts by housebreaking and other robberies occur daily."

Herr Theodor Wolff, in the Berliner Tageblatt, says that robbery and theft now "amount to a calamity," and that insurance companies have increased their premiums by from 50 to 200 per cent., while they also make special requirements. All classes are affected, the thieves frequently enjoying immunity owing to fear of revenge.

According to reports in the Austrian newspapers, conditions are similar in Austria.—London Times.

A NECESSITY IN THE HOUSE.

Most of the common ills of life arise from a torpid, sluggish condition of the Liver, Kidneys or Bowels, and because they act on each of these organs in a direct and specific way Dr. Chase's Kidney-Liver Pills overcome serious and painful diseases over which ordinary medicines have no control.

Agriculture.

It is an interesting fact that east of the Rocky mountains agriculture is fairly well distributed, taking into consideration the varying areas of the states, says the Philadelphia Inquirer. California shows up well because of her immense fruit and grain crops. New England appears to be lagging but all New England is less in area than a great many individual states, and this "sterile soil" produces about as much as Missouri, which has a larger area than combined New England. Massachusetts produces more value per acre than any other commonwealth.

MEAT CAUSE OF KIDNEY TROUBLE

Take Salts to Flush Kidneys If Back Hurts or Bladder Bothers

If you must have your meat every day, eat it, but flush your kidneys with salts occasionally, says a noted authority who tells us that meat forms uric acid which almost paralyzes the kidneys in their efforts to expel it from the blood. They become sluggish and weaken, then you suffer with a dull misery in the kidney region, sharp pains in the back or sick headache, dizziness, your stomach sours, tongue is coated, and when the weather is bad you have rheumatic twinges. The urine gets cloudy, full of sediment, the channels often get sore and irritated, obliging you to seek relief two or three times during the night.

To neutralize these irritating acids to cleanse the kidneys and flush off the body's urinous waste get four ounces of Jad Salts from any pharmacy here; take a tablespoonful in a glass of water before breakfast for a few days and your kidneys will then act fine. This famous salts is made from the acid of grapes and lemon juice, combined with lithia, and has been used for generations to flush and stimulate sluggish kidneys also to neutralize the acids in urine, so it no longer irritates, thus ending bladder weakness.

Jad Salts is inexpensive; cannot injure, and makes a delightful effervescent lithia water drink.

Strikes In Austria Are Assuming Serious Proportions

Serious Conflicts Between The Troops And The Strikers

Sir Douglas Haig's Report On Operations During Last Year

British Field Marshal Deals With Events Down to the End of the Battle of Arras—"Passchendaele Captured by a Successful Attack by Which For the Second Time Within the Year Canadian Troops Achieved a Record of Uninterrupted Success" Says Report.

The following is a short summary of the despatch received by the Secretary of State for War from Sir Douglas Haig, Commander-in-Chief of tht British Armies in France. It deals with operations in France and Flanders last year down to the end of the Battle of Flanders. The subsequent operations round Cambrai are to be the subject of a later despatch.

The general plan of campaign for the Allied Armies during 1917 had been decided at a conference held at French General Headquarters in November, 1916. "The plan comprised a series of offensives on all fronts so timed as to assist each other by depriving the enemy of the power of weakening any one of his fronts in order to reinforce another."

Sir Douglas Haig's original scheme had been an attack against the enemy in the salient between the Scarpe and the Ancre. This included the capture of the Vimy Ridge. But this attack was not intended to be the main offensive of the year." I did not consider that any great strategical results were likely to be gained by following up a success on the front about Arras. It was, therefore, my intention to transfer my main offensive to another part of the front. The front selected for these operations was in Flanders. They were to be commenced as soon as possible after the Arras offensive."

PLANS REVISED.

However, the plans of the Allies had to be revised. Subsequently unexpected developments in the early weeks of the year necessitated certain modifications in my plans. Accordingy it was arranged that I should commence the offensive early in April on as great a scale as the extension of my front would permit." This attack was to be preparatory to a more decisive attack to be made by the French, in which, in the event of its complete success, the British were to co-operate. So, on April 9th, British and Canadian troops of the 1st and 3rd armies attacked the German lines from from "just north of Croisilles, south-east of Arras to just south of Givenchy-en-Chelle, at the northern foot of the Vimy Ridge," a distance of nearly 15 miles

Terrific air fighting preceded the attack. "Loses on both sides were severe, but the offensive tactics most gallantly persisted in by our fighting aeroplanes, secured our artillery machines from serious interference and enabled our guns to carry out their work effectively."

THE VIMY RIDGE BATTLE.

"The general attack on the 9th April was launched at 5.30 a.m. under cover of a most gallant infantry poured like a flood across the German lines, overwhelming the enemy garrisons." The attack was a complete success. "By the end of the day our troops were established deeply in the enemy's positions on the whole front of attack. We had gained a firm footing in the enemy's third line on both banks of the Scarpe, and had made an important breach in the enemy's last fully completed line of defence."

Unfortunately the weather definitely broke on the morning of attack. Storm, snow, squalls of wind and rain greatly impeded operations. It would be hard to overestimate the importance of the resultant delay in bringing up our guns at a time when the enemy had not yet been able to assemble his reserves." However, the attack was pressed heavily for the next five days, and Monchy and other important positions were captured." "At the end of six days' fighting our front had been rolled four miles further east, all the dominating features forming the immediate objects of my attack had passed into our possession. More than 13,000 prisoners and over two hundred guns were captured.

FURTHER ATTACKS.

So far as Sir Douglas Haig's own plans were concerned, this would have been the time to have transferred his army of assault to the northern front, while merely maintaining a show of strength in Artois, but the French offensive was on the point of being launched and "it was very important that the full pressure of the British offensive should be maintained." Accordingly further attacks were planned, which resulted in the great battles of April 23rd, and 24th, and May 3rd. These were successful and important ground was gained, but the enemy was now in great strength on this front. "A month after the commencement twenty-three enemy divisions had been withdrawn exhausted from the front; on the other hand the strengthening of the enemy's forces opposite my front necessarily brought about for the time being all the characteristics of a wearing-out battle. On the Aisne and in Champagne also, the French offensive had met with very obstinate resistance."

However, on May 5th, the French achieved the object they had in view on the Chemin des Dames, and Sir Douglas Haig was able "to turn my full attention, and divert the bulk of my resources to the development of the northern plan of operations."

The result of the great battles around Arras were the capture of nearly 20,000 prisoners, 257 guns, and an advance of five miles on a twenty-mile front.

THE YPRES SITUATION.

"The positions held by us on the Ypres salient were far from satisfactory. They were completely overlooked by the enemy. Their defence involved a considerable strain on the troops occupying them, and they were certain to be costly to maintain against a serious attack, in which the enemy would enjoy all the advantages in observation and in the placing of his artillery. Our position would be much improved by the capture of the Messines-Wytschaete Ridge and of the high ground which extends thence north-eastwards for some seven miles and then trends north through Broodseinde and Passchendaele.

"The preparations for the attack on the Messines-Wytschaete ridge were necessarily as elaborate as those undertaken before either the Somme or the Arras battles. They were carried out in circumstances of exceptional difficulty, for the enmy's positions completely overlooked our lines. A special problem arose in connection with the water supply. Pipe lines were taken well forward from existing lakes, from catch pits constructed on the Kemmel Hills, and from sterilizing barges on the Lys."

MINES EXPLODED.

"A special feature of the attack and one unique in warfare, was furnished by the explosion of nineteen deep mines at the moment of assault. In all twenty-four mines were constructed, four of which were outside the front ultimately selected for our offensive. Many of these had been completed for twelve months prior to our offensive, and constant and anxious work was needed to ensure their safety. The enemy also had a deep mine system, and was aware of his danger. At Hill 60 continuous underground fighting took place for over ten months prior to the attack. At the time of our offensive the enemy was known to be driving a gallery, which would ultimately have cut into the gallery leading to the Hill 60 mines. By careful listening it was judged that if our offensive took place on the date arranged the enmy's gallery would just fail to reach ours. So it was allowed to proceed. The Spanbroekhen mine formed the largest crater of those blown, the area of complete obliteration having a diameter of over 140 yards."

"At 3.10 a.m., on June 7th, the nineteen mines were exploded simultaneously. At the same moment our guns opened and our infantry assault was launched." English, Irish, New Zealand and Austrian troops were engaged. "The attack proceeded from the commencement in almost exact concordance with the time table." All the objectives were gained by the evening, and 7,200 prisoners with 67 guns were captured. During the following days further progress was made, heavy counter-attacks broken, and the enemy were forced to evacuate ground further to the south.

"As soon as this preliminary operation had been successfully accomplished it became possible to take in hand our final dispositions for the main offensive east and north of Ypres. It had been agreed that French troops should take part in these operations, and should extend my left flank north towards Boesinghe."

The despatch then described the great difficulty in mounting such an offensive, the successful German attack on the coast, and the final preparations for the battle, which was opened, after several delays, on July 31st, on a fifteen-mile front from the Lys to beyond Stoenstraat, the 2nd and 5th armies being engaged.

THE FLANDERS BATTLE.

The attack was launched at 3.50 a.

The Shortage Of Seeds May Curtail The Crop

Increase in Price of Seed Potatoes, Peas and Corn is of Startling Proportions Everywhere—The Cost of Production is Very Much Higher—Job For Men.

NEW YORK, Jan. 31.— The shortage of seed threatens to seriously curtail nearly all kinds of crops during the coming season. There has been a great increase in the price of the various kinds of vegetable seed products, according to representative seedmen interviewed here. This increase in the price of seeds has been brought about by what one seedman termed the tremendous increase in the cost of production." The increase in the price of seeds this year, over 1917, itself a year of high prices, varies from 20 to 50 per cent., according to the product.

An idea of the increases in the prices of seeds may be gained from comparative figures of the two years, 1917 and 1918, as regards such products as potatoes, peas, corn and wheat. Potato seeds that sold for $1.50 a peck in 1917 are $1.75 this year. Peas that sold for $2.40 a peck are now $2.25. Corn that sold for 10 cents a pound is now 15 cents, and what sold for 20c. a quart is now 35 cents. Wheat that sold for $4 a bushel is now $5.

Cost of Production.

"The apparently over-high price placed upon seed is perfectly reasonable," said a representative man in the trade. "There has been a tremendous increase in the cost of production. This, in turn, was caused by things that ought to be self-evident. There is a scarcity of labour, and an increased wage paid the little available labour that there is. You cannot get a farm hand to work for less than $3 a day, and at that there is a shortage of them. There is the advanced cost of fertilizer; everything has gone up.

"You cannot get corn of good germination and what little there is you have to bid for. There is not enough of anything to go around. Conditions are far from bright, and there is no prospect for an improvement.

"I have a letter from the largest pea grower in England. He refuses to name prices, so you see the conditions are the same the world over. This season is surely the worst this country ever saw, and is, I believe, England's worst.

Job For Men.

"The explanation of the whole thing, in my opinion, is that you cannot eat your cake and have it. They are taking the men out of the industries, for the war, and trying to fill their places with women. The women cannot do men's work on the farm, nor can men learn to farm in a mere six months, as they are trying to do.

"No," he continued, "I am not very optimistic. Come around at about this time next year and I guarantee I shall have a worse story to tell you."

Another seed man, in substantiation of his claim that there is a serious shortage of crops, pointed to the fact that John M. Baer, representative from North Dakota, has introduced a bill in Congress by which the Government will lend the farmers mony to buy seed.

HIGH HEELED SHOES PUT CORNS ON TOES

Tells Women How to Dry Up a Corn So It Lifts Out Without Pain.

Modern high-heeled footwear buckles the toes and produces corns, and many of the thousands of hospital cases of infection and lockjaw are the result of woman's suicidal habit of trying to cut away these painful pests.

For little cost there can be obtained at any pharmacy a quarter of an ounce of a drug called freezone, which is sufficient to rid one's feet of every hard or soft corn or callus without the slightest danger or inconvenience.

A few drops applied directly upon the tender, aching corn stops the soreness and shortly the entire corn, root and all, lifts right out. It is a sticky substance, which dries the moment it is applied, and thousands of men and women use it because the corn shrivels up and comes out without inflaming or even irritating the surrounding tissue or skin. Cut this out and try it if your corns bother you.

Dreaded Neuralgia

Most people think of neuralgia as a pain in the head or the face, but neuralgia may affect any nerve in the body. Different names are given to it when it affects certain nerves. Thus neuralgia of the sciatic nerve is called sciatica, but the character of the pain and the nature of the disease are the same. The cause being the same, the cure to be effective must be the same. The pain in neuralgia is caused by starved nerves. The blood which carries nourishment to the nerves has become thin and impure and no longer does so, and the pain you feel is the cry of the nerves for their natural food. You may ease the pains of neuralgia with hot applications, but you can only cure the trouble by enriching and purifying the blood. For this purpose we know of no medicine that can equal Dr. Williams' Pink Pills. These pills actually make new, rich blood, and thus act as the most efficient of nerve tonics. If you are suffering from this most dreaded of troubles, or any form of nerve trouble, give these pills a fair trial, and see how speedily you will be restored to good health.

You can get Dr. Williams' Pink Pills from any medicine dealer, or by mail at 50 cents a box or six boxes for $2.50 from The Dr. Williams' Medicine Co., Brockville, Ont.

"THE CLUE IN THE AIR"

A DETECTIVE STORY—Isabel Ostrander

CHAPTER X.

THE MEETING AT THE BRIDGE.

The young woman who a few minutes earlier had betrayed her identity by her start of emotion during Miss Beckwith's testimony, rose with a stir of silken ruffles and came slowly forward. She was pretty in a rather bold, ostentatious fashion, but her youthful charm was marred by an air of cynical sophistication.

Without preamble the coroner launched his thunderbolt.

"When was the last occasion on which you saw Miss Rowntree alive?"

"Two months ago, in the Cherry Blossom tea room at the Fitz-Morris."

"Then you did not meet her in Mollenhauer's four days ago, as she stated to Miss Beckwith?"

"I wasn't even in town! My aunt, of whom she spoke, too, went to Honolulu weeks ago. I really think it is quite too bad to drag us into a thing of this sort! Of course she couldn't have known what was going to happen to her, and I'm dreadfully sorry for her, but she might have used somebody else as an excuse!"

"Never mind that just now. How came harry-on know the deceased?"

"Marion? Oh for perfect ages! We were at school together, and until last season we were quite intimate."

"What happened last season?"

"Why—nothing, only Marion changed a lot. She grew terribly serious all of a sudden and did not seem to care any more for the things we'd always done; riding and dancing and bridge. Of course she had never been quite like the other girls in our set. She had queer socialistic ideas, and no regard at all for class distinctions. She would make friends with just anybody if they happened to interest her. When she began to keep to herself last autumn, and wouldn't go about, we all thought it was because of an affair."

"A love affair? Please tell what you know about it, Miss Hatfield."

For the first time the young lady betrayed signs of embarrassment. She looked down, fingering her little gold purse self-consciously, and a dull flush mounted in her cheeks.

"I don't really know anything. It was all just gossip, but—but somebody had been very attentive to her all the previous winter, from the time of her debut, and then in the summer it was broken off suddenly. Not that there was anything to break off, no engagement had been announced, but it simply ended. Nobody knew why, she would never discuss it afterward."

"You say Miss Rowntree changed. Did she seem depressed?"

"No, on the contrary, she seemed awfully happy, in a quiet sort of way, is if she were interested in something else more than in social things."

"And this continued until the last time you saw her?"

"Yes. She was brighter that day at the Fitz-Morris, simply radiant and bubbling over. It was funny, because she seldom really woke up, and she was in an unusually gay mood. I remember asking her what had happened, but she only laughed, and kissed me."

"Thank you, that will do."

Miss Hatfield left the stand, tossing her head as she encountered Stephen Quimby's cold glance, and while the coroner again consulted his notes Mc-Carty studied the witnesses. Mrs. Deceinus was eying the girl critically, as if mentally summing up her costume and appearance, Grafton Foxe was whispering intently to his wife, and the young inventor, Mr. Antonio, was surveying the whole scene with frank curiosity and interest.

"Mr. Luke Edwards."

The tall bronzed young man with the keen, furrowed eyes, rose and made his way briskly forward. He was a stranger to Mc-Carty but as the oath was administered to him, the ex-roundsman's attention was drawn elsewhere.

Miss Beckworth had suddenly leaned forward and grasped her companion's arm until her thin knuckles seemed about to burst through the black glove. Her eyes fixed and glassy were staring at the new witness and her breath came in jerks. Across Stephen Quimby fought a momentary battle for iron control and bending over her he whispered almost fiercely into her ear. She stared down in dismay, and the next instant the crape veil descended about her face, effectually concealing her emotion.

"What is your profession, Mr. Edwards?"

"I am an aviator, employed by Mr. Quimby as chief mechanician at his hangar near Garden City, Long Island."

"You were acquainted with Miss Marion Rowntree?"

"Slightly. She had accompanied Mr. Quimby to the hangars on several occasions, and I piloted her on two short flights."

"Was there an accident on either of these two occasions?"

"No sir. The accident in which she received the injury to her side that left the scar your physician mentioned this morning occurred a year ago, when she was flying with Mr. Quimby. It was after that she flew with me."

"Mr. Edwards, will you tell the jury what took place last Monday afternoon?"

"Why I came into town." The young man seemed to hesitate, then went on firmly: "Mr. Quimby had been out to the hangar on the afternoon of the previous day and instructed me to purchase certain mechanical supplies, so on Monday I took the little runabout and drove in. I finished my errands and started back, when at the entrance to Manhattan Bridge I met Miss Rowntree."

HHe stopped and the coroner asked:

"At what time was this?"

"About half past five."

"Had you any idea what Miss Rowntree was doing in that locality at that hour?"

"No sir. I didn't think anything about it. She was in an open taxicab, a worn-out, shabby one, and it had broken down. She was looking for another and I offered to take her anywhere she wanted to go in the runabout.

"She got in and I drove her out to a little cottage in Steinway, beyond Astoria. I don't know the address—she didn't either, but she knew the way and directed me at each turning. I could take anyone there again, sir, but the house is closed and boarded up. When she found no one there we turned and came straight back to the city. She did not want me to take her home but left me and took the first taxi we could find after crossing the bridge again."

"Did she make any explanation of her errand, or seem put out when she found no one at the house?"

"No, sir; only puzzled. She just said: 'They will probably return in the fall.' She didn't talk much on the way back, but going out she asked a lot of questions about the aeroplanes and seemed interested in the different races and flying meets generally."

"There was nothing in her manner to indicate that anything of a personal nature was preying on her mind?"

"Nothing that I noticed, sir, but then I hardly knew her well enough to judge."

He was dismissed, and returned to his seat without a glance at his employer. Quimby had listened with an air of well bred but slightly bored attention as if the testimony was not new to him. At its conclusion Miss Beckwith had made a movement to wand him as if to speak, but he drew back with an unmistakable gesture, and she relinquished her intention.

The coroner next called Miss Agnes Wilkinson, and the shabby little gray-haired woman advanced.

After taking the oath she said she was a visiting seamstress, and was frequently in the employ of Miss Beckwith and Miss Rowntree, to make underwear and repair linen. She was an expert embroider and darner, and had worked for the family at odd times for the past twenty years, having seen Miss Marion grow from babyhood.

Her soft voice faltered as she spoke, and tears stood frankly in her eyes. Miss Marion had been a sweet child, and a lovely, kind, young lady. No one could have had cause to wish her any harm.

"You were employed in the Quimby household in the spring?"

"Yes, sir, every spring and fall I went to them for a month."

"Try to think back, Miss Wilkinson, to a year ago last spring. Do you remember anything unusual in Miss Rowntree's bearing or conduct, then?"

"No, sir, she was just like any other light-hearted young girl."

"You saw her frequently?"

"Yes, sir, every day. She made it a point to come in and have a little talk with me, no matter how busy she was with social things. She was just like her mother, always considerate and thoughtful. She used to get me to talk about her mother whenever we were alone; she missed her."

"When you sewed for them last autumn, did you observe any change in Miss Rowntree?"

"She was quieter, not sad, but if she was trying to think something out for herself. She asked me a lot of questions I couldn't begin to answer that showed her mind was on deep things."

"What sort of questions?"

"Oh, about heredity—things that were handed down like a family likeness, from one generation to another—and about all the things a woman could decide in the world besides just marrying and settling down. I didn't think anything about it at the time. I guess most girls get those notions nowadays until somebody comes along they care for."

She hesitated.

"I had thought that spring that maybe she would be married; there was a young man around all the time, and she seemed to like him, but when I spoke of him in the fall, she said she hadn't seen him in a long time. She smiled in a funny kind of way, and I couldn't help asking if they had quarreled or anything had happened. You may think that I was taking liberties, sir, but she seemed to confide in me more than in anyone else, almost."

"Did she tell you what had happened?"

"She just said that the gentleman—Mr. Sturtevant, his name was—had gone away. But if he did, he must have come back for I was taking a little walk in the park late one afternoon—it was after I had finished at the Quimby house—and I saw them meet on the drive.

"Mr. Quimby's chauffeur was with her in the roadster but Mr. Sturtevant was alone in his racing car. I thought she was going to pass him at first, but he drew up and she had to stop. He seemed urging her to do something, but she shook her head, and drove on. He sat still, looking after her till she was out of sight. Neither of them saw me."

"When you went to them this spring, did anything out of the usual take place?"

"Yes, sir." The little woman paused, glancing timidly toward the motionless veiled figure. Then she straightened herself and threw back her head. "Maybe I did wrong, but I'd always loved her and I would have done anything she had asked of me. She seemed queer and I couldn't make her out; worried almost to death about something, but happy, too, in an excited kind of way.

She got me to mail some letters for her, and the answers came to my address. I'd get them when I went home for a change of clothes and give them to her when she was alone, which wasn't often this spring. It just happened that Miss Beckwith or one of the maids would be with me whenever she came in."

"To whom were those letters addressed which you mailed?" The coroner leaned forward expectantly and a great stillness had settled over the room.

"I don't know." The little woman eyed him steadily.

"Oh, come, Miss Wilkinson, you don't mean to tell us you didn't glance at the envelopes?"

"I don't read what's not meant for me. Miss Marion trusted me, and I wouldn't tell you as much as I have, only—only that gentleman surprised it out of me yesterday, and anyway, it can't hurt poor Miss Marion now."

She had indicated Wade Techuse, and her face flushed.

"The handwriting on the envelopes you received for her at your home—was it a man's or a woman's?"

"I couldn't say, sir."

"Would you know it again if you saw it?"

"No, sir." Her manner made it evident that she should take care not to know, and the coroner did not press the point.

"How many letters passed, in all?"

"Three or four each way."

"Did this correspondence keep on until you left?"

"Yes, sir."

"Did you believe it to be in connection with another love affair?"

"I didn't know, sir. She asked me to do what I did, and that was enough for me. I remember, though, she was looking forward to this coming autumn." Her voice grew husky.

"Whatever she planned, poor dear, it's all over now! She started two or three times to say something about her birthday—she would have been twenty-one a couple of weeks from now—if she had lived—but she always broke off before I could make out what she'd meant."

"Was her hottle life as happy this last spring as it had been in the past?"

Miss Wilkinson hesitated, and swallowed hard.

"I wish you wouldn't ask me that, sir, it don't seem fair to go in other people's houses and then talk about them afterward."

"This is a matter of life and death," the coroner barked at her. "I must know all that you can tell me."

"Well, sir, Miss Marion had always been friendly and polite to her stepfather, but not affectionate, as you might say. This spring I never saw her speak to him, not once the whole month. Of course I don't know what happened at meal times, but they used to pass each other in the hall without a look or a word.

NEURALGIA CURED IN A FEW DAYS

And Has Never Returned— Nervous System Was Built Up—Now Sleeps and Eats Well—Husband Also Benefitted by This Treatment.

Mrs. W. T. Abbott, 536 Patterson street, Peterborough, Ont., writes: "My system was in a run down condition, and I was troubled with nervousness and sleeplessness. For some time also, I had been bothered with neuralgia, and although I tried many remedies, it was without success. Upon the advice of a friend, I commenced using Dr. Chase's Nerve Food, and found in five or six days that my neuralgia was cured, and I have not been troubled in this way since. I also find that now I can eat and sleep well, and I give full credit of this great benefit to Dr. Chase's Nerve Food. I might also mention that I lost considerable in weight, but after using the Nerve Food I gained back the half I had lost. My husband has also found Dr. Chase's Nerve Food of great benefit to him, and uses it when he feels run down from overwork. I have recommended the use of this great medicine to many of my friends and acquaintances."

We know that Dr. Chase's Nerve Food possesses exceptional potency as a means of building up the strength of the human body. We have seen it tested in so many thousands of cases that there is no question of the effectiveness of this treatment.

But how are we going to prove this to you unless you try it. You are the one to be benefitted and it remains for you to make the test. Try it when you feel tired out and discouraged. Try it for sleeplessness and irritability. Try it for nervous headaches and indigestion.

It is not a mere relief for these ailments, and for this reason you must persist in its use until the last vigor is restored to the nerves.

But of one thing you may be certain—that each dose of Dr. Chase's Nerve Food contributes something towards building up the exhausted nervous system. 50 cents a box, a full treatment of 6 boxes for $2.75, at all dealers or Edmanson, Bates & Co., Ltd., Toronto. Refuse all substitutes, as they only disappoint.

WAS OFF WORK 4 or 5 MONTHS A YEAR WITH CONSTIPATION

If the truth were only known you would find that over one-half of the ills of life are caused by allowing the bowels to get into a constipated condition.

When the bowels become constipated the stomach gets out of order, the liver does not work properly, and then follows the violent sick headaches, the soreness of the stomach, heartburn, water brash, etc.

Keep your bowels regular by using Milburn's Laxa-Liver Pills. They work on the bowels gently and naturally, and will cure the worst cases of constipation.

Mr. Sylvester Clements, Galt, Ont., writes: "I desire to express my heartfelt thanks for what Milburn's Laxa-Liver Pills have done for me. I have been suffering from a bad stomach and constipation and would be off work 4 or 5 months a year. I was hardly able to be inside without getting a severe headache. I tried doctors medicine and other remedies, but got no relief until a friend advised me to use Milburn's Laxa-Liver Pills. Now I can work inside without any headaches or pain. I would not be without your remedy for anything. I write this so that anyone suffering the same as I did may use them and be cured."

Milburn's Laxa-Liver Pills are 25c a vial at all dealers, or mailed direct on receipt of price by The T. Milburn Co., Limited, Toronto, Ont.

Hunting Bear in British Columbia

THERE is perhaps no better bear country than the mountain slopes and valleys of the mountains of Western Canada. Black, grizzly and cinnamon bear come out on the slides in the spring and work down toward the lower valleys as the season advances. Some districts are better than others, but there are bears everywhere. With the coming of early summer the black and cinnamon bears venture far down into the foothill countries, following the courses of the streams, and fishing as they go. But the grizzly bears stay in their own rugged native habitat.

The black bear in the accompanying photographs was killed in the edge of the timber on a mountain slope up on the headwaters of the Columbia River. He died at the hands of man just as he was ripping up the log on which he fell in search of succulent grubs for dinner.

The body of the grizzly, lying outstretched, is that of a three-year-old who ranged the mountains beside the Yukon telegraph trail. Both animals were killed in British Columbia in country tributary to the Canadian Pacific Railway transcontinental line. The grizzly died as he was charging up the hill to reach the man who had wounded him. Both bears are prime spring hides, as can be seen even in the photographs, the thick lustrous fur standing thick and warm after a hard winter.—L. Y. K.

SIR DOUGLAS HAIG'S REPORT ON OPERATIONS

m. Troops from England, Ireland, Scotland and Wales delivered the main assault. "Preceded at zero hour by discharges of thermit and oil drums and covered by an accurate artillery barrage, the Allied infantry entered the German lines at all points. The enemy's barrage was late and weak, and our casualties were light." Practically all our objectives were gained, and 6,000 prisoners taken. Then came the rain which in a four days' incessant downpour turned "the lowlying, clayey soil into a succession of vast, muddy pools. The valleys of the choked and overflowing streams were speedily transformed into long stretches of bog, impassable except by a few well-defined tracks, which became marks for the enemy's artillery. To leave these tracks was to risk death by drowning and on several occasions men and pack animals were lost in this way. In these conditions operations of any magnitude became impossible. As had been the case in the Arras battle, this unavoidable delay was of the greatest service to the enemy."

Towards the middle of August the weather slightly improved and attacks were launched near Lens by Canadian troops, and on the main battle front. The first was absolutely successful, but the attack on the Ypres front, though successful, was impeded by the new defensive tactics of the enemy. In the future our artillery tactics were modified to meet the situation created by the change in the enemy's methods of defence.

The enemy had adopted a system of elastic defence, in which his forward lines were held in only sufficient strength to disorganize the attack, while the bulk of his forces were kept in close reserve, ready to deliver an immediate and powerful blow. In the heavy fighting east of Ypres these tactics had undoubtedly met with a certain measure of success. In combination with the state of the ground and the weather they had succeeded in checking our progress."

A NEW ASSAULT.

Minor operations were carried out until September 20th, when a fresh assault was launched on an eight-mile front by British, Australian and South African troops. The new British tactics abundantly justified themselves. All the objectives were gained and "the whole of the high ground crossed by the Menin road passed into our possession." Three thousand prisoners were taken. The enemy suffered the heaviest losses in repeated counter attacks.

Extremely successful attacks were made on September, 20th and October 4th. In the latter 5,000 prisoners were taken and three German Divisions lined up for a counter-attack, were annihilated.

WEATHER BAD.

This marked the high water mark of British success. "The year was far spent, the weather had been consistently unpropitious. The resultant delays had given the enemy time to bring up his reinforcements and to reorganize his defence after each defeat." Nevertheless with a fine October, much might have still been accomplished. Instead the weather remained permanently hostile. Successful attacks were carried out on October 8th and 12th, but "by this time the persistent continuation of bad weather had left no further room for hope that the condition of the ground would improve sufficiently to enable us to capture the remainder of the ridge this year. But in view of other projects which I had in view it was desirable to maintain pressure on the Flanders front for a few weeks longer." This refers, of course, to the Cambrai offensive.

"No large force could be made available for the enterprise. The prospects of success therefore depended on complete secrecy and on maintaining sufficient activity in Flanders."

CAPTURE OF PASSCHENDAELE

After a series of minor operations, Passchendaele was captured "by a successful attack by which, for the second time within the year, Canadian troops achieved a record of uninterrupted success." These operations concluded the Flanders offensive.

"This offensive, maintained for three and a half months, under the most adverse conditions of weather, had entailed almost superhuman exertions on the part of our troops. Time after time the practically beaten enemy was enabled to reorganize and relieve his men and to bring up reinforcements behind the sea of mud which constituted his main protection." Nevertheless 24,000 prisoners and 74 guns were taken.

During the year the failure of Russia to give the help expected had allowed forty fresh German divisions to be brought to the Western front. "That under these conditions the victories of Arras, Vimy, Messines and Flanders were won by us, and those at Maronvillers, Verdun and Malmaison by the French constitute a record of which the Allied armies have a right to be proud."

"In our operations 131 German divisions have been engaged and defeated by less than half that number of British divisions. The addition of strength which the enemy has obtained or may obtain from events in Russia and Italy have already been largely discounted, and the ultimate destruction of the enemy's field forces has been brought appreciably nearer."

Kipling's Son.

At the end of January I went to France, eager to see with my own eyes the great things that were doing there and to taste with my own lips the cup of danger. That at least I was bound to do before I could come home and urge my countrymen to face the duty and brave the peril of a part in this war.

Paris was not so dark as London but more tragic. After Belgium and Serbia the heaviest brunt of this dreadful conflict has fallen upon France. She has suffered most. Yet on the faces of her women I saw no tears and in the eyes of her men no fear nor regret.

If Britain was magnificent, France was miraculous! Loving and desiring peace she accepted the cross of war without a murmur. Her women were no less brave than her men. She wears the hero-star of Roland and saintly halo of Joan of Arc.

After meeting many men in Paris —statesmen, men of letters, generals —and after visiting the splendid American Ambulance at Neuilly and other institutions in which our boys and girls were giving their help to France in the chivalric spirit of Lafayette, I went out toward the front.

The first visit was under the escort of Captain Francois Morod to a chateau beyond Compiegne, where Rudyard Kipling with his family and I with my family had passed the Christmas week of 1913 together, as joyous guests of the American chatelaine, Mrs. Julia Park. She has given the spacious, lovely house for a military hospital. And there, while the [illegible] metres away from us and a German sausage balloon floated in the sky, I watched the skilful ministrations of French and American doctors and nurses to the wounded. One thought haunted me—the memory of Kipling's only son, nineteen years old, who was with us in that happy Christmastide. The lad was reported "missing" after one of the battles between Loos and Hulluch. For six months I sought, through the German Legation at The Hague, to find a trace of the brave boy. But never a word!—Henry van Dyke, in Scribner.

Shrapnel.

Shrapnel, used extensively in this war against aircraft and troops in the open, was invented by Colonel Henry Shrapnel in England and first was used by the English in the Peninsular war of 1840. It was used also by the English at the Battle of Waterloo and helped considerably to defeat Napoleon. The shell is so made that it explodes a certain number of seconds after leaving the gun or upon striking. The shell in exploding sends slugs and bullets in every direction.

It was to protect against shrapnel that the steel helmets first were used in the present war.

A Giant Canal.

A new project of American engineers is a giant canal 250 miles long to connect the Arctic ocean and the Baltic sea, extending from Kandalaska, on the White sea, to Tornea, near the Swedish frontier on the Gulf of Finland. The cost is estimated at $150,000,000.

Honey Bees.

The honey bee was introduced into North America in the seventeenth century, but not into South America until 1845. There was none west of the Mississippi before 1797 and none in California before 1850.

Turnpikes.

The toll roads of other days were called turnpikes, not because they were particularly tortuous but because of the poles armed with pikes which were turned against the traveler in case he resisted payment.

What Riles Folks.

"Unexpectedness is whut riles folks," said Uncle Eben. "A hoss dat kicks all de time is treated wif constant consideration. De mule dat kicks once in a while loses all de credit foh years of patience."

Concrete for Gates.

Concrete as a material for gate structures in American irrigation canals is beginning to displace wood, its durability overcoming the disadvantage of higher cost.

To Save Shoe Soles.

A cobbler passes on the secret that if about once a month the soles of shoes are treated to a coat of linseed oil they will always outwear the uppers.

Eye of the Gun.

This is called the telemeter and is used by all artillerists in some shape or other. The telemeter is really a tube with two telescopic lenses, one on each end. The "objectives" of the two lenses are placed inside the instrument and toward the end of the tube. Prisms with five faces act as reflectors, so that the person looking in has mechanically spread his eyes to the two ends of the tube, with a tremendous range of vision.

Of course the ends are so arranged that they may be directed at a single object at the same time, thus making it possible for the observer to see what would otherwise be beyond the power of the human eye and to know by the angle at which it is viewed the distance away.

It requires a little practice to use this wonderful instrument, but in a few days the operator ascertains how easily he can determine the precise distance he is from the object he is looking at, and by a quick calculation he directs the pointing of the gun so that it cannot fail to strike at the desired spot.—Pearson's Weekly.

To Cure Shell Shock.

Many officers and men are returning to England suffering severely from shell shock and other ailments contracted in the trenches. The peculiar nervous condition in which these men find themselves is difficult to treat. At Droitwich, England, are some remarkable natural brine baths which have done much to restore these unfortunate victims of the war to their normal state.

The treatment consists of a number of baths such as douche, needle, and spray. Men who are able to swim are encouraged to use the swimming baths. There are a number of these. In cases of rheumatism and frost-bite much relief has been obtained through the use of a brine spray and massage. The attendant has a hose attached to his arm so that he can massage and spray the patients at the same time. This hose is used to spray the more delicate portions of the body. At the same time, a stronger spray from a wall-shower keeps the entire body well doused. At first the brine spray is applied warm. The invigorating effect is soon felt, however, and after a few treatments the patient is able to stand a cooler temperature.—Popular Science.

Eat the Carp.

"Eat the carp," is the caption on a poster which has been issued by the American bureau of fisheries. It is used in a carp campaign which is now being conducted by the bureau. This campaign is intended to promote the fuller utilization of carp in regions in which it is abundant.

Don't stay stuffed up! Get a small bottle of Ely's Cream Balm from your druggist now. Apply a little of this fragrant, antiseptic cream in your nostrils, let it penetrate through every air passage of the head; soothe and heal the swollen, inflamed mucous membrane, giving you instant relief. Ely's Cream Balm is just what every cold and catarrh sufferer has been seeking. It's just splendid.

CHILL STARTS COLD

WAS SICK FOUR WEEKS

JUST ABLE TO CRAWL ABOUT

Mr. Weldon T. Hawkes, Curryville, N.B., writes: "Last spring I was taken very ill with a severe cold. I got wet and it started with a chill. I was sick four weeks, and was just able to crawl about. People all said I had inflammation of the lungs, and I think I did. I told a friend to get me two bottles of Dr. Wood's Norway Pine Syrup, and before the first one was taken my cold and cough were broken up, and the second did its work completely. I am raising a family and I find that it is a good medicine for the children."

There is no remedy that will cure stubborn colds or coughs, the kind that won't let go, like Dr. Wood's Norway Pine Syrup.

It allays the inflammation, soothes the irritation, heals the diseased mucous lining of the lungs and bronchial tubes, and rids the system completely of all the bad effects of lingering coughs and colds.

There are so many spurious "Pine" preparations on the market that you should see you get "Dr. Woods" when you ask for it.

Put up in a yellow wrapper; three pine trees the trade mark; price 25c. and 50c.; manufactured only by The T. Milburn Co., Limited, Toronto, Ont.

DEVITALIZED IRON taken three times a day after meals will increase your strength 100 per cent in two weeks in many cases.—Ferdinand King, M.D.

Strikes In Germany Grow More Serious

PARIS ATTACKED BY ENEMY PLANES

STRIKE MAY FORCE GERMAN GOVERNMENT TO ITS KNEES

Disturbances Have Taken a More Serious Turn--Cessation of Work in Hamburg is Virtually Complete, the Strikers Demanding Immediate Peace on the Basis of No Annexations and No Indemnities---German Aeroplanes Drop Bombs at Various Points in Paris and Its Suburbs

A SUMMARY OF TO-DAY'S WAR CABLES

(Canadian Press Despatch.)

LONDON, January 31.—No one has been permitted to cross the Swiss frontier from Germany since Tuesday morning, according to the Daily News correspondent at Geneva. Private reports received in Switzerland represent the strike situation as having taken a serious turn late Tuesday night. The refusal of Herr Wallrolf, Minister of the Interior, to confer with the strike leaders, is said to have infuriated the strikers. The central strike committee in Berlin now has sat continuously since noon Monday. Assurances of solidarity are said to have reached the committee Tuesday from Leipzig, Dusseldorf and Barmen, notwithstanding the rigid military control throughout Germany. The opinion in Geneva is that the strike movement will reach a crisis soon. It is felt the movement either will collapse or take a turn which may force the German Government to its knees. The report of a strike in the works at Essen is not confirmed, but the Munich Post says Dr. Krupp Von Boslen has issued a statement to the workmen in the Krupp Works urging them to keep steady nerves in this moment of crisis, and to remember their brothers in the field.

(Special to The Toronto Star and The Peterborough Examiner.)

AMSTERDAM, January 31.—While agitation for a general strike failed at Munich following a stormy meeting, it has spread to the munitions and transportation workers in Furth and Nurenburg, according to copies of yesterday's Cologne Volk Zeitung, received here to-day.

(Canadian Press Despatch.)

AMSTERDAM, January 31.—The number of strikers in Berlin is estimated at about 120,000, according to a semi-official statement issued in Berlin yesterday, when there had been only an inconsiderable increase in the strike since Tuesday.

(Canadian Press Despatch.)

LONDON, January 31.—Few telegrams have arrived in Copenhagen from Germany, one telegraph despatch from the Danish capital says, and news is scarce owing to that fact that most of the important Berlin newspapers have not been published. Military authorities in the Berlin district have prohibited all meetings convened to discuss public questions, as well as workmen's meetings and demonstrations. Fifty thousand workmen have ceased work at Kiel. The strike is now general in the Chemnitz district, which is the most important industrial section in Saxony. The Germania of Berlin, says Herr Walraff, Minister of the Interior, still refuses to meet delegates of workmen, and the strike continues to grow.

(Canadian Press Despatch.)

LONDON, January 31. — Among the views expressed in special despatches from Holland in regard to the German strike is one that the German Government is exploiting what hardly amounts to more than a peace times demonstration with the object, if possible, of producing more serious movements in Allied countries, where it apparently believes the governments are less able than itself to control such movements. Another correspondent gathers from the German press that the German Government intends to make the strike movement a pretext for breaking off the Brest-Litovsk negotiations, and as ascribing it to the machinations of Bolsheviki, with whom therefore, it would be impossible to hold further conferences.

(Canadian Press Despatch.)

COPENHAGEN, January 31.—A state of siege has been declared at Hamburg, Altona and Wandsbeck, according to the Hamburg Echo newspaper.

(Canadian Press Despatch.)

LONDON, January 31.—The German strike is still growing in magnitude, the Exchange Telegraph correspondent at Copenhagen reported. In Berlin 700,000 persons are on strike, 58,000 of these being women. Great numbers of Socialist leaders have been arrested in various German towns, according to this authority.

(Canadian Press Despatch.)

LONDON, January 31.—The cessation of work in Hamburg is now virtually complete, according to a Daily Telegraph despatch from Rotterdam. The strike has extended from the Vulcan Shipbuilding Works in Hamburg to the works of Blohm and Voss, another large shipbuilding concern. The strikers demand immediate peace on the basis of no annexations and no indemnities.

(Canadian Press Despatch.)

LONDON, January 31.—Socialist party leaders in Germany, according to the Berliner Tageblatt, have asked President Kaempf to summon the Reichstag immediately in view of the alarming events of the past few days.

(Canadian Press Despatch.)

LONDON, January 31.—An official communication issued last night says:

"The enemy's artillery was somewhat more active than usual in the neighbourhood of Epehy and Havrincourt in the LaBassee sector and east of Polygon Wood.

(Canadian Press Despatch.)

LONDON, January 31. — The official statements on British shipping losses says: Arrivals 2,352, sailings 2,309. British merchantmen 1,600 tons or over, sunk by mine or submarine, nine; under 1,600 tons, six; fishing vessels one. British merchantmen unsuccessfully attacked, eight. The sinking of fifteen British merchantmen exceeds by seven the total for the previous two weeks in both of which six large ships and two small ones were lost.

(Canadian Press Despatch.)

LONDON, January 31.—The official statement issued to-day reads:

"Our patrols secured prisoners last night in the neighbourhood of Epehy. Beyond some hostile artillery activity south and north of Lens, and in the neighbourhood of Passchendaele, there is nothing further to report."

(Canadian Press Despatch.)

PARIS, January 31.—German airplanes raided Paris last night. Bombs were thrown at various points in Paris and suburbs. Several persons were killed and material damage is reported, according to the official announcements. Full details are lacking.

(Special to The Toronto Star and The Peterborough Examiner.)

BERLIN, via Loudon, January 31.—Fourteen tons of bombs were dropped on Paris last night in the first of the systematic air attacks which will be carried out in reprisal for enemy raids on German territory, the official statement declared to-day.

PRISONERS TO CUT WOOD

(Special to the Toronto Star and The Peterborough Examiner.)

KINGSTON, Jan. 31.— As the men confined in the city jail have no work to do outside of shoveling snow around the Court House, the chief industry, tile making, having been abandoned, there is a move on foot to have the nineteen prisoners now confined, put to work sawing wood for fuel. There are many trees in the parks and around the city that could be used.

SEPARATE PEACE FOR RUSSIA ONLY AS A LAST RESORT

Russian Policy is to Prolong the Negotiations at Brest Litovsk As Long As Possible in Order to Draw Out New German Propositions

STIR UP REVOLUTION

(Special to the Toronto Star and The Peterborough Examiner.)

(By Joseph Shaplen.)

PETROGRAD, Jan. 31.— Foreign Minister Trotsky's speech before the Pan Soviet Congress was generally regarded as foreshadowing a separate peace between Russia and Germany, unless a revolutionary upheaval occurs in the Central Empires.

At the same time the United Press was authoritatively informed that the Russians' policy is to prolong the negotiations at Brest Litovsk as long as possible in order to draw out new German propositions and also in order to stir up a revolution in Austria.

Trotsky and his colleagues hope to compel a modification of the German terms, and possibly to obtain entrance of the Allies into the negotiations. Emphasis was laid on the declaration that a separate peace would be signed only as a last resort.

"We have done our best for the cause of democratic peace," was the way Trotsky reported to the Pan Soviet meeting. "Our hands are clean. Our obligations to other people have been met. If we are compelled to sign a separate peace, there is not a single honest Entente worker who can blame us."

The Pravada to-day printed a story that it was rumoured a month ago that a separate peace agreement had been concluded between the Central Powers and Roumania.

The latter, it was stated, had been granted "compensations" in Bessarabia.

FRANK JENNE Says:

A lady customer remarked the other day: "Why do the stores not keep better clothing for boys." The lady had not seen Semi-ready High school clothes for boys. But when this clothing was shown her, she said: "This is just what I have been looking for, quality and style combined."

If you wish for boys' clothing that will stand the hard knocks of school and yet have style, "come to me."

BOLSHEVIKI WAS SUCCESS

The Opposition Admits Trotsky-Lenine Party Have Come to Stay "at Least An Inconveniently Long Time"

DEMOBOLIZE ARMY

Canadian Press Despatch:

LONDON, Jan. 31. — Despatches from Petrograd say the Bolsheviki government continues to claim considerable military success in the Ukraine and elsewhere and those opposed to them admit that the Bolsheviki have come to stay, "at least an inconveniently long time." Demobilization of four more classes of the army has been ordered by the government. All men over thirty-one are also to be relieved of military duty.

NOT AS DRASTIC AS IT SOUNDS

(Special to the Toronto Star and The Peterborough Examiner.)

TORONTO, Jan. 31.—"I do not think that the order of the government taking over all the wheat in Canada is quite so drastic as it sounds," said Jas. Richardson, of James Richardson and Sons, one of the leading grain firms of the Dominion, to-day. "I was in consultation with the members of the Board of Grain Commissioners and heard what they were going to do," said Mr. Richardson. "It is very much a problem of transportation. The idea is to affect a more equitable distribution of the wheat to the Eastern Millers."

Will Not Be Able To Sell Bonded Liquor

Special to the Examiner:

TORONTO, Jan. 31.—That the liquor which is in bond in the province will not be permitted to be sold after April 1st, and that it will have to be disposed of to the vendors authorized by the Ontario License Board, in some other manner, is the opinion of Chairman Flavelle, of the Ontario Board of License Commissioners.

"The only way that a limit could be placed on the amount of liquor that is received by the residents in the province before April 1st would be by the action of the Provincial Government," stated the Chairman, "and I doubt whether the Government would be justified in taking such action."

"I do not think that any legislation the Government could pass would assist us."

"Cinderella" To Play in Midland

"Cinderella," which has twice been successfully presented in Peterborough under the direction of Mrs. A. A. Perrin, is to be offered for the approval of the people of Midland. At the request of the Next-of-Kin Club of the Northern town, the Cinderella Company will visit Midland, on Monday and Tuesday evenings of next week, leaving here on Monday morning.

There will be a full rehearsal of the Company at the Belmont Club rooms to-morrow (Friday) night, at 8 o'clock.

Belleville people have also asked for a chance to see "Cinderella."

Official Story Of Splendid Victory For The Italians

Enemy Driven Far Back From His Former Front With Very Heavy Losses—Prisoners Exceed 2600 Men and More Than 100 Officers

FOE ADMITS DEFEAT

ROME, Jan. 30.—A despatch from Italian Army Headquarters in Northern Italy to-day says:

The battle in the mountains west of the Brenta River during the past two days has been one of the most decisive since the new battle lines were formed. There have been sweeping successes for the Italians, who, after taking three strategic heights, captured yesterday the important position of Monte di Val Bella.

The enemy was driven far back from his former front with very heavy losses. The prisoners taken by the Italians exceed 2,600 men, and more than 100 officers, six cannon, one hundred machine guns and several thousand rifles were captured.

The fighting was of the bloodiest character with hand grenades, bayonets and knives.

An enemy attempt to bring forward large reinforcements caused a debacle, in which the retiring forces got into extreme confusion with those being brought to the front.

The Austrians have been bombarding with extreme violence the positions captured by the Italians. The Italian fire has been powerfully centred on points behind the enemy lines.

Extremely heavy losses were suffered by the Austrians, two of their divisions being almost completely wiped out.

Text of Italian Report.

The text of the statement reads: "Our gallant troops in the plateau zone of the army successful crowned yesterday the action begun on the eastern Asiago Plateau on Sunday by wresting from the enemy his positions to the west of the Frenzela Valley.

"Col. del Rosso and Col. Dechele, which are on the descent towards the western edge of the valley, having been taken on Monday, and since then held with valor, the enemy in the region of Sasso Rosso was hard pressed and his numerous counter-attacks being repulsed with the bayonet the success was yesterday extended by the capture of Monte di Valbella."

100 Machine Guns Taken.

The enemy suffered very heavy losses, and two of his divisions were nearly completely destroyed. The war booty captured has not yet been completely specified, but includes, so far, more than one hundred officers and 2,500 men, six guns of various calibres, about 100 machine guns, very numerous trench mortars, several thousand rifles and a very large quantity of ammunition and war materials of all kinds.

"The reaction of the hostile artillery on the positions taken was violent. Our fire was rapidly and powerfully concentrated on the most distant objectives.

"The enemy aircraft attempted many reconnoitering and offensive actions, but were effectively met by our machines and anti-aircraft fire, which during the day accounted for seventeen enemy machines."

Berlin Admits Defeat.

BERLIN, Jan. 27.—The text of the German official statement reads:

"On the Asiago Plateau the Italians maintained their attacks with strong forces. In the region of Monte Sisemol they broke down with heavy losses. After severe fighting Monte di Valbella and Col del Rosso remained in the hands of the enemy."

COAL SITUATION IS CRITICAL IN NEW YORK

(Canadian Press Despatch.)

NEW YORK, January 31.—The coal shortage in New York City and State has now reached an alarming stage. Factories, stores and public institutions in large numbers have closed, and unless relief comes soon, others will be forced to shut down. The fuel supply in many hospitals in this city is reported low. Reports from up-State indicate the situation is even worse than in New York City, one administrator describing it as dreadful. Much suffering has been reported in every county in the State.

TRAINS CARRYING FOOD FOR ALLIES ON FAST SCHEDULE

Fast Freights Are Running From St. Louis and Chicago to New York in Sixty Hours—Piers Taken Over by Government

RUSHING FOOD SUPPLIES

Canadian Press Despatch:

NEW YORK, Jan. 31.—Fast freight trains loaded with food for the Allies started from the middle west to-day, running on a sixty hour schedule from St. Louis and Chicago to New York, compared with former running time of eight days to two weeks. Enough railroad piers have been taken over by the government to permit loading twenty-five ships simultaneously. These measures, it is understood, are consequent upon urgent representations from the Entente government respecting the food situation.

To the Editor of The Examiner:

Dear Sir, — Kindly allow me, through the medium of your valuable paper, to thank the St. John's Young Ladies' Guild, for the splendid parcel of socks sent by them, to the Peterborough boys in France. It is with great pleasure that I become a recipient of a very nice pair, which came at a time when, after being in the trenches for some time, the boys enjoyed the pleasure of changing their damp ones for those sent by the thoughtful ladies of Peterborough.

Sir, thanking you in anticipation, I am one of pour old readers,

MANY THOUSAND SOLDIER VOTES WILL BE DISCARDED

General Returning Officer O'Connor's Ruling Bars Out Almost 15,000 Votes Among the Soldiers Who Cast Their Vote in Canada

MANY RIDINGS AFFECTED

(Special to the Toronto Star and The Peterborough Examiner.)

OTTAWA, Jan. 31.—General Returning Officer O'Connor's ruling respecting soldiers voting has, it is estimated, ruled out almost fifteen thousand votes among soldiers who cast their ballots in Canada. There has no doubt been an obvious attempt in many cases to "place" ballots. Chambly Vercheres, where over a thousand ballots were polled, is not the only riding affected by the order. Others are Cumberland, where Mr. Speaker Rhodes was defeated on Dec. 17, Provencher, where Dr. Molloy at present heads the poll, Springfield, where R. L. Richardson already has a sufficient majority, the Yukon, where Dr. Thompson, the former member, was defeated in the deferred election, South Renfrew, Richmond and South Capt Breton, Hants and others.

It is stated that much of the "irregularity" occurred where the men who had resided in counties in which acclamations were given, endeavoured to place their votes where they would count. For instance, supposing a man who resided in Glengarry placed his vote in Toronto, the vote would go to Glengarry despite the fact that there was no contest there. It is possible that the rulings will have the effect of upsetting a number of calculations regarding a change in the present standing of seats. It would appear that the great majority of votes will count where the voter resided and that counties will be affected in proportion only as they enlisted men.

The actual counting of ballots here commences toward the end of the week.

Prince Albert, Sask. Delighted By Mrs. Geo. Sherry's Voice

One of the best musical concerts ever held in the city was presented last evening at St. Alban's college in aid of the prisoners of war fund, and the splendid sum of $76.20 realized.

The committee in charge is very grateful to Mrs. George Sherry of Saskatoon, for the unselfish way in which she contributed to the programme and the success of the concert was felt to be in a large measure due to the work of the visitor.

Her first two numbers (a) Blackbird's Song (Cyril Scott), (b) Absence (Eastope Martin) and (a) I'm Alone (from the Lily of Killarney-Benedict), (b) My Little Darling (from Salvador Rosa, Gennes), were remarkable for the absolute finish and wonderful voice control displayed. Full of daintiness and charm as a contrast to her other songs was the set from Greig To a Violet, Two Brown Eyes, and Autumn. Her last two songs again brought out the remarkable versatility of her voice (a) Songs My Mother Taught Me (Dvorak), (b) O Sea! Dreadful Sea! (Delibes), the last named being one of the finest on the programme.

The solo, Onaway! Awake Beloved (from Hiawatha) by Judge Doak, was rendered in a very fine manner.—Prince Albert Herald.

LIEUT. WORTH TELLS OF STRANGE COINCIDENCE

Lieut. Walter G. Worth, formerly of the 93rd Battalion, tells of an interesting coincidence in a letter to his brother here: He says:

"I had company down to London with a Bradford officer going back off leave, and a perfect stranger to me. What do you think of this for a coincidence? As he took down his shoulder pack when we approached London I suddenly noticed my name on it, 'Lieut. W. G. Worth, 18th Canadians, France.' I stared at it for a moment, and then asked him if that was his name.

"'No,' he said, 'my batman picked it up out of some salvaged equipment.'

"It turned out to be my own pack which I threw off my back on Vimy Ridge when I got hit."

HEALTH ABOVE ALL THINGS.

Our Aldermen are quite justified in rigidly cutting down the civic estimates; but there are some things that should not be allowed to suffer, even if we have to face a high tax rate. Whatever else we pare, we must not economize in the estimates that involve the sanitary conditions and health of the citizens. Without these we cannot long have the live citizenship and equipment in sound personnel, to constitute a progressive and capable community.

It is stated in connection with the students of Laval University, Quebec, that out of 177 students examined under the Military Service Act, 164 were found physically unfit for military service. If the students of Laval are fairly representative of the physical condition of the rising generation, Quebec won't long continue to have a handsome provincial surplus. There will be deficits in the budget, as there will be greatly lessened effectiveness in all departments of provincial achievement. The intellectual machinery of Laval may be of the highest, but it seems evident that what sets the pace for everything else, the physical condition, is neglected. There must be an absence of physical training and health-giving and health-keeping athletcis.

Here we have an argument for military training, compulsory military training, in our schools. Such a training as far as it would go, would give us a robust school boy-hood, and provide in the next generation for restoring the healthy national manhood withdrawn from our population by the demands and the casualties of war. School study exacts for the maintenance of sound health, a judicious combination of mental and physical exercise.

Even in war time the cultivation of athletics is an indispensably right thing. For this reason the success of our hockey team is a matter of good business, added to the satisfaction of success. Hockey doesn't permit or develop physical weaklings, and even the success of our older boys in the curling game is a good sign that the elder generation are bound in the matter of health, physical strength and stamina to hold what they have and increase their capital. Compulsory athletics in our schools through military training, would be a good thing for the school children, and a wholesome thing for the country.

Our Aldermen may cheese-pare to the bone in almost anything else, but they must not cut down the bill for maintaining the work of the Board of Health in conserving and promoting the interests of the public health and the consequent efficiency of our population for the strenuous battles of peace, for even in times of peace our whole people to be at their best should be kept on a war footing, so far as physical fitness is concerned. Nor should aldermanic mania for economy be permitted to cripple to any degree the efficiency of the Peterborough Health Association, or impair the quality and extent of its splendid public service.

The Conservation Commission says the coal shortage will be shorter next winter. Who cares? Our concern is to get through this winter alive.

FARM ENLISTMENT.

The Ontario government deserves credit in respect of its evident earnestness of intention to speed up farm production in this province. The main thing required is farm labour, and the means of securing an adequate supply is the crux of the greater production problem. It is, however, improbable that the means the government propose will be sufficiently effective. It is proposed to set up recruiting stations and secure men by the voluntary enlistment of men for farm service.

On the face of it this proposal is defective. Voluntary enlistment for military service has failed, and compulsory methods employed; and the same will probably have to be done in regard to farm labour, if the needed amount is secured.

We know that in times of even the scarcest employment, there are a great many men in cities, towns and villages that will not go to the farms to work. They "hang 'round" in the cities and towns; preferring to half starve, and to trust to an occasional odd job—not too hard nor too long—to keep them alive. When employment is fairly plentiful the indisposition to embark in it, even temporarily, is even greater.

The Examiner has repeatedly pointed out that the only effective way to assure a supply of farm help is for the Dominion government to apply the provisions and facilities of the Military Service Act in providing farm labour—make the provision of labour a military matter, an action fully justified, since food production is a matter of tantamount importance to provision of fighting forces. And it is said that Ontario government officials themselves, are of opinion that as far as Ontario is concerned, it may be necessary to draft men for the farm.

If this is done, something will be done; for it will not be difficult to mobilize a little Ontario farm army from the classes under the Military Service Act who are not fit for fighting. All that is needed is to call them up and sign them up for farm service. This can be speedily done, for these men are all registered, their names are in the hands of the government, and with proper action the farm forces can be got into shape and given what training may be necessary by the time the season of farm work opens, to have them ready to go where they may be sent, and needed, with the greatest advantage from their services.

If dependence is placed upon the voluntary system to secure farm labour and it fails, as it is pretty sure to do, much time will be lost, and the opening of the farming season will face us without an adequate provision of labour supply.

If the Dominion government adopts the draft system, as government officials think will have to be done, the Ontario government can provide concurrent preparation.

It can systematize the labour situation, have prepared an organized slate of farm needs, showing exactly on what farms, and in what districts, farm labour is needed, how much, and of what kind. Then, the Dominion government having the men in hand, ready equipped, can send them to the exact point needed.

The advantage of militarizing the situation is that system will be established, and there will be direct results. In Switzerland, every little commune or municipality, is part of the military machinery, and when the military authorities want material supplies, such as food or horses, etc., or to bring together the units of the military organization, the thing is as good as done—the machinery is there, and all that is needed is to put it into motion.

Conversely, the same thing is possible here. If the Dominion government mobilizes and organizes the farming forces, and there is provincial coordinated effort in the form of tabulated and exact provincial information as to where labour is needed, the government is ready to meet the demand.

If we are going to secure the greatest need of the war, increased production, it is worth while going to the work in earnest, systematically, thoroughly and, consequently, effectively.

If the best is to be done, there is no time to lose in setting about it. Spring is at hand; it is already in the air, fighting with the retiring rear ranks of winter.

It is claimed that the depot battalions under the M.S.A., after only about a month of training, are as efficient in real fighting quality—musketry, bayonet fighting and actual military work, as preceding units were after months of training. This is due to the elimination of military frills, and concentration on practical work.

The Food Controller And Supplies Of Feeding Stuffs For Our Farmers' Stock

In order to prevent retail dealers taking advantage of the scarcity of bran and shorts to exact excessive profits over the prices fixed by the Food Controller, the latter has ordered that the retail price of bran and shorts, where cash is paid, must not exceed by more than ten cents per bag the cost, f.o.b., track, at the dealer's station. In cases where purchasers take delivery direct from the car the profit has been limited to a maximum of five cents per bag. An extra charge may be made where credit is given and the bran and shorts delivered from the dealer's store, but this amount must be only a reasonable charge representing the consideration of such services. When the miller sells at the mill in less than carload lots, he is not permitted to add more than five cents per bag of 100 pounds to the price at which he is permitted to sell under the Food Controller's Order of December 17, 1917. When the purchaser brings bags to the mill to be filled, the miller must not add more than $2.00 per ton to the price at which he is permitted to sell under the Order of December 17. In effect, the miller must not charge more than the fixed Fort William bulk prices, plus or minus freight to or from Fort William, and in addition $2.00 per ton as retail charges. For example, suppose that at a point in Eastern Canada the freight from Fort William is $4.20 per ton. In this case the selling price for bran per ton when the purchaser supplies the bags would be $24.50 plus $4.20 plus $2.00, a total of $30.70. The Order applies to all millers and dealers in Canada.

While this action has been taken in order to render available to the farmer all supplies of bran and shorts at the lowest possible cost, the amount obtainable is very limited and farmers must depend mainly upon other feeding stuffs. Prices for live stock are such that, despite the high cost of coarse grains, it is profitable to feed them to food animals.

The statement from the Food Controller's Office says that, if the price of bran and shorts had not been fixed, these products would have risen in price to an amount representing their feeding value compared with other grains and feeds. But the fixing of the price has only ensured that in so far as these feeds are available they are comparatively cheap; the supply has not been increased thereby.

The present total daily production of bran and shorts by all the mills in Canada is only 84 cars and the supplies of wheat will not enable even this rate of production to be maintained for the balance of the crop year. The total bran and shorts produced in Canada, if divided among all the farm live stock in Canada, would only give one meal in three weeks. A flour mill of 100 barrels capacity daily manufactures less than two tons of bran and shorts per day which means that a single carload will only be produced every two weeks.

The Food Controller has taken measures to reserve for the farmers of the Dominion all by-products of grain elevators that are available for stock feed and also feed-wheat, bran and shorts and all such mill feeds. Applications for licenses to export 6,640 tons of bran, shorts and mill feeds have been refused. Indeed the saving has been very much greater because the mills were definitely informed that licenses would not be issued for the exportation of such products. Feed wheat has all been retained in Canada and more than 2,850 tons of screenings have also been saved from export. Arrangements have been made which will keep the exportation of oats, barley, and other feeds to a minimum except for shipments overseas by the Allied nations.

The Food Controller has been in constant communication with the authorities at Washington with a view to expediting shipments of corn into this country for feeding purposes. Arrangements have been made for its entry as soon as means of transportation have been provided. The American corn crop is the greatest in the history of that country, but the car shortage, combined with the fact that much of the corn is wet and cannot be shelled until it has had a long period of seasoning, has kept supplies from the market. At least until it is available farmers are advised to use domestic coarse grains for live stock and also to make use of whatever quantities of cottonseed meal, oil cake and gluten meal and mixed feeds are obtainable.—Journal of Commerce.

HAD TO HOLD BROKEN PLANE TOGETHER

A Daring Feat By British Aviator in Texas.

SAN ANTONIO, Tex., Jan. 29.—With a broken airplane, 3,000 feet above earth, Major C. K. Rhinehardt and Captain J. Phipps, of the Royal British Flying Corps, en route from Fort Worth to San Antonio, won a thrilling battle for their lives recently and reached their destination safely.

The last sixty miles of the flight were made with Major Rhinehardt lying out on the plane and holding in position a wing on which the struts had broken. The accident occurred when the men had flown 185 miles and was noted when the machine began careening.

Captain Phipps, leaving the car, tried to adjust the struts, but failed. Major Rhinehardt surrendered the control and by holding the wing in place, partly with his body and partly with his arms, succeeded in finishing the flight.

THE CANADIANS

1914.

"Arise and come!" T'was thus the summer sky
Pealed the wild tocsin from the Motherland.
And to the call of that maternal cry
The sons of Canada rose hand in hand.
"O ye who glory in brave Wolfes renown;
O ye whose blood the fire of Montcalm knows,
Arise and come. The foe strikes at the Crown—
Thy sons are called, O Lady of the Snows."

And those brave sons in rightful pride went forth,
Arrayed in all the panoply of war;
With hearts firm set beneath the soldiers' cloth,
To do—or die and see their homes no more.
And Gaspe's Bay, refulgent in the sun,
Bids them farewell, while from shores arose
The fervent prayer that Heaven's will be done,
Of, "Guard them, Mother, Lady of the Snows."

Nor mourns the Northland for her valiant sons,
Though foes barbaric face them fiercely wild;
The tear wells up, but from the eye ne'er runs,
To dim the pride of mother, wife or child.
Deep in their hearts the vital spark they share,
That Spartan mothers felt before their foes;
Their God their hope; their faith the solemn prayer,
Of, "Guard them, Mother, Lady of the Snows."

Then strike, Canadians, for old England's fame,
For thine own land and for thy people's sake,
Let no Teutonic foe that land enchain,
To kill the freedom that her sons partake.
Then will thy deeds be hallowed in that time,
When other men thy glory shall disclose,
And tell how thy land prayed with faith sublime—
Oh! guard them, Mother, Lady of the Snows."

1918.

And o'er the land where once the lilies shed
Their sweetest fragrance in the glowing sun
Now rest the bones of those heroic dead,
Who gave their all that Freedom should be won,
Oh! brave Canadians, ye have reached the goal
Where Heaven's touch hath smoothed thy long repose,
Yet in the annals of Time's muster roll
Thy fame, thy Mother keeps, O Lady of the Snows.

POLES HAMPER FIREMEN'S WORK.

Lindsay citizens who were in Peterborough on Saturday and watched the firemen fighting the big fire, could not but comment on the number of poles on the main thoroughfare, which must greatly hamper the firemen's efforts, besides marring the appearance of the streets.

Lindsay's main street stands prominently in comparison with Peterborough's business thoroughfare which is dotted with a forest of

MUSIC IN THE HOME

PERIODICAL INNOVATIONS IN MUSIC.

"The violin has for long had a general appeal to everyone who loves music," said a gentleman to a friend recently, "and the 'cello, that noble instrument, the baritone among strings, equally fine for solo or ensemble work, is growing in favor, but the little ukulele comes along and sweeps everything before it; it must be that the ukulele is cheaper and easier to play that makes the difference—otherwise I cannot account for such a simple instrument, one that offers a more or less restricted repertoire, becoming so widely taken up."

This gentleman must know that people are usually ready for an innovation. And the ukulele is not the first one. An Englishman told the other day that some years ago a Russian Balalaika Orchestra visited his country, and it created such a sensation that there sprang up all over the country Balalaika orchestras among amateur musicians. He said the craze soon died out and now not one person in a thousand knows whether a Balalaik is the name of a river in Russia or a savage tribe in the centre of Africa or what it is.

"Well, tell us what the Balalaika is like," said one of a group of listeners, "from the way you started out I know it is some sort of an alleged musical instrument."

"Russian, of course," replied the Englishman. "It is a stringed instrument extremely popular with the peasantry, particularly in the Ukraine. For hundreds of years it has retained its primitive shape. It consists of a triangular sound board to which is glued a vaulted back forming a body having a triangular base enabling it to stand upright. It has a fretted neck and two, three or four strings usually tuned to a minor chord. The peasants obtain some charming effects on it, by plucking the strings with the fingers or a plectrum. The gradations from pp to ff are most effective. In some of the higher passages the tone is wonderfully violin like."

It was not this man's intention to convey the impression that he thought the ukulele popularity was waning; he thought rather the opposite. But his remark was just an observation on the readiness of the public to take up the novel innovation just because it is an innovation.

THE ART OF ARTS.

If music were nothing but an entertainment, a mere form of enjoyment, it would still be abundantly worth while. Indeed, almost every form of pleasure is based on music. Young people without dancing would sit in perpetual gloom. Young students, without ragtime, would be a pitiable spectacle. Even in these days a good dinner cannot be surorunded in a restaurant without music as an accompaniment, a sort of pungent and melodious sauce. Indeed it is difficult to think of any form of enjoyment that does not pay tribute of some sort to this wonderful art.

But the other side of music is of even more importance. It is a complete education for the ear and a perpetual stimulus to the emotions. The non-musical man is ill-balanced. His eye may be trained, his judgment and reason in excellent fettle, but he is missing some of the greatness and wonder of life, if he has no appreciation for the arts. Music is the soul in expression, the language of feeling as distingnished from the more precise language of poetry. It is the romance of sound, the excellence of grace and form, the fulness of beauty. "The man who has no music in his soul is fit for treason, strategems and spoils." Best of all, it is not necessary, in the acquisition of a musical taste to become a competent executant upon any instrument. Men who have never considered the art until well past middle life, have been roused to its beauties, either through the musical studies of the young people, or by the possession of a phonograph or a player piano. In Chicago a musical public was practically created by the weekly concerts of the Thomas Orchestra, and there is no enthusiast so filled with his subject as the man who has discovered something new and wonderful when business success has given him some leisure.

Of late years the trend towards musical education for the young has become most pronounced. Children are beginning the work younger than ever before and are being educated not to think of practice as a drudgery but as a pleasure. Competent teaching under standardized methods is doing much to give better ideals and more sane direction. The future of music in Canada is exceptionally bright and will grow brighter with the years.

OF CHRISTMAS MUSIC.

Christmas music in the main is folk music. In every Christian land the story of Bethlehem has appealed to the common people and from their pleasure in the tale has arisen that remarkable body of quaint poetry and mellow music which is one of the world's treasures. From the middle ages comes even that king of Christmas Music, the hymn Adeste Fideles. Then the English carols from "When Christ was born of Mary Free," to "God Save you Merry Gentlemen," form in themselves a fascinating literature well worthy of anyone's attention. Rural France has had carols or "Noels" for five hundred years and more. Many of them were imported to Canada and Mr. Ernest Myrand of Quebec has written a book dealing with these lovely French songs. "Ca Bergers, assem-blons-nous" is sung in practically every French church at the midnight mass on Christmas eve, and there are scores of others familiar to every French child from his or her cradle. The quaint mediæval fancy of giving speech to the Ox and Ass in these Christmas poems is interesting. Not long ago Pierne, the French composer, wrote a remarkable cantata entitled the Children of Bethlehem, a work which has never yet been performed in Canada, mainly because of its extraordinary difficulty. There may be another reason also. The words of the ass are set for a solo voice, and the table of contents has a ludicrous appearance:

"The Ass Baritone
The Ox Bass."

It is not known which baritone Pierne had in mind when he wrote the work.

EVERYBODY ENJOYS HEARING SAINT-SAENS' WORKS.

Ask the average Canadian concert-goer who is the best known of contemporary French musicians and composers and he will probably say Saint-Saens. This may be partly due to the fact of his long musical career, he being now well over eighty, but also to his power to appeal to the great majority of people who prefer music not too profound. As someone put it "Saint-Saens does not try to make up for lack of melodic instinct by pretending that he is a modern Bach or for a failure to grasp the rules of harmony by the announcement that he has a message too deep to be expressed in conventional forms."

To a gentleman who attended a recent concert the most enjoyable number on the programme was the Saint-Saens Concerto in G Minor. His description of the different movements which follows at once indicates the reasons for the popularity of this Concerto. The first movement opens with the solo instrument, leading to a short melody which introduces the main theme. The second movement, however, was the "hit".

It is a Scherzo, and a very merry one at that. It opens very lightly with a sort of merry whirldgig in triple time, which must be played as lightly, softly and clearly as possible. This runs on at high speed merrily up and down in a kind of jolly gallop until it pulls up short in the midst of its fun and sobers down. But this is only for a moment. The swing goes on again, bumpety-bump lightly in the bass and leads out into a most charming little air in three-four time and of irresistibly dancy rhythm. It is not a merry gallop so much as rather a charming two-step. The melody itself forms what would be called no doubt in a formal scherzo, the trio. The first part returns, is repeated, and ends like a merry child gradually ceasing from its romp and coming silently to rest.

The finale reminds one of the tripping country dance like one of those Spanish village steps, danced to the accompaniment of castanets and guitar. The second theme, if it may be called so, comes in and goes out several times during the movement alternating with the first theme, and the two together keep up their good-humored race until the movement approaches the end, which is extremely brilliant.

This is the type of composition that interests the general run of ordinary folks in good music and encourages an improvement in their tastes.

Lingerie blouses will be very important for spring.

C.P.R. Footbridge	3800.00	4260.61
	$35000.00	$37813.41	$35000.00

The figures in the 1918 column actually total $36,000. The Board reduced the allotment for pavement cleaning to $3,500, and for tree trimming to $200, making a combined cut of $300. But to complete their work they turned to the total, subtracted the comfortable easily-handled figure of $1,000, and the remaining $700 cut will be applied to whatever items can best sustain it.

The Board of Works fixed its appropriations for 1918 last night at $35,000, the identical sum apportioned to this department in 1917. A casual glance at the above figures would indicate that this represents no advance, but last year $3,800 was put in the estimates for the C.P.R. footbridge, which actually cost $4,260.61. Hence, for the regular operations of the Board this year's appropriations show an increase of $3,800.

Street Oil Much Dearer.

Every cent of the estimate will be needed, Ald. Weir predicted. The allowance for street oiling has jumped from $6,000 to $8,300. City Engineer Parsons stated that only one company, the Western Oil Refining Co., of St. Catharines, was prepared to sell oil this year. It offers 40,000 gallons at 13 3-4 cents a gallon, deliveries to commence on 1st May. When it is remembered that street oil cost the city 7.85 cents a gallon last year, the citizens will appreciate not only the big advance in price, but also the comfort that is thus provided in smothering the dust of the hot weather weeks that seem so remote in these midwinter days.

"We need 45,000 gallons for the usual treatment of the streets," Mr. Parsons reminded the Board as a hint that the appropriation would probably fall short of the sum required to provide as much oil as was used last year.

Ald. Weir's Ultimatum.

The recollection of his experience last summer moved Ald. Weir to tell the other aldermen where they get off at, so to speak.

"Before any work is done this summer, we must know what streets are to be oiled," he announced. "We must lay out a definite programme, and no alderman should ask for extras after we have made that decision."

Ald. Edgar: Oil only the leading thoroughfares.

Ald. A. A. McIntyre: I think the residents of the North Ward are prepared to make a sacrifice and will not expect as large an area to be covered as last year. But all the other wards must be prepared to fall in line.

It looked like a bad summer for some of the dust cranks at this stage.

Ald. Edgar: You gave the North Ward a big helping when you were chairman.

Ald. McIntyre: And I'd do it again.

Ald. Worth, who is always suaviter in modo, even when personalities are introduced, suggested that if the streets were gone over once the citizens might be satisfied.

Mr. Parsons: At the present price of oil we cannot hope to go over them all even once.

Ald. McIntyre: Let's cut $2,000 off the oil bill.

Ald. Taylor: It keeps the streets up.

Mayor Duncan: But we've got to keep the estimates down.

Mr. Parsons: I went over all the streets and lanes late in the fall, and I found that a lot of work will be needed on them.

Ald. Dobbin: But we've got to economise somewhere.

Citizens Must Expect Less.

Mayor Duncan: We have got to tell the people that they can't have all the little things they have been demanding every year.

Ald. Edgar: No alderman should ask the Engineer, or recommend that the Engineer, spend five cents more that we appropriated.

Ald. Weir: And you will probably be the first to come along with some extra.

Ald. Edgar: No I won't.

Ald. Malcolm McIntyre: It's all very well for Ald. Edgar to make such a promise. He represents the Centre Ward, and most of the streets are flushed with water and don't need oil. The rest of us in the residential wards have a different situation to face.

The Showdown.

Finally, Ald. M. McIntyre moved that the Board's appropriations for 1918 be $35,000, Ald. Jones seconded it.

Ald. A. A. McIntyre moved an amendment, seconded by Ald. Edgar, that the sum be $34,000.

The amendment was defeated and the vote on the motion was as follows:

Yea (for $35,000): Aldermen Jones, A. A. McIntyre, Worth, and Taylor.

Nay: Mayor Duncan, Aldermen Edgar, M. McIntyre, and Dobbin.

Ald. Weir cast the deciding vote for $35,000.

Control Limited.

Introductory to the presentation of the Board's estimates, Ald. Weir remarked that the Council had decidedly limited control of the tax rate. The big items were not the Board of Works, Fire, Water and Light and other committees. The greater part of the rate had simply to be accepted by the Council, and apparently the only pruning must be confined to the work of the several committees. The item of $1,250 for bridges provides for repairs to the Townsend, Sherbrooke, and Donegal Streets bridges.

Under sidewalk repairs, the first work will be at the Bank of Toronto corner, which Mayor Duncan regarded as a danger spot. That section of the sidewalk will be altered, removing the present slope and slippery surface.

Tree Trimming.

Discussing the trimming of trees, Ald. Edgar remarked that the trees on the south side of Sherbrooke Street between Stewart and Bethune Streets had been severely mutilated, apparently by Utilities Commission linemen.

"It's ridiculous the way they have been cut," he said, and his criticism was extremely mild. "Why not have city men trim the trees for the passage of wires, and the Commission could pay for the work?"

Mayor Duncan: A Gatling gun couldn't have done worse.

On the whole, the Board found few openings for the use of the pruning knife on these estimates. In the end a lump sum of $1,000 was deducted on general principles, as it were, and perhaps that thousand had been included as material for the anticipated whittling.

COULD NOT SLEEP.

Miss Gertrude Pratt, Wolseley St., Barrie, Ont., writes: "I was very much run down and could not sleep either day or night, and my arms and legs ached so that life was very miserable. After using six boxes of Dr. Chase's Nerve Food, I feel well and strong again."

Chicken breast may be cooked in a casserole with diced carrots and celery, and the rest of the chicken used for another meal with gravy and hot biscuits.

SPECIAL COMMITTEE TO STUDY COMMISSION FORMS OF GOVERNMENT AND REPORT BACK TO COUNCIL

The Council gave Ald. Edgar a chance last night to ride his hobby of municipal government by commission. A communication from the London Council requested Peterborough's approval of a proposed amendment to the Municipal Act to give a Commission control of the spending departments in any municipality that might adopt this form of administration.

Mayor Duncan stated that the London idea would elect 25 or 30 aldermen, who, in turn, select a mayor, Board of Education, Police Commission, and would otherwise retain complete sway and supervision of these departments. This gave Ald. Edgar his cue.

"I would like to see some action," he stated. "I would suggest that we get all the information we can from cities in Canada and the United States and elsewhere, if necessary. A special committee could undertake this task and investigate the merits and the demerits of the various forms of commission government that have been tried out. The Committee should take up this work with an open mind, and with the object of examining the elements and the practical results of commission government. A report could be brought in next October fully published and the people should be given a chance to vote on it next January. Let us convince ourselves one way or the other. The citizens have often expressed a desire for a commission and we could offer them an opportunity to express their opinion."

Ald. Edgar stated that a Commission was giving good service in St. John, N.B. He was asked to name the committee, which is launched with the following members:

Aldermen Edgar, Dobbin, M. McIntyre and Jones; Mr. J. J. Turner, President of the Board of Trade; Mr. J. J. Hartley, President of the Trades and Labour Council, and Mayor Duncan and City Solicitor Gordon, ex-officio members.

John McCormack's Big Subscription

Noted Irish Tenor Gives $100,000 to American Red Cross

A gift of $100,000 to the Red Cross from John McCormack, the Irish tenor, has been announced. Paying his own expenses, Mr. McCormack will make a patriotic concert tour from the Atlantic to the Pacific, which opened in Washington, D. C., Tuesday, December 18th, with a concert which the President and Mrs. Wilson attended. "I will keep on singing until I have earned $100,000, which the American Red Cross may use as it sees fit," said Mr. McCormack in making his offer. "The work will be a privilege to me and I will enter it with an enthusiasm such as I never have felt before."

"PRETTY PAPA"

The Musical comedy "Pretty Papa" is one continuous round of laughter. The central figure is a race track betting broker, who, during the absence of his wife, is having the time of his life. He goes to bed when the milkman makes his morning call and arises when the newsboys are crying the latest edition of the evening papers.

One night, while intoxicated, he rescues a beautiful maiden from a couple of thugs. This heroic act starts a series of complications, the like of which has never been equalled in musical comedy.

Halton Powell, long associated with principle comedy roles, enacts the jovial "Alonzo Brown" Powell's conception of the character is unique and decidedly funny. The suporting cast is of general excellence. Miss Grace Baird and Miss Rita Lawrence—two sterling young musical comedy queens—appear in the leading roles. Miss Baird is claimed to be one of the few really funny women of the stage, while Miss Lawrence is noted for her beauty, histrionic ability and beautiful gowns.

Great stress is laid upon the vocal ability of the mixed chorus of classy and manly boys. These young people are said to be of a "type" not usually associated with travelling organizations, but the kind you are in the habit of seeing with big shows playing indefinite engagements on Broadway.

An elaborate and tasteful scenic production is carried complete, as well as extensive "property" and electrical effects and equipment. All in all "Pretty Papa" is a most exceptional and satisfactory entertainment and should be the source of much delight when seen at The Grand next Tuesday, February 5th.

Re-Numbering South End Streets

In his inaugural address Mayor Duncan had referred to the need of re-numbering the houses on George Aylmer and Park streets, south of Lake street. When the first two streets were extended, residents apparently decided not to wait for the city's numbers and themselves assumed the responsibility with consequent confusion.

Ald Taylor moved, seconded by Ald. Worth, that the houses on these streets be renumbered, as some of those south of Lake have identical numbers with houses north of Lake.

The Board decided to pay D. J. Burke's claim for damage to his sewer service resulting from the placing of a Utilities Commission light pole directly over the sewer pipes. The pole had gradually sunk until it crushed the pipes, and Mr. Burke had sent a bill for $25 to the Utilities Commission, who turned it over to the Council for the reason that the pole had been erected under the supervision of the City Engineer.

Mr. Parsons explained that the work had been done before he assumed the position.

The Board decided to offer Mr. Burke $20 without prejudice.

King's Own Class Had Sleigh Drive

A very enjoyable evening was spent on Tuesday, when about eighteen members of the "King's Own Class" of St. James' Church gathered at the Sunday School and went for a sleigh drive. At about 9 o'clock they returned to the home of their teacher, Mrs. E. J. Hotston, Weacott street, where they held their regular monthly business meeting. At its conclusion three contests were engaged in. The prize for the first contest was a book of poems won by Miss Audrey Meredith; for the second contest, a picture painted by Miss Lily Hiscox, was won by Miss Beatrice Meredith; for the third, a box of chocolates was won by Miss Clara Robinson.

The class then adjourned to the dining-room, where a supper of pork and beans, brown bread and coffee was served. Great credit is due to the social committee for the splendid manner in which the evening's programme was carried out.

The Social Committee are—Convenor, Miss Vera McInnes; Miss Edith Savigny, Mis Audrey Meredith, Miss Alberta McDonald, Miss Lily Hiscox, Miss Violet Warren, Miss May Henry, Miss Mary Lesurf.

WELL KNOWN RESIDENT OF GALWAY DEAD

KINMOUNT, Jan. 31.—What weather we are having. The latter part of last week was improving, and we were beginning to enjoy the fine weather, but now it is as bad as ever again. And the good old January thaw, where, oh where, has it gone?

Mr. C. Coben and family are going west this spring to live, and in consequence are disposing of their possessions here. Mr. T. Harding has bought the farm and intends moving to it in the spring.

The C. O. Foresters held a basket social in their hall on Friday evening last and a very enjoyable time was spent. After the disposal of the baskets dancing was in order till the wee sma' hours.

The members of the Presbyterian church intend holding a concert in the C.O.F. hall on Feb. 25th. A good programme is being prepared and a play, entitled, "Aunt Jeneshy's Quilting Bee," will be put on, which will take up most of the evening.

The death of little Gertrude Austin was quite a shock to the people of this village. The child had been ailing for some time and after undergoing an operation, was improving nicely. Last Thursday her father, Mr. H. Austin, went to Toronto to bring her home, but when he arrived he found, to his grief, that the little one had died. The funeral took place from her parent's residence on Sunday to the Kinmount cemetery. She was just seven years of age.

The death took place on Saturday last of Mr. William McGamn, of Galway. He was ill about New Year's and was recovering nicely, but took a relapse and died on Saturday. He leaves to mourn his loss two brothers and two sisters, John and James at home, Miss Mary at home and Mrs. Robt. Henderson of Fenelon Falls. The funeral takes place on Tuesday to the R. C. cemetery, Galway. His brother, Joe, was killed at the front some time ago.

The death also occurred at the Muskoka sanitarium of Mr. Collins, son of Mr. Michael Collins of Swamp Lake. He had been ailing for some time with tuberculosis and his death was not unexpected. The remains arrived here Saturday and were taken to the R.C. cemetery, Galway.

BRITISH CASUALTIES FOR MONTH

Canadian Press Despatch:

LONDON, Jan. 31.—British casualties reported during the month of January totalled 73,917, a slight falling off from those reported during December, which reached a total of 79,527.

COUNCIL ACCEPTS THE SCHOOL DEMAND OF $111,100 THIS YEAR

The Council last night, in Committee of the Whole, passed the Board of Education's budget of $111,100 with a resignation that was heroic. Several of the Aldermen proposed a conference with the Board for the purpose of submitting the School estimates to the microscopic scrutiny of the Council.

"It's futile to expect any reduction," said one member, and another added a despairing "S' no use."

"If we didn't pass their estimates they would go over our heads, and I have been assured by several of the members that they could not reduce their demand," said Mayor Duncan.

To this appropriation of $111,100 may be added $35,000 for the Board of Works; $26,000 for the Fire Department, and about $15,000 expected for the Police Department.

This makes a total of $187,100 practically decided for the city's spending departments and there may be a few extras before the list is finally completed.

ALLIES REARRANGE THEIR ARMIES ON WESTERN FRONT

French Take the Coast Sector, British Extend Line South of St. Quentin—Belgians, Portuguese and Americans Are Located.

WINTER DELAYS ATTACK

LONDON, Jan. 31. — Both French and British official reports last week show that there has been a partial re-arrangement of the western front, possibly to meet the expected German drive and also to accommodate the American forces which General Pershing has reported to be partly in action. The French now occupy the extreme northern end of the line on the Belgian coast, while the British have extended their front south of St. Quentin.

Nieuport, which the British held for three years, ever since Kitchener's army reached the coast and blocked the German thrust toward Dunkirk and Calais, is now occupied by the French and was the scene of a spirited action last week. There is a small salient here in the direction of St. Pierre Chapelle, less than two miles wide at its base, and it was the apex of this salient that the Germans attacked across the frozen ground early on Wednesday morning.

The Raid That Failed.

An intense bombardment preceded the raid, which the French commander characterized as important. When the shelling stopped the Germans came on in great numbers and succeeded in entering part of the first line. The ground here is firmer than further south in Flanders, and the French had built up the shallow trenches with sand bags. A counter attack was at once began and after some hot bayonet work over these defences the Germans were ejected. They hurriedly withdrew in disorder, leaving many dead behind. No prisoners were taken.

Cannoading followed all day with desultory firing as far south as Caeskerke, where the Belgians are established, about three miles from Dixmude, their line merging into the the Ypres sector, seven miles further on, where the British take up the front. There is also a small force of Portuguese in this northern region which will be considerably increased by a new contingent landed in France last week.

With the British the chief action has been by aviators raining bombs on German cities in the region of Metz and attacking the enemy's positions at Roulers and other points in Flanders. Night patrols have been frequent in France on both sides. The fighting when they meet is very sanguinary, but one hears little about them because so few men are engaged. The object is to get prisoners from whom information may be obtained regarding the adversary's strength.

Drive on British Lines.

Whether the German attack at Nieuport was an attempt merely to feel out the Allies' positions or a prelude to the big drive which everybody seems to expect, it is, of course, impossible to say. The latter alternative would indicate Dunkirk as the first objective, with Calais threatened. If such a preposterous programme could succeed the Germans would hold what they consider "trading facilities" to induce the Allies to make peace, just as their occupation of Riga and threat against Reval were thought sufficient to subdue Russia.

Critics here generally predict that the drive will be made against the British front, if not along the Belgian coast, somewhere between Lille and Lens. Near Festubert the Germans hold their furthest westward position, which, however, is only a mile or so further west than Nieuport. A coastal advance would be open to attack from the sea, as Ostend was bombarded last Saturday.

A thrust in Northern Farnce would be free from this objection, beside having the strong support of Lille and Tournai, with the best railway communications in the occupied territory. Colonel Repington, who, as you doubt less know, has left the Times for the Morning Post, predicts a series of great attacks and calls for a million and a half men to meet them.

French Expect Drive.

French critics are more specific. They predict three big attacks—one on the British front, one in the Champagne and one in Alsace-Lorraine. Joseph Reinach, in the Paris Figaro, named Nancy as one of the chief objectives of the expected German offensive. This town, the chief city of Lorraine, is on the edge of the famous Briedy basin which supplies 36,000,000 tons of coal a year to Germany, nearly half of which comes from the part which was not annexed in 1871, but has been occupied by the Huns during the present war.

From the heights of the Meuse south-east of Verdun the chimneys and blast furnaces of this region, less than twenty miles away, are plainly visible. At Pont-a-Mousson, fifteen miles north of Nancy, there are five blast furnaces. Nancy has 110,000 inhabitants, is on the Eastern railway from Strassburg to Paris, and on the Rhine-Marne Canal, where the engagement took place on November 3, in which three Americans were killed and five captured. The scene of this fight was about tweny miles east of Nancy.

The commercial importance of Nancy would be a strong inducement for the Germans to make an effort in this direction. The German salient of St. Mihiel, which lies between Nancy and Verdun, would be safe from further attacks, and the German probably imagine that thus they could reach Paris by the back door. If such are the intentions of the Huns the main attack will be directed from Strassburg and Zabern, on the east and Metz, on the north.

Winter Delays Attack.

The French undoubtedly believe an offensive will be launched here, and it was evenly publicly stated in the Paris Temps that the attack would begin on January 20. This is a month earlier than the start of the Verdun offensive, and the winter has been more severe than in 1916, blocking the roads with snow, which may account for the postponement, if, indeed, the Huns had any such offensive in mind.

In any case both French and British are fully prepared to resist an attack from whatever quarter it may come. There is no doubt whatever that there has been a great concentration of German troops in Belgium, and it is estimated that they now outnumber the Allies in the west. Several hundred thousand men are said to have been brought from the Russian front. The Allies are able to hold their own against the new offensive, but it is doubtful whether they can do more than that.

The chief desire on both sides of the Channel is to end the war, but not with a German peace. Hence there is a great cry for American troops, not only in the press of London and Paris but from public men. On the other hand, newspapers in Germany are urging an early offensive, because they know that when America is fully in action their cause is doomed.

PECULIAR SITUATION IN N. S. APPLE MARKET.

United Fruit Companies Have Large Stock on Hand and Market Has Fallen Off.

HALIFAX. — The United Fruit Companies, the co-operative concern that controls ordinarily about half the apple crop of Nova Scotia, finds itself in a somewhat delicate position, though the events of the next six weeks may show the management to be all right in their policy. The rules of the organization provide that a co-operative member must pay to the fruit company the sum of ten cents a barrel if he sells outside. The buyers from Ontario came down in force and offered prices which the growers accepted even at the cost of ten cents per barrel for not selling to the United Fruit Companies. This cut down the company's control of the crop from 60 per cent to about 30 or 40 per cent. Now while the individual growers are pretty well cleaned out the United Fruit Company has a proportionately large quantity of apples on hand, and the demand has fallen off. Transportation facilities are against shipments, cars are scarce and the weather has been too severe for export in safe conditions.

The growers who sold to Ontario got $3.00 a barrel and the company now does not want to take less but have to keep their apples on hand. The fruit will retain its good condition till May next, but the price will probably have to come down. The apples in the valley to-day are probably about 100,000 barrels, not more than usual at this time of year, but there is no English market as there always has been in the past ready to take the hard varieties that come in the late season. It is a fact of interest that S. B. Chute, of Berwick, N.S., is said to have the largest tree acreage in America, with probably 30,000 trees, and that he is one of the independents, keeping outside of the United Fruit Companies.

Menacing Walls In Fire Ruins To Be Razed At Once

The possibility of some of the jagged walls about the ruins of the Royal Theatre becoming loosened by a thaw and falling into George street, was discussed by the Board of Works last night. Some of the members felt that the walls facing the street which seemed to offer a menace to pedestrians should be pulled down at once, but the Board wasn't sure of its authority.

On motion of Ald. Edgar, seconded by Mayor Duncan, the City Engineer and Ald. Weir were instructed to consult City Solictor Gordon and find out who is responsible for the walls in their present insecurity and who would be liable for any damage that might result from their fall. If the responsibility rests with the city they will be removed at once, and if not, the work will be done at the owners' expense.

Barricades were suggested, but the Engineer regarded them as insufficient protection. If the front wall of the theatre fell it would spill across the street.

Music & Drama

"KATINKA"

"Katinka," at the Grand Opera House last night, proved a treat both to the eye and ear. This Harbach-Frime compilation of tuneful music, with lyrics and clever libretto, the first work of the talented pair who are responsible for "The Firefly," "You're in Love," and "High Jinks" to be seen in Peterborough was one of the most delightful offerings the Grand has given its patrons in many a moon. The music was charming, each number was appealing and the singing of both principals and chorus was worthy of the score. The infectious number, "Racketty Coo," introduced in all three acts of the production, most effectively reached the popular fancy, but there were many other numbers that were delightful, particularly "Katinka" and "I Want to Marry a Male Quartette."

"Katinka" was gorgeously staged. There were three acts, the first laid in Russia, the second in Persia, and the last in Paris, so that there were opportunities for a lavish display of quaint costumes and the producers have not failed to make the most of this feature. The ensemble numbers were a riot of colours and movement, and the whole effect was most pleasing.

The comedy end of the production did not become prominent until the arrival on the scene of Howard Langford, whose work as "Thaddeus Hopper" showed him to be a clever, smooth-working comedian whose lines got over most effectively. He was given able assistance in the fun-making lines by Bernard Gorcey, who was most amusing as "Antonio Medice."

Miss Eve Lynn, who invested the title role with a most pleasing personality, sang nicely as well, while Clara Palmer, as "Mrs. Hopper," scored heavily in all her songs and received three or four encores in her "I Want to Marry a Male Quartette" number, in which she was assisted by four of the company.

Clever Russian and Arcassian dances were introduced by Elinore Vincent and Nicholas Kovaa.

RUSSIAN SOLDIERS IN FRANCE KILLED THEIR OWN OFFICERS

WASHINGTON, Jan. 30. — Germany can mobilize an army and march to Moscow or Petrograd, and Russia is perfectly helpless before the German Army and German intrigue, declared Representative Clarence B. Miller of Minnesota in the House of Representatives, giving his experience and observations while abroad last Fall.

"My first conclusion is," he said, "that Russia will never again take any part in the great struggle in behalf of the Allies. That is the unanimous report of every man who has studied conditions at first hand. The revolution which occurred nearly a year ago was justified if ever one was but unfortunately those who came into power were not possessed of that tolerance and self-respect and self-control and knowledge of conditions in the world that would enable them to lead their country aright.

"From the time when the people representing the soldiers and the workmen came into control of Russia there has been nothing but chaos, murder, starvation, slaughter, with all the attendant evils that the mind can think of.

"Russia could not participate in this great war now if she wanted to. The truth is, they have murdered all the officers in the Russian Army capable of leading a command to battle. Today there does not exist a Captain or a Colonel or a General, outside of a few that are left, to lead their men to battle. We remember reading with much glow in our hearts that Russia had sent 50,000 men to France about two years ago, there to be trained and put into the firing line on the side of the Allies. Did you ever wonder what became of them? I will tell you. They are now near a port in France which I will forego to mention. They murdered all their officers last summer, and they are now practically prisoners, held by French bayonets.

"The Russian people stand with jaws open and eyes staring, drunk with liberty. They have stopped the production of crops on their farms, and every report indicates that before another fall comes the great spectre of starvation will visit nearly all the homes of Russia. They have been living for a time by stealing—plainly stealing. They have confiscated nearly all the important business enterprises in Russia. They have taken the money in the banks and are getting it, no matter to whom the money belonged. They have actually taken up the paving blocks in the city streets and are burning them for fuel now. Their transportation facilities have been worn out and wrecked, and Russia remains at this time without facilities for transporting food, even if she wanted to, much less transporting any army."

Municipalities Cannot Escape The War Tax

Special to the Examiner:

TORONTO, Jan. 31.—Municipalities which permit the use of town halls for the holding of theatrical performances are not entitled to any exemption from the payment of the usual provincial war tax to the government. Upon admissions to theatrical performances, according to Mr. J. T. White, solicitor to the Provincial Treasurer, in a statement made to your correspondent to-day, the tax he stated can be collected under the Act upon admissions to any theatrical performance, whether held in a theatre or elsewhere. The fact that a town or city may choose to rent the auditorium of a municipal building does not permit escape from the payment of the tax to the Provincial government. "If that were not so there is nothing could prevent a town or city building a municipal theatre and escaping the tax," concluded Mr. White.

THE WORLD OF SPORT

WINNERS OF THE SPORTS AT LOCAL ARMOURIES

The first of a series of athletic programmes in connection of the training of E Company, 1st Depot Battalion, E.O.R., was held yesterday afternoon in the Armouries under the direction of Sergt.-Major Bayne, and proved a great success. The programme of boxing, wrestling, running and jumping, was greatly enjoyed by the men. There were many entries and keen competition in the different events, and the occasion was a welcome break in the routine of drill. Athletic sports are recognized as a valuable factor in the training of a soldier, and each Wednesday afternoon there will be similar field days. The Y.M.C.A. very kindly loaned the lads in khaki a wrestling mat, boxing gloves, jumping standards and other equipment necessary for the sports.

Following is a list of the events:

GEORGE STREET INCREASES LEAD IN CHURCH LEAGUE

The George Street team strengthened their hold on the Church League leadership last night, when they decisively defeated the Mark Street team by 5 goals to 0. The boys from the big Methodist Church led by 2 to 0 at the end of the first period, and 1 to 0 at the close of the second, and always had the game well in hand. Graham and Helson were the stars for the winners. The former was knocked out in the third period, injuring his hip.

The winners lined up as follows:
Goal—W. Rutherford.
Defence—Head, Northey.
Rover—Graham.
Centre—F. Rutherford.
Right wing—Helson.
Left wing—Dougan.

The St. Pauls-All Saints' and Knox-St. Andrew's team had a great battle in the second game. The teams were tied at the conclusion of the regular period of play, but the St. Paul's-All Saints' aggregation came through in the overtime and won out by 5 goals to 4. Last night's games leaves the standing as follows:

	W.	L.	To play
George Street	3	0	3
St. Paul's-All Saints	2	1	3
Mark Street	1	2	3
Knox-St. Andrew's	0	3	3

SARNIA DROPS OUT OF SENIOR RACE

Sarnia Seniors defaulted last night's game to Kitchener and are automatically out of the O.H.A. Sarnia asked Kitchener to postpone the game on the ground that Adams and Schumacher, two of their players, had been injured and were incapable of going on the ice.

Kitchener at first refused, because their plan had already been sold out, and a big crowd assured, but when they found that Sarnia meant business, despite the penalty of banishment attached, Kitchener offered to postpone the contest until the next Kitchener-Sarnia game. They proposed that instead of playing at Sarnia the game be played at Kitchener, and last night's game pulled off as a Sarnia fixture at the end of the season.

This did not suit Sarnia, who wanted their next game with Kitchener at home. Kitchener refused and Sarnia defaulted. Their defection spoils the interest to some extent in the western senior group, because Kitchener is now well out in front with a clean sheet.

The Sarnia games already played stand as they resulted, and all remaining games are recorded as wins for the opposing teams.

Ottawa Loses To Canadiens

OTTAWA, Jan. 30.—The National Hockey League dope took another somersault last night when Canadiens defeated Ottawa by 5 to 2 and cinched the championship for the first half of the session. Even should the Frenchmen lose to Toronto on Saturday night, they will be winners and will be one of the teams in the annual play-off unless they repeat on the second half, and thus qualify without a saw-off to play the Pacific Coast champions for the Stanley Cup.

To-night's game was fast and exciting, and it attracted one of the largest crowds of the season.

SUPPLIES OF FEEDING STUFFS

In order to prevent retail dealers taking advantage of the scarcity of bran and shorts to exact excessive profits over the prices fixed by the Food Controller, the latter has ordered that the retail price of bran and shorts, where cash is paid, must not exceed by more than ten cents per bag the cost f.o.b. track at the dealer's station. In cases where purchasers take delivery direct from the car the profit has been limited to a maximum of five cents per bag. An extra charge may be made where credit is given and the bran and shorts delivered from the dealer's store, but this amount must be only a reasonable charge representing the consideration of such services. When the miller sells at the mill in less than carload lots, he is not permitted to add more than five cents per bag of 100 pounds to the price at which he is permitted to sell under the Food Controller's Order of December 17, 1917. When the purchaser brings bags to the mill to be filled, the miller must not add more than $2.00 per ton to the price at which he is permitted to sell under the Order of December 17. In effect, the miller must not charge more than the fixed Fort William bulk prices, plus or minus freight to or from Fort William, and in addition $2.00 per ton as retail charges. For example, suppose that at a point in Eastern Canada the freight from Fort William is $4.20 per ton. In this case the selling price for bran per ton when the purchaser supplies the bags would be $24.50 plus $4.20 plus $2.00, a total of $30.70. The Order applies to all millers and dealers in Canada.

Profitable to Feed.

While this action has been taken in order to render available to the farmer all supplies of bran and shorts at the lowest possible cost, the amount obtainable is very limited and farmers must depend mainly upon other feeding stuffs. Prices for live stock are such that, despite the high cost of coarse grains, it is profitable to feed them to food animals.

The statement from the Food Controller's Office says that, if the price of bran and shorts had not been fixed, these products would have risen in price to an amount representing their feeding value compared with other grains and feeds. But the fixing of the price has only ensured that in so far as these feeds are available they are comparatively cheap; the supply has not been increased thereby.

The present total daily production of bran and shorts by all the mills in Canada is only 84 cars and the supplies of wheat will not enable even this rate of production to be maintained from the balance of the crop year. The total bran and shorts produced in Canada if divided among all the farm live stock in Canada would only give one meal in three weeks. A flour mill of 100 barrels capacity daily manufactures less than two tons of bran and shorts per day which means that a single carload will only be produced every two weeks.

The Food Controller has taken measures to reserve for the farmers of the Dominion all bye-products of grain elevators that are available for stock food and also feed wheat, bran and shorts and all such mill feeds. Applications for licenses to export 6,640 tons of bran, shorts and mill feeds have been refused. Indeed the saving has been very much greater because the mills were definitely informed that licenses would not be issued for the exportation of such products. Feed wheat has all been retained in Canada and more than 2,850 tons of screenings have also been saved from export. Arrangements have been made which will keep the exportation of oats, barley and other feeds to a minimum except for shipments overseas by the Allied nations.

The Food Controller has been in constant communication with the authorities at Washington with a view to expediting shipments of corn into this country for feeding purposes. Arrangements have been made for its entry as soon as means of transportation have been provided. The American corn crop is the greatest in the history of that country, but the car shortage, combined with the fact that much of the corn is wet and cannot be shelled until it has had a long period of seasoning, has kept supplies from the market. At least until it is available farmers are advised to use domestic coarse grains for live stock and also to make use of whatever quantities of cottonseed meal, oil cake and gluten meal and mixed feeds are obtainable.

BOWLING NEWS

All roads will lead to the Water Street Alleys on Saturday night, when the "Embryo" League Champions clash with a picked team from the De Laval office and factory.

The following are the expected line-up of the two teams:

Champions	Factory & Office
Byers	French
Ruiter	McDonald
Fitzgerald	Lawrence
Fitzgerald	English
Carter	Robinson

A big crowd is expected to be on hand to root for their favourites.

The same rules as before will be enforced, with a few variations.

Everybody should learn to bowl, Mr. Solomon said. "Bowlers never have appendicitis.

Bowling makes you want to win heaven, even after your wife has given you the other place.

Bowling takes the alarm clock of suspicion out of your love dreams.

Bowling turns mothers-in-law into angels.

A minister, so sad that when he said grace it froze his coffee, started bowling; now he is preaching to standing room only.

Bowling makes the web-footed brain hit the stardust trail of Golden Success.

Bowling puts velvet on the salesman's tongue and cuts the fuzz out of the buyer's ear.

Bowling will make you love your relations, and not be miserable in doing it.

Start bowling, and you will have a desire to begin life all over again, though married.

In towns blessed with bowling alleys, undertakers have gone out of business, people are quitting the dying habit, and the hinges on the cemetery gates are rusting.

U. S. DESERTERS SELL PLACES TO SPIES

CAMP SHERMAN, Ohio, Jan. 31.—That two German spies may be among the members of the Rainbow Division which arrived in France some time ago, Commanding Officers here believe after the confession of Pfcs. William A. Gourley and Fred H. Hufford of Marietta, arrested recently as deserters from the Rainbow Division.

Gourley and Hufford said they sold their places in the division to two men who seemed anxious to fight, and declared they had been turned down by army officials as unfit for service.

After Gourley and Hufford were arrested cablegrams were received from Gen. Pershing's headquarters that both men were in the Rainbow Division in France, and that the men arrested at Marietta are imposters, apparently.

Military officials here, however, decided to make a thorough investigation, and the two privates were brought here for examination.

They were drilled by Col. H. V. Ham, commanding the 158th Depot Brigade, with the result that they confessed. All details of the confession were made public, but it is stated that from information at hand it is believed that the young soldiers sold their places in the Rainbow Division to two German spies.

Information has been sent Gen. Pershing, and the men listed as Gourley and Hufford will be taken into custody pending investigation. Gourley and Hufford were members of Ohio's contingent in the Rainbow Division.

A BRAVE SCOTCH GIRL.

Became the White Mother of Darkest Africa.

How many Canadians remember the name of Mary Slessor, the brave Scotch girl who made her way into Central Africa and lived and died there as the helper, counseller, and friend of countless thousands? To the November St. Nicholas Mary R. Parkman contributes an account of "The White Mother of Darkest Africa," which shows her to have been second in this work of hers only to Livingstone. "For years," writes Miss Parkman, "this brave woman went on with her work among the wild tribes of Nigeria. As soon as she began to get the encouragement of results in one place, she pressed on to an unworked field. Realizing that her pioneer work needed to be reinforced and sustained by the strong arm of the law, she persuaded the British Government to "take up the white man's burden" and (through the influence of consuls and the persuasive presence of a gunboat or two, assume the guardianship of her weak children. In spite of failing health and the discouragement of small results, she went from one post to another, leaving mission houses and chapel-huts as outward signs of the new life to which she had been a witness. 'I am ready to go anywhere, provided it be forward,' was her watchword, as well as Dr. Livingstone's.

"There are many striking points of likeness between the careers of these two torch-bearers to the Dark Continent. As children both had worked at the loom, studying hum grily as they toiled. Both did pioneer work, winning the confidence and love of the wild people they taught and served. No missionary to Africa, save Dr. Livingstone alone, has had a more powerful influence than Mary Slessor.

"When at last in January, 1915 after thirty-nine years of service, she died and left to others the task of bearing on the torch to her people Sir Frederick Lugard, the Governor General of Nigeria, said:

"'By her enthusiasm, self-sacrifice and greatness of character she has earned the devotion of thousands of natives among whom she worked and the love and esteem of all Europeans, irrespective of class or creed, with whom she came in contact.

"She was buried in the land in which she had given her long life of service. When the women, after native fashion, began their wild wail of lament at the grave, one of them lifted up her voice in an exalted appeal that went straight to the heart:

"'Do not cry! Praise God from whom all blessings flow. She was a great blessing.'"

Government to Build Houses.

The British Government has an inquiry made into the housing question as affected by the war, a representative committee, which all labor interests were represented, estimates that at least 300,000 new houses to be let at rents of a few shillings a week will be urgently required as soon as the war ends.

Building operations in Britain except such as are necessary for munitions and other purposes connected with the war, are entirely stopped, and as there was a deficiency of houses for the workers before the war, the problem is one of great magnitude. It is estimated that 1,000,000 new houses required would involve an expenditure of £250,000,000 sterling. Realizing that private enterprise cannot be expected to undertake this expenditure and that the provision of the houses is a matter of necessity, the Government proposes to get the building done through the local authorities with the help of substantial financial assistance from the state.

As to the cost of this programme it is estimated that if the Government lend the whole capital free of interest the charge on the exchequer during the first year (assuming that the Government borrow at 5 per cent.) would be £12,500,000. If the Government make a free grant on the scale adopted in the English municipal areas, allowing just sufficient to enable the local authorities to charge on the rates, which are rents not exceeding those paid before the war, the total cost to the state would be £50,000,000—less than one per cent. of the cost of the war.

Giant Monument to a Child.

Mount Grace, in Warwick, Mass., seems to be in a way a gigantic monument to a little child. According to tradition, the Indians captured a child named Rowlinson and her child as they were passing through the woods on their way to Canada the child died and was buried at the foot of the mountain. The child's name was Grace, and the mountain has been Mount Grace ever since.—Exchange.

NOT GERMANY'S LAST WORD

London News Takes a Hopeful View of Chancellor's Speech.

LONDON, Jan. 29.—The News urges a most favourable interpretation of Chancellor Von Hertling's utterances. It says that, although superficial examination of the speech may not encourage the idea of a change in tone, closer study will justify that idea, and regards it as important that the Chancellor invites continuance of the conversations initiated by Lloyd George and President Wilson. It adds: "The speech as a whole offers no basis for peace, but in no sense shuts the door. If it were Germany's last word the horizon would be dark, but the last word of public with a Germany conscious of its own democracy."

Count Czernin, says the News, gives evidence of what in the circumstances may be regarded as a sincere desire for peace, and takes what is perhaps the most hopeful constructive step of the war in suggesting definite negotiations with America.

Survey And Plans For Hunter Street Bridge Under Way

The preliminary survey for the overhead bridge on Hunter Street will be commenced by City Engineer Carsons as soon as the weather permits. He was instructed by the Board of Works last night to begin the plans for the bridge as soon as possible. When they are completed they will be submitted to an independent engineer for approval.

One of the first steps in the preliminary work will be a series of borings in the river bed to determine the character of the natural foundation for the piers. It is hoped that rock will be struck at shallow depths.

Oppose A Provincial Election Now

Special to the Examiner.

TORONTO, Jan. 31.—The Toronto Women's Good Government League, formerly known as the Union Government League, at a meeting to-day passed a resolution declaring it would be a crime to hold a provincial election at the present time, inasmuch as there are no issues of sufficient importance in provincial politics to detract men and women from war work which is all important. The resolution urged a conference of members of both parties to arrange for the prorogation of the life of the present legislature so that all might devote their attention to the duties to be performed during the present year, in which the crisis of the great war may be reached.

"THERE WAS A LITTLE GIRL"

An Operetta Well Put On at All Saints' Parish Hall By the Kiddies of the Sunday School

There was a little girl,
And she had a little curl,
And it hung in the middle of her forehead;
And when she was good
She was very, very good,
And when she was bad she was horrid.

It was on this old-time nursery jingle that the operetta, "There Was a Little Girl," is founded, which was put on most successfully at the All Saints' Parish Hall last night.

Mr. W. H. Barry, the producer, who also was musical director as well as composer of some of the supplementary music and the incidental numbers, is well known to many who have witnessed his success in his various roles in "San Toy," "A Greek Slave," etc., and his efforts—which must have been very considerable—achieved a result which must have been highly satisfactory to him. The whole thing went well; the children sustained the greater part of the work (there were only three adults to help them); they knew their parts; there were no stage waits; no forgetting of lines; nor was there much of that self-consciousness which is so frequently visible with youthful amateurs.

The operetta consisted of three acts, or rather scenes, introducing some pretty little songs and dances. The part of the "little girl" was taken by Miss Edna Barry, one of the daughters of the impresario.

The opening chorus (which ran as a refrain throughout the whole theme) was "There was a little girl." This was well sung by all the chorus. Then came May's (Edna Barry) song "To-day is the First of May," which the talented child sang really well. Mr. C. Siesons as "The Soapman" sang an amusing song, "The Song of the Soapman," which fetched the youthful part of the large audience present. May then followed with a song and dance, entitled "Little Mischief." A chorus and dance brought down the curtain at the end of Act 1.

Act 2 discovered a chorus of boys singing "Hurrah for the Twenty-fourth of May." May then informs the boys and girls who had been "chipping" her that "I am not afraid of a mouse," "I can fire a gun," "I have held fire-crackers in my hand," "If I am a girl I can run faster and jump higher than you can." So after all the little girl who was supposed to be bad, was by no means horrid; certainly not one of those namby-pamby children that are usually "sneaks." Sandy, the Village Halfwit (Mr. James Price) then comes along offering fireworks to those who will help him remove the brick-bats from his yard, thrown there by the neighbours when his mother attempted to sing. This all leads up to a chorus, well rendered as regards time "Hurrah for the Maple Leaf." Then Willie (Master Wilfred Read)), a little kiddie of but six years, sang—and sang well, too—"Hurrah for the Flag of the Free," which, of course, was the big Union Jack he carried. Then the chorus "Motherland," with big waving of the glorious flag, for all the chorus carried Union Jacks.

Act 3 opened with a tableau and the "Cuckoo" chorus. Stella (Miss Ella Gatfield) sang prettily, "There was once a little stranger." Then came the final song by May, "Happy To-day," and the closing chorus.

At the fall of the curtain the Rev. R. B. Grobb tendered a vote of thanks to all concerned in the production—which was fully merited—and conveyed to Mr. Barry the appreciation of the audience, which had been frequently manifested.

Then commenced part two of the entertainment, which was musical. Mr. Harold Lee sang in good voice one of Tosti's songs, "My Dreams." This being encored vociferously, he gave "I'll sing thee songs of Araby." Miss Rathbone, who followed, sang in a good clear, ringing voice, "A Rose in Heaven." As an encore was insisted upon, this young lady rendered an amusing ditty, "Nothing but Love," equally well.

Here Miss Agnes Logan, who has achieved such great things in New York recently, gave a pianoforte solo. Miss Logan is an infnat prodigy, her technique, her execution are simply wonderful for so young a child. Need it be said that the applause almost brought down the roof, and an encore, graciously accorded, was insisted upon.

Mr. Fred Hartshorn followed with a humorous vocal solo, "The Bad Little Boy and the Bent Little Pin." As an encore he gave "Where do we go from here, Boys?"

Miss Ruby Quartermaine, always a favourite with Peterborough audiences, sang in good style an "Irish Lullaby," in which she was ably accompanied by Miss Margaret Flowers. This morceau ended part two.

Part three was a shadow pantomime, the names of the artistes not being disclosed owing to their modesty. It was amusing and recorded "The Love Story of Mary Jane." It was the old, old story. Mary Jane, a not too young lady, who gave herself airs, turned down the man who loved her as not being good enough for her to be seen associating with. But after long years she was only too delighted to make it all up and marry the man whom she had put in the discard.

The hearty singing of God Save the King brought the very creditable proceedings to a close.

ASK FOR CHANGES IN MUNICIPAL LAW

Ontario Municipal Association Places Proposals Before Government

A number of suggestions for changes in municipal laws at the coming session were laid before the Hon. W. D. McPherson, Provincial Secretary, yesterday by a deputation from the Ontario Municipal Association. The deputation was headed by City Clerk S. H. Heunergard, Assessment Commissioner of Kitchener; ex-Mayor Burgoyne, of St. Catharines; A. Ferland, of Cobalt; and A. W. McKay, of St. Thomas.

Among the recommendations made were the following: Amendments to the Municipal Drainage Act regarding liability of councils for damages after notice of repairs is given; amendments giving municipalities power to open gravel and sand pits in residential districts; extension of power to the Ontario Railway and Municipal Board to organize police villages in territorial districts; legislation permitting more prompt collection of business and income taxes; authority to regulate parking of automobiles; to permit mailing of assessment notices, and power to municipal councils to dismiss health officers.

Hon. Mr. McPherson promised careful consideration, and stated that such proposals as commended themselves to the Government would be incorporated in legislation this session.

WEDDING BELLS

O'HARA—PHELAN.

A quiet but pretty wedding took place on Thursday, January 24, at St. Paul's Church, Toronto, when Miss Anna Phelan, of Peterborough, was united in marriage to Q.M.S. Harry O'Hara (formerly of the 247th Battalion), by the Rev. Dean Hann.

The bride looked very pretty in blue taffeta, and was assisted by Miss Victoria Hayton, also of Peterborough.

The presents were numerous, showing the esteem in which the young couple are held.

After spending their honeymoon in Buffalo and points west, they will take up residence in Toronto.

OBITUARY

MRS. HARTMAN.

Ruby Northcott, beloved wife of F. D. Hartman, 506 Patterson Street, died yesterday in Nicholls Hospital, the result of blood poisoning. Deceased was born in Bewdley 28 years ago, where she resided previous to coming to the city four years ago. She leaves to mourn her death her husband and three small children.

The funeral will take place on Friday at 11 o'clock to the noon train to Port Hope for interment.

MRS. C. TULLY ROBERTSON.

At St. Michael's Hospital, on Jan. 1st, 1918, the death occurred in her 62nd year of Catherine Tully, wife of the late Alexander Robertson, of 365 Wellesley Street, formerly of Peterborough. For the past thirty-four years Mrs. Robertson had resided in Toronto. She was born in North Monaghan, Peterborough, and is survived by four sons, Alexander, John, Charles and Donald, and by one daughter, Miss Alexis Robertson, all of Toronto.—Toronto Telegram.

MRS. T. W. ALLEN.

To-day at Millbrook, there passed away a lady whose active life covered the space of three generations; Mrs. T. W. Allen, widow of the late Venerable Archdeacon Allen, died in the 94th year of her age.

Mrs. Allen was born when only 23 years of the past century had elapsed; and has passed in the community an active and useful life of nearly a century. She retained her physical and mental activity and interest in her family, friends, church and the community up to within three or four days of her death, an attack of pneumonia ending a long and useful life.

Her death will revive many recollections, and bring regret to a large community to which she was better known through the prominent association with the public of her late husband, the Venerable Archdeacon Allen of Peterborough.

Necessarily in her long life the late Mrs. Allen made many friends. She was socially popular by virture of her amiable qualities of character and her cheerful, sunny, disposition, and it is given to few people to leave behind so sweet a memeory and such a host of firends in all the relations of life, as did the late Mrs. Allen.

She leaves a large family, consisting of eight sons, all occupying honourable and responsible positions in various parts of the continent. The surviving sons are: Mr. George Gordon Allen, Emerson, Man.; Dr. Thomas H. Allen, New York; Rev. Alexander Allen, Oakland, Cal.; Rev. W. LADIES! DARKEN YOUR GRAY HAIR

Use Grandma's Sage Tea and Sulphur Recipe and Nobody Will Know

The use of Sage and Sulphur for restoring faded, gray hair to its natural color dates back to grandmother's time. She used it to keep her hair beautifully dark, glossy and attractive. Whenever her hair took on that dull, faded or streaked appearance, this simple mixture was applied with wonderful effect.

But brewing at home is mussy and out-of-date. Nowadays, by asking at any drug store for a 50-cent bottle of "Wyeth's Sage and Sulphur Compound," you will get this famous old preparation, improved by the addition of other ingredients, which can be depended upon to restore natural color and beauty to the hair.

A well known downtown druggist says it darkens the hair so naturally and evenly that nobody can tell it has been applied. You simply dampen a sponge or soft brush with it and draw this through your hair, taking one strand at a time. By morning the gray hair disappears, and after another application or two, it becomes beautifully dark and glossy.

Wyeth's Sage and Sulphur Compound is a delightful toilet requisite for those who desire a more youthful appearance. It is not intended for the cure, mitigation or prevention of disease.

CATTLE MARKET

Union Stock Yards— Receipts, 30 cars, with 627 cattle, 69 calves, 746 hogs and 136 sheep and lambs.

Cattle are beginning to get through as the drifts of the storm are gradually being cleared up. There was but a light run offering yesterday, however, though evidently enough for immediate requirements, and still some left over. The market, in fact, is about 50c. lower than last Monday. The difficulty is that while the live cattle may now be shipped in the packers are not in a position where they can afford to load themselves up with more beef than they can as yet ship out. The general shortage of cars has affected the beef shipping trade as it is affecting all shippers of food commodities. The result is the lower price of cattle yesterday. There was a light run of hogs yesterday, and the market settled at $18.50 fed and watered, with prospects looking like $18 for next week.

Million Hun Strikers Labour Troubles Grow

Latest Reports From Amsterdam Include Spandau in Kaiser's Unrest Zone—War Industries Located There—"Empire Wide Movement"—Shipyards Are Deserted

WANT IMMEDIATE PEACE

AMSTERDAM, Feb. 1.—(British Admiralty per Wireless Press).—The strike has been extended in districts near Berlin especially in Tegel, Aldershof, Spandau, and Mariendorf, where 500,000 men have quit work. A similar number of workmen are on strike in the remainder of the Empire.

Important war industries are located in Spandau, a town of about 70,000 inhabitants nine miles west of Berlin. The Government has large establishments there for the manufacture of artillery fire arms and ammunition.

Tegel, Aldershof and Mariendorf are smaller towns, all within a few miles of Berlin.

SHIPYARDS DESERTED.

AMSTERDAM, Feb. 1st—Evidence of the extent of the strike in Hamburg is found in the Cologne Gazette, which says that almost all the shipyard labourers of that city have quit work. After the men in the Vulcan yards walked out the others struck, declaring their solidarity with the Vulcan workers.

Clergymen vainly exhorted the strikers in Hamburg to continue their work, the Cologne Gazette says. The workers proceeded to the trades union headquarters and adopted a resolution opposing the pan-German fatherland party and demanding immediate peace without annexations or indemnities, better labour conditions and improvement of the fod supply.

A deputation waited on the General in command of the district and said the strikers would not resort to violence.

ROOT SEED SUPPLY WILL BE VERY LIMITED

Mangel Seed is on the Average Quoted at One Dollar a Pound as Against Forty-five Cents Last Year—Root Growers Advised to Procure Seed Early

Canada has so far, as is well known, relied almost entirely on Europe for her supply of root seed. Before the war, i.e., as long as agricultural and transportation conditions were normal, there was no danger of Canada being inadequately supplied with seed of reasonably good quality, but with the outbreak of the war the conditions became different. It is true that during 1914 and 1915 the imports were not falling off; as a matter of fact Canada imported during these years more seed of both mangel and turnips than during any previous year. A mere study of the import figures therefore gave the impression that Canada at the end of 1915 was not in any danger of having the seed supply seriously curtailed in the immediate future. However, as the prospects for an early peace continued to remain far off, the agricultural activities in the seed raising countries of Europe had to be directed almost exclusively toward production of food for the armies. As a consequence, root seed growing was being neglected, especially in France, a fact that became noticeable as early as 1915. The immediate result of this was a rapid decrease in the seed supply in Europe which made it necessary for the root seed producing countries to prohibit the export of root seed for the duration of the war. When this embargo took effect, it began to be realized, in far-seeing quarters at least, that there was a real danger of shortage in the seed supply needed by Canada in the near future. The danger gradually took on a more serious aspect, as to the difficulty of actually securing seed in Europe was being added the difficulty of shipping it across the Atlantic in safety.

At present the root seed situation is far from as satisfactory as one could wish it to be, and what it will be like later in the season is difficult to foretell with accuracy now. One thing is certain, however, and that is that the prices that have to be paid by root growers for seed this year will be abnormally high.

A catalogue just received from a highly respectable seed house quotes prices that were unthought of in the pre-war times of plentiful supply. Mangel seed is one the average quoted at one dollar a pound, as against forty-five cents last year; Swede turnip seed is offered at about $1.40 a pound, as compared with about 65 cents a year ago, and in field carrot seed there is an increase over last year's prices that in instances amounts to over fifty per cent.

These prices tell a story that can hardly be misunderstood. They clearly indicate that the available root seed supply is small, a fact that also may be gathered from import figures of the last two years, as given by the Department of Customs.

Under the circumstances our advice to root growers who have not taken the precaution to grow their own seed is to secure whatever quantities of seed are needed for the coming season's root crop as early as possible.

Jesus, Lord of the Sabbath.—Mark 2. 13-36.

Golden Text—The Son of Man is Lord even of the Sabbath.—Mark 2, verse 28.

1. Verse 13: Why is it the duty of every Christian to make the extension of the kingdom of God on the earth his chief work, as Jesus did?

2. If the masses will not come to the church, why is it not the duty of the church to take the gospel to the masses?

3. Verse 14: Wen is it the duty of a business man to follow the example of Levi, give up his business and devote himself wholly to preaching the gospel?

4. Verse 14: If God calls a man to preach his gospel and he refuses, what reason is there to believe that he can continue to be a reconciled child of God?

5. Verse 15: What good or harm is done the cause of God by having banquets or other festive gatherings in connection with Christian work?

6. What, in view of this incident, can you say for or against ministers or other earnest Christians freely mixing with worldly men at social functions?

7. Verses 16, 17: How would you characterise the criticism of Jesus by these Pharisees for mixing with publicans and sinners?

8. Why is Jesus more interested in sinners than he is in saints?

9. Verses 18-20: What was and is the purpose of fasting?

10. Seeing Jesus fasted, and he said that his disciples would fast when he was gone, and seeing the early church fasted, and nearly all outstanding historic Christians fasted, how is it that Christians do not fast to-day?

11. Verses 21, 22: Why is it unwise to put upon young Christians duties which, as yet, they are not able to fulfill?

12. Why did Jesus say on another occasion, "I have yet many things to say unto you, but ye cannot bear them now"?

13. Verses 23-26: The roads through the wheat fields were mere trails, and the stalks of wheat overhung the trail; they could be plucked as the traveller walked along; it was not thought to be wrong to thus pluck them, but why did the Pharisees think it to be wrong for Christ's disciples to do so on this occasion?

14. Wherein were the Pharisees wrong in their criticism of Jesus?

15. Verses 27, 28: When keeping the letter of Sabbath observance or any such laws breaks its spirit, what is our duty, and why is it so?

16. What should be our rule for ourselves and others in the matter of working on the Lord's Day?

17. Chap. 3, 1, 2: What was the reason that the Pharisees so hated Jesus that they sought an opportunity to destroy him?

18. Verses 3, 4: Why did they not answer the question of Jesus, "Is it lawful to do good on the Sabbath day or to do evil," to save life or to kill"?

19. A poor boy came to church on a cold Sunday morning with no buttons on his coat. A good sister took him into the vestry and sewed buttons on. How did God likely estimate her act in working on the Sabbath day?

20. Verses 5, 6: When is it right to be angry?

21. Why is it that some men are hated in proportion to their goodness and the good they do?

Lesson for Sunday, 10th February, 1918—Jesus Chooses the Twelve.—Mark 3, 7-35.

Take it as Soup before Meals"

"THE CLUE IN THE AIR"

A DETECTIVE STORY—Isabel Ostrander

"Once, though, they had some kind of a scene in the library, you could hear his voice all over the house he was shouting so, but you couldn't make out what was said. It was funny for in all the years I've never known him to raise his voice before. Miss Marion flew past me in the hall afterward, not crying, but white as a sheet and angrier than I've ever seen her, and locked herself in her room for the rest of the day. Her ways with her aunt, too, were different. She seemed scornful with her and bitter, Miss Marion, who'd always been so gentle, and more than once her aunt was in tears."

A few more questions but of a trivial nature, ended her examination, and the name of Charles Sturtevant fell on McCarty's ear. As the blond youth with the incipient mustache took the witness chair, Mr. Quimby moved slightly and for an instant caught his eye. Then he settled back into his former attitude of calm attention.

Young Mr. Sturtevant's testimony took the form of a general denial. He had known Miss Rowntree well, had admired her, and valued her friendship, but nothing more serious had entered his mind or hers, he was quite sure.

He might have been said to be attentive to her, but no more so than to several other young ladies of his acquaintance. He had gone away during the previous summer and on his return had not resumed his calls because he had been too much occupied to think of social affairs. The meeting in the park was of no consequence. He had asked her to leave her car and come for a spin with him, but she had declined, pleading an engagement, and that was all.

The remaining witnesses at the morning session threw little new light on the tragedy, but one or two interesting facts were brought out. Mrs. Doremus stuck to her previous story, and could not be shaken from it. The maid, Mary Woolley, followed her on the stand. After eliciting from her the facts of the evening in question, as she had previously given them, and of the voice she had heard in the air shaft, the coroner asked suddenly:

"What were you doing at Mr. Quimby's house last evening?"

She smiled as if she had anticipated the query, and shrugged her shoulders.

"I went there to see him."

"What for? Did you know Miss Rowntree?"

"No, but I wanted to tell him what I had heard that night—that voice calling out about a stepfather. The police did not pay much attention to it but I thought it would be to his interest to know." She paused, then explained blandly: "I thought, of course, he'd offer a reward for information, or I'm sure I should not have bothered. It's nothing to me."

So that was the explanation of her visit! It sounded quite plausible and yet McCarty, watching the little lawyer Humboldt's quick nod of approval and encouragement, was aware of a vague doubt.

Young Mr. Antonio was the next witness. He told again of hearing the screams, going to the window, and seeing the crowds, but returning to his studies after the arrival of the ambulance. His testimony being of no value, he was briefly dismissed.

The long strain of the inquest seemed to be telling at last even on Stephen Quimby's well-governed nerves. He was clenching and unclenching his hands spasmodically and the perspiration stood out in beads upon his forehead. Miss Beckwith swayed in her chair as the young inventor passed her on his way to his seat, and seemed about to fall, but she pulled herself together and tremulously declined the glass of water which an attendant offered. It was long past noon, and but two witnesses seemingly remained, Mr. and Mrs. Grafton Foxe.

The former was permitted to retire after a reiteration of his alibi, but Mrs. Foxe was questioned somewhat at length concerning her departed guest, Ivy Collins.

"As you doubtless know, Mrs. Foxe, your friend did not go to the Platts, on Leavitt street, nor have they ever seen her, although she went to Chicago as she planned. She evidently changed her mind at the last moment, for she wired them from the train not to expect her," observed the coroner. "You, too, have tried to reach her by wire."

"Naturally," Mrs. Foxe conceded. "I am anxious to hear from her."

"Mrs. Foxe, why was your need to communicate with her so imperative? I have transcripts here of your telegrams. You wired her en route, saying: 'Write immediately fullest details what happened home before you left.' The second telegram sent in care of the Platts, reads: 'Wire at once. Did you get the message on train. Anxious.' The third, directed to Mrs. Lavinia Platt, is: 'Is Ivy with you? For God's sake wire relieve anxiety?'"

"What caused this extreme anxiety?"

"I should think that was self-evident," she shrugged. "Of course there has scarcely been time for a letter to reach me from Chicago, but I thought she would telegraph me in response to the message I sent on the train. I was anxious at first to know if she had seen the tragedy at the house—the girl's fall, I mean. When I failed to hear I was worried on her own account, to know if she had arrived safely. No answer came to my second telegram, and I communicated with Mrs. Platt."

"Have you succeeded yet in locating Miss Collins?"

"No; but I hope to hear from her now in any mail."

"Have you any idea where she may have gone?"

"None."

"Has she other friends in Chicago?"

"Oh, yes, several. But as long as you are prying into my correspondence I may as well tell you that I have wired to every one I can think of in Chicago who knew her, with no result, whatever."

"Nevertheless, I shall ask you to give me their names and addresses."

Mrs. Foxe complied sullenly and left the stand, and the coroner announced a postponement of the hearing until the afternoon session. By common consent the others waited until Stephen Quimby and his sister-in-law had departed, and then made their way slowly out.

McCarty manoeuvred, so that he could fall in just behind Mrs. Doremus and Humboldt when the group congested at the door. "I'm glad it is over!" the lady was saying. "I'm afraid of that man——"

"My dear Mrs. Doremus!" There was a peremptory warning beneath the lawyer's silky tones. "I told you this was the merest formality—distressing, of course, for any nervous person, like yourself, but really of no consequence. The best thing to do is to put the whole distressing affair quite out of your thoughts."

McCarty slipped past them in the corridor, comprehending that the lawyer was talking to prevent any further unguarded remark on his client's part and his own efforts to overhear anything more of value would be wasted.

On the street outside, he was astonished to see the aviator who had testified walking off with the young invention, Mr. Antonio. Could that ex-tor, Mr. Antonio. Could that exceedingly frank, ingenuous young man have, after all, been connected with the tragedy? In Terhune's zeal to uncover the secret of the apartment and his own suspicions against another, they had both overlooked some possibly latent clue in the third.

He quickened his steps and drew nearer the couple ahead.

"No, sir," Mr. Antonio was saying, "I haven't had the time or the money to try my luck at flying but I mean to take a course one of these days. I'm tremendously interested in motors, you know. Got a little invention of my own for automobiles nearly completed that I'd like to have you come up and look at. I'm home any time——"

McCarty smiled at his unfounded suspicion, and passed on.

CHAPTER XI.

THE MOTIVE.

"And there you are! What to make of it all, Denny, is more than I know. That little seamstress came the nearest to telling the truth of the whole is to put the whole distressing affair to the point."

It was next afternoon and Dennis, unable to wait the newspaper account of the inquest, had strolled around from the fire house to learn the news at first hand from McCarty.

"What did she keep back?" he demanded. "She's cooked her goose with the Quimby bunch as far as further employment goes, by telling what she did, and that's sure. She might as well have told all she knew, and by golly, it looks to me as if she did."

McCarty shook his head.

"Denny, did you ever hear tell of a woman without curiosity? You did not, and no more did I. It's not in nature to believe that she didn't read the name and address on those envelopes she mailed for the girl. In this case, like one or two that I handled when I was on the force as you may remember, you have to work backward. 'Tis not what the witnesses do or say that will help, 'tis what they won't do and don't mention that will give you an opening to the truth."

"I mind you used to go round with a paper and a stub of a pencil, jotting down the points where people slid over thin ice in testifying or failed to do the natural things they would have done, if they'd been innocent. 'Twas the Nugent woman not going back for the ring she'd dropped that time that made you first suspect her of the Shayne murder, and old Throckmorten not remembering whether he had changed the combination of the safe, that put you on the right track in robbery. What was it the inspector used to call that list of yours?"

"My elimination chart, and a good name, too. I looked it up in the dictionary, and it means rejecting or casting out what's superfluous. That is what those witnesses tried to put over on me—that just the main facts I was after had nothing to do with the cases. And, Denny, that's what this crowd are trying to do now—concealing facts, every last one of them. Let us try it now."

He reached to the desk, pulled a pencil and a large sheet of paper over and scribbled rapidly.

"In the first place, there's the young man who helped me carry the girl in. He didn't give his right name. Why? He showed up in the crowd at the funeral, but didn't stay when he caught my eye. Why? There is the Grafton Foxes, not telling any more than they had to about their young friend, Ivy Collins. Why? There's the Collins girl herself not going to her friends in Chicago but dropping out of sight. Why?

"There's the young man, Antonio, not leaving his book to take a look out of the window when a woman was screaming her head off. Why? There is Mrs. Doremus not telling about her visitor until she was forced to, and that visitor himself not coming forward like an innocent party; but skulking in a corner. Why? And there's that elevator boy not remembering what he says or knowing his own mind from one minute to the next. Why?"

"That's easy answered," Dennis observed. "Somebody is paying him not to know, or at least to forget what it ain't comfortable to have him remember. The same party likely that passed the tip to headquarters to lay off of Mrs. Doremus. What happened at the afternoon session of the inquest?"

"Nothing but more denying. The coroner put Quimby back on the stand and he said that he didn't know why his daughter wanted to go to Steinway; he'd never heard of anybody living there, and was astonished that she hadn't taken her aunt into her confidence. As to why she had changed in the past year he could not say. If her friends wasn't hysterical and imagining things on account of what had happened, they must have seen more than those close to her every day. Neither her aunt nor him had noticed anything different in her.

"Asked about the quarrel the seamstress had overheard, he said it was exaggerated; that he had remonstrated with her about her extravagance. Miss Beckwith, put back under oath, said the same thing, and that if the seamstress had seen her in tears it had nothing to do with her niece whatever; that she had been nervous and worried about her own ill health and dreading an operation that might have to be performed.

"She didn't know any one in Steinway, either, and if it was true her niece went there—she had raised her veil again and she glared at the young aviator fellow—she could only conclude that the girl wasn't in her right mind. The coroner adjourned the inquest after that, for it was easy to see what the jury's verdict would have been in such a mass of evidence that led nowhere, and Terhune's determination to get a case."

Liver Complaint, Biliousness

And Sick Headaches Go Hand-in-Hand and Are Cured When the Action of the Liver is Awakened.

GANANOQUE, Ont., Feb. 1.—"Biliousness" is the one word used by most people to describe their trouble when the liver gets out of order, leaves bile in the blood, upsets the digestive system and brings on sick headaches and irritable temper, stomach troubles and irregularities of the bowels.

The trouble begins with the liver becoming torpid and sluggish in action, and disappears when the liver is set right. Dr. Chase's Kidney-Liver Pills cure biliousness promptly because of their direct action on the liver. They thoroughly remove all the symptoms because of their combined action on kidneys, liver and bowels.

Rev. George Alton, Gananoque, Ont., writes: "I had been suffering from bilious attacks for four years. I was very weak, had headaches, and my stomach was so bad that I could hardly eat anything without being troubled by it. I had tried cures, herbs, pills and salts, and was under the doctors care for some time, but instead of getting better I seemed to get weaker. I was unable to fulfill my appointments on Sabbath and had to secure help. I used to take dizzy spells and could not walk across the floor straight. I had almost given up all hope, and my wife said that if I did not get better we would have to quit the work of the ministry. However, in looking over The British Whig, the well-known Kingston paper, I saw Dr. Chase's advertisements in it, and read how Dr. Chase's Kidney-Liver Pills had helped others who were troubled as I was. I resolved to give these pills a trial, and I must say that in a short time I obtained relief. I continued taking them for some time, and now I am able to resume my work again. From the benefit I have obtained from these pills, I would recommend them to all who suffer as I did."

(Endorsed by Rev. C. Cunningham, 124 First avenue, Toronto—"This is to certify that I am personally acquainted with George Alton of Gananoque, and believe his statement with reference to Dr. Chase's Kidney-Liver Pills to be true and correct.")

WOMAN'S NERVES MADE STRONG

By Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound.

Winona, Minn.—"I suffered for more than a year from nervousness, and was so bad I could not rest at night—would be awake and get so nervous I would have to get up and walk around and in the morning would be all tired out. I read about Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound and thought I would try it. My nervousness soon left me. I sleep well and feel fine in the morning and able to do my work. I gladly recommend Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound to make weak nerves strong."—Mrs. ALBERT SULTZE, 653 Olmstead St., Winona, Minn.

How often do we hear the expression among women, "I am so nervous, I cannot sleep," or "it seems as though I should fly." Such women should profit by Mrs. Sultze's experience and give this famous root and herb remedy, Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound, a trial.

For forty years it has been overcoming such serious conditions as displacements, inflammation, ulceration, irregularities, periodic pains, backache, dizziness, and nervous prostration of women, and is now considered the standard remedy for such ailments.

Loyalty Shown in Folksongs

NOW that the question of Italy's unredeemed provinces has become acute, it is interesting to find out how the population of these provinces feels about the subject, whether the descendants of bona fide Italians who have been for several generations under Austrian rule really wish to be incorporated with the kingdom of Italy, or whether they would rather remain as they are.

This is not an easy question to solve, as there is little indication of the true state of the people's feelings in the various regions. They have little means of self-expression.

But one means of expression they surely have an outlet for their pent-up feelings, and that is in their folksongs. These are the reflections of moments of strong collective or individual emotion, and in them the very heart of the nation is laid bare. They have a stronger claim to credibility than the folk tale which they probably preceded, since poetry is less liable to change, and addition than prose, as its form is set by the first man who assembles the ideas into verse.

No regions have been more productive of folksongs of a political significance than the so-called "unredeemed" Provinces of Italy. Some of these are little more than doggerel, but in the soft Italian dialects they sound less crude than our abrupt Anglo-Saxon. My translations are literal. Listen to the "Hymn to Italy," written by "Quirico Filopanti," of Bagnarola di Budrio, some time after 1868. As a concession to Austria the second stanza was banned throughout Italy, but needless to say this had no effect.

Float upon the capitol
And on the snowy Alps;
O, divine tri-color,
The banner of our love.

Trieste, the pearl of oceans,
For thee thy sons are fighting;
The valor of their fathers
Is born again for thee.

Shades of all our martyrs,
Your holy blood is waiting,
Waiting for the vengeance
We swear that you shall have.

Italy, our mother,
Brighter days are coming;
All thy sons are fighting
To win thee liberty.

The people of the Dalmatian centres, originally Venetian colonies, of Trieste and the lower Tyrol, have never ceased regarding themselves as Italians, to look on Italy as their motherland.

The words were sung as a marching song:

From the hills of Trentino
To the lakes of Salvore,
Once more has the anguish
Of the people's voice sounded.

It has spread from the mountains,
It has traversed the rivers,
From the coast of Dalmatia
And from Trent has it echoed.

Let the shackles be broken;
Revenge, cry the people,
Every heart is impatient
Now the hour is approaching.

The song continues with quickened rhythm to mark the change in feeling:

They have flown with their great wings extended
Over Trento and even Trieste,
To announce the glad news to our brothers
Who have waited in anguish so long.

From the Alps to the indigo waters,
Where Lissa as sentinel stands;
Let us surfeit our souls with that vengeance;
All Italy waits to exult.

Strong words, for in spite of the song of the Italian poet Mameli, "Forget the anger of one who is dead," the "unredeemed" cherish their hate; it has crystallized into a song, and although it sometimes seems to have disappeared, fresh provocation will revive the sentiment and the song.

In 1882 Guglielmo Oberdan, a student at Trieste, headed a revolt against Austrian tyranny. The boy was hanged. All Trieste sang the "Hymn of Oberdan." Here are two verses:

Armed with bombs as was Orsino,
The dagger clutched in the hand,
Death to the Austrian sovereign,
And our desire is liberty.
Death to Franz.
Hail Oberdan!

We would crush 'neath our feet and forever
The hated Austrian chain.
Death to the tyrannous Hapsburgs!
And our desire is liberty.
Death to Franz.
Hail Oberdan!

At Goritz the struggle was chiefly against the invasion of the Slavs, who poured into the district. How the Italians hated and despised this mixed breed, with their "Znai," or uncouth, rustic dialect! In 1894 "Marameo" was first sung in derision by the carnival crowds in Goritz:

Plava is the noble source
From which our Goritz sprung.
Goritz (please believe me)
Is Slavic at the heart.
Slavic, too, is Trieste.
The Plave, too, are Slavs,
And Dante and Petrarch
Were both born at Tolmin'.
Marameo, simpletons,
Go back to Salcano.
In our blessed Goritz
Italians live, you know.
Romulus and Remus
(Believe me, dearest child)
Were the venerable ancestors
Of my lord of Kabergol.
The king upon the Capitol
The purest Zakai speaks,
While the greatest saints in heaven
Bless the land with fruit and joy.

Will Italy ever redeem her desired territories? Will her people ever be united? Many miles of trenches still divide them. But hope dies hard. And as time goes on other songs are added to this number.

Meat or Shucks.

Sometimes I think the best part of cracking butternuts is cracking them. What are we going to get? Meat or shucks? Never mind if there be nothing more than an empty hole once in a while! John Paul Jones Was Scotch.

John Paul Jones was Scotch by birth and a very enterprising person. During the Revolutionary war he commanded an American privateer and made successful attacks on British commerce. In 1779 the Dutch permitted him to enter their ports with two British ships of war, which he had taken and which the local authorities flatly refused to deliver up. He died at Paris in 1792, and his remains were brought to this country a few years ago for burial.

Beauty or Ugliness.

Speaking of the personal appearance of Lincoln and other presidents, a Boston lady who has had the honor of an introduction to President Wilson, explains why she was disappointed in his looks. She says: "He isn't homely enough to be handsome and he isn't handsome enough to be attractive." A famous Parisienne once said that next to being the most beautiful woman in Paris, she would prefer to be known as the homeliest. She would then achieve distinction in either case.

Rats Steal Flatiron.

Some plastering fell from the ceiling of the linen room at the Glenn house recently, says Pittsburgh Dispatch, and Harland Ray secured a ladder and climbed up to knock down the loose plaster remaining. He discovered a rat's nest and in it were three ladies' silk stockings, two perfume bottles and a flatiron, besides numerous other things not mentioned in this inventory. How the rats got the iron there remains a mystery.

Gave Timely Warning.

Vivian was playing in the lumber that had been piled in the backyard when her mother happened to see her. "Vivian," her mother said, "you mustn't play on that lumber; you are liable to get hurt." Vivian obeyed and was soon interested in something else until Billy came out. He, like boys, had to climb up to the top of the lumber. Vivian said: "Billy, don't climb up on that lumber 'cause if you do you'll be wearin' crutches."

Guard Against Evil Spirit.

If a Chinese baby dies, the evil spirit when released will enter the body of the next child born. In order to prevent this calamity, says World's Work, the parents "tie an egg and some mustard seed to the body of the dead child in the belief that the evil spirit will not appear until the egg hatches and the seed sprouts. The astute parents carefully boil the egg and the seed in order to postpone the date indefinitely."

Could Be Worse.

The Woman at the Back Door—"It must be a terrible thing to have to go through life without your limb. You must remember, however, that it will be restored to you in the next world." "I know," said the tramp, "it will, mum, but that don't encourage me none. You see, me foot was cut off when I was a baby, and it won't come within a foot of the ground when it's restored."—Puck.

Had a Slim Chance.

Being firm friends, Marie's two lovers decided that one must end his courtship to help the other. When Axel suggested "heads or tails" no coin was at hand. He agreed to the use of Sandy's pocketknife, but was ill prepared for his friend's words as the knife shot upward: "If the knife stays up you win!"

Remarkable Memory.

In England Samuel Wesley reproduced from memory after a lapse of 25 years an oratorio covering upward of 300 closely written pages which he had composed early in life. He said that he saw the score in his mind's eye as accurately as if it lay before him.

The Observant Reconteur.

Congleby—"When I am telling a man a story I stop short if I see a peculiar gleam in his eye." Mimms—"Does it mean that he has heard it before?" Congleby—"No, it means that he is not listening, because he is thinking of the one he intends to tell me!"

The Dough That Father Made.

You can announce it that she is the house guest of her parents, or any way they like, but it generally means that the bride has ambled back for a little home cooking.—Louisville Courier-Journal.

New Auto Cooling System.

A new cooling system for automobiles is regulated by the quantity of fuel used to operate an engine rather than by the engine's speed, its action being automatic.

Paying for Poetry.

Poetess—"Do you pay for poetry?" Editor—"Yes, madam. My physician orders me to an expensive rest cure twice a year."—Buffalo Express.

Doubtful.

For our part, we doubt if there was ever a girl who could carry a broken heart and eat boiled cabbage at the same time.—Galveston News.

To Remove Ink Stains.

Apply a few drops of oxalic acid, following it with a few drops of Javelle water and rinsing both quickly with boiling water.

There is no more efficacious way of removing finger-marks from woodwork, window panes or porcelain than by wiping them with a cloth moistened with kerosene.

UNLUCKY "SECONDS."

Fate Bears Hard Upon Monarchs With II. In Their Titles.

Are the numerals "II." unlucky when they follow the name of a monarch? It would seem so.

Of the four living European rulers and ex-rulers so characterized two, the Czar Nicholas II. of Russia and Sultan Abdul Hamid II. of Turkey, are deposed and prisoners. The third, King Manuel II. of Portugal, has been deprived of his throne by his people while the fourth, the Kaiser Wilhelm II. of Germany, has more than a generous share of troubles of his own.

History, too, curiously enough, tells the same story. Alexander II. of Russia was blown to bits by nihilist bomb in 1881. Louis II. of Bavaria was drowned in 1886. Charles II. of France was strangled. James II. of Scotland was killed in battle. Napoleon II., having lost his throne, died in exile.

Among British monarchs Harold II., the last of the Saxon kings, fell at Hastings. Edward II. was cruelly murdered in prison at the instigation of his own wife, and a similar fate likewise overtook Richard II. William II. was murdered. James II. lost his kingdom and his crown at the battle of the Boyne. His brother, Charles II., killed himself by his debaucheries.

The above are but sample instances, culled at haphazard from history. There are many others.—London Telegraph.

AWFUL ATTACKS OF HEART TROUBLE

EASED BY SECOND DOSE OF

Milburn's Heart and Nerve Pills

One of the first danger signals announcing something wrong with the heart is the irregular beat or violent throb. Often there is only a fluttering sensation, or an "all-gone" sinking feeling, or, again you may experience a smothering sensation, gasp for breath and feel as though about to die.

In such cases the action of Milburn's Heart and Nerve Pills in quieting the heart, restoring its normal beat and imparting tone to the nerve centres, is, beyond question, marvellous.

Mrs. Frank Arseneau, Newcastle, N.B., writes: "I have awful attacks of heart trouble for the past five or six years, and as I had tried many kinds of medicine without getting any better, I decided to give Milburn's Heart and Nerve Pills a trial, and to my surprise I found ease from the second dose. I continued taking them until I had used six boxes, and now I feel as well as can be.

"At present my sister is taking them for nervousness, and finds great comfort by their use."

Milburn's Heart and Nerve Pills are 50c a box at all dealers, or mailed direct on receipt of price, by The T. Milburn Co., Limited, Toronto, Ont.

Lord Palmerston's Dinner.

Lord Palmerston was a remarkable feeder, as is shown by this account of his table work when he was eighty years of age.

"He ate for dinner two plates of turtle soup. He was then served very amply to a plate of cod and oyster sauce. He then took a pate, afterward he was helped to two very greasy looking entrees. He then dispatched a plate of roast mutton. There then appeared before him the largest and, to my mind, the hardest slice of ham that ever figured on the table of a nobleman, yet it disappeared just in time to answer the inquiry of his butler, 'Snipe, my lord, or pheasant?' He instantly replied, 'Pheasant,' thus completing his ninth dish of meat at that meal."

This was Lord Palmerston, who lived and worked like a horse till he was eighty-one, and would doubtless have poured scorn upon the scientific slops and gruels offered to old men in our day. Palmerston was one that was nourished by his victuals and would fain have meat.—New York Post.

WHILE AT WAR
Women Suffer at Home

Toronto, Ont.—"I consider Doctor Pierce's Favorite Prescription the very best of women's tonics. I suffered a severe nervous breakdown. I could not sleep, was weak and tired all the time. I took the 'Prescription' and just a few bottles completely built me up and relieved me of my nervous condition. It is a good medicine and I am glad to recommend it.—MRS. ALFRED SHEPPARD, 250 Seaton St.

Niagara Falls, Ont.—"I can safely say that 'Favorite Prescription' did me a lot of good. I at one time developed woman's trouble; my nerves were completely shattered, and I became weak. I had severe backache and pains in my side, extending down into my limbs. I doctored, but did not get relieved of my ailment and was down and out when I began taking Dr. Pierce's Favorite Prescription, and it so completely cured me and restored me to health and strength that I was able to do all my own work and others besides. I do recommend 'Favorite Prescription' to weak and ailing women; they cannot get a better medicine."—MRS. JOHN LOCKHART, 28 Terrace Ave.

Favorite Prescription is an invigorating, restorative tonic, a soothing and strengthening nervine and a positive remedy for the chronic weaknesses peculiar to women.

This old prescription of Dr. Pierce's is extracted from roots and herbs by means of pure glycerine and is a temperance remedy of 50 years' good standing. Send 10c for trial pkg. of tablets to Dr. V. M. Pierce, Invalids' Hotel, Buffalo, N. Y., or Bridgeburg, Ont.

In India no beggar is refused alms. He is always given either money or a small dole of rice, no inquiry being made as to whether he deserves help. The mendicant thus obtains enough for the daily needs of himself, family and lazy relatives.

Harbor Lights.

From New York harbor and immediate approaches alone 208 beacon lights to navigation are required, including forty-six shore lights, two light vessels and thirty-eight lighted buoys; there are 192 buoys of all classes and thirty-seven for signals, including sounding buoys.

Enormous Land Values.

There is an amazing price set upon the land of London. In the center of the English metropolis tiny lots have been sold for fortunes.

An acre there is the dearest in the world. Many a transaction over ground in the heart of the city has set the figure of $16,250,000 per acre. One square mile of London is valued at $750,000,000. The land beneath the Bank of England at low estimate is worth $35,000,000, and there are only three acres in that tract too.

There are places on Queen Victoria, Upper Thames, St. Mary-at-Hill and Cannon streets where one square inch is worth $1.25. In Lombard street and King William street prices have ranged from $200 and $250 to $350 per square foot.—National Real Estate Journal.

In addition to the examinations mentioned, the cash and securities at the Chief Office and certain of the principal Branches were checked and verified by us at another time during the year and found to be in accord with the books of the Bank.

All information and explanations required have been given to us and all transactions of the Bank which have come under our notice have, in our opinion, been within the powers of the Bank.

CHILDREN IN WAR TIME.

Future Citizens Become Valuable Asset of Country.

War work for babies which resulted in lowering the infant death rate in Great Britain, France, Belgium, and Germany is described by Dr. Grace L. Meigs in a paper on infant welfare work in war time which the bureau has just made available for general distribution.

The special features of the work have varied in the different countries. In England there has been a striking increase in the number of health visitors employed to help and to instruct mothers in the care of their babies and young children. An act providing for Government aid to local agencies had, as it happened, been passed in July, 1914.

"The local Government board (the central supervising and administrative body) has taken the stand that in war time, in spite of the general need for economy, no economy should be exercised in this direction. There is evidence that in a good many communities, on account of the lack of money and private support, the authorities or voluntary agencies have been slow to increase their work or to undertake new work. These difficulties the local government board has largely overcome. It has gone on with the greatest determination towards its acknowledged goal —to have systematic supervision through the work of health visitors for all babies born who need care."

The available information for Germany concerns only the first eighteen months of the war. Dr. Meigs refers to the emphasis placed on enabling mothers to care for their own children. A special committee of the Red Cross, for example, was organized in Berlin for the care of mothers and infants. The committee had a fund for needy mothers which it used for those mothers who brought their babies regularly to an infant-welfare station and who took care of them in their own homes.

The outstanding feature of the work in Paris seems to be the increased provision for maternity care; and in Belgium, the establishment of canteens for the feeding of mothers and of young children.

Dr. Meigs speaks of the important part played by the military separation allowances which are granted by foreign governments to the wives of enlisted men, either, as in Great Britain and Canada, to the wives of all soldiers, or, as in France and Germany, to the wives who are in need because the family's wage-earner has been called to the colors.

Furthermore, in each of these countries except Belgium a maternity benefit from Government funds, provided before the war to certain mothers, has now been extended to include either the wives of all enlisted men or all women who are receiving the military separation allowance.

The chief preventive measure for protecting babies is to insure their intelligent care and nursing by healthy mothers in their own homes. Nothing should be considered more important in war time than the strengthening and extending of preventive work already established for infant and maternal welfare.

Who Opened Lusitania's Safe?

When the Lusitania was torpedoed by a German submarine off the coast of Ireland, with the loss of 1,100 lives, she carried with her, among other rich freight, a consignment of diamonds in transit from New York to London, upon which the Union Insurance Company of Bangor, Me., carried a risk of $13,000.

The company promptly paid the claim, and entered the $13,000 in its loss account. But, it now appears, long after the great disaster, the insurance company received a London draft for the full amount of its risk, with the information that the diamonds had been recovered.

An Irish fisherman, upon hauling his trawl, found that he had hooked the most valuable fish in his career—a small package, which bore plainly enough the address of a firm of London jewelers, and which upon examination was found to contain diamonds—the gems upon which the Bangor Insurance Company, among others, carried risks. The fisherman got his due amount of salvage, and the diamond merchants were glad to return the insurance money.

The puzzle is: Having presumably been locked up in the purser's safe, how did the diamond packet get loose so that it came up on the fisherman's trawl?

Marry or Pay Penalty.

Any male or female person who after having reached the age limit has not contracted marriage, or any married couple who after living together for a certain number of years has not had any child or children born to them, shall pay a certain amount of contribution to the Government, if the bill presented by Representative Ponciano Morales from the second district of Isocos Sur is enacted into law in the Philippines.

This bill has for its object to require and oblige all those persons who are of age to contract marriage in order that they may help enlarge the population of the islands. As a matter of fact, many people of this kind purposely evade marrying to escape maintaining a family and work for their living.

Japan's Colonial Policy.

Korea is the largest of Japan's colonies, and since its acquirement the same policy of assimilation has been pursued that has worked so well in Formosa. It is a colonial policy wholly original with the Japanese, and the chief publicists of the Empire thinks it much superior to French and British methods. In Korea natives have been appointed to important posts of honor, schools have been erected and competent teachers supplied. Sanitation has been introduced into all the cities; street railways have been laid down in Seoul and modern hotels have been built in the large cities. Loyalty is thus assured.

Silk is cheaper to wear than wool.

LENINE.

One of the Men Controlling the Destiny of Russia.

In his first speech as a leader of the Maximalists, who seized Petrograd and ousted the Kerensky regime, Lenine declared that the first thing he would do would be to start peace negotiations. As peace agitator and alleged German agent he was arrested in July, but later escaped. The Kerensky regime threatened to try him as a spy if caught again. His real name is Vladimir Liitch Ulianoff and he is about fifty years old. Russian-born, of an intelligent family long identified with revolutionary activities. His book "The Development of Capitalism in Russia" is regarded as one of the most valuable contributions to Russian economic literature, and his articles on agrarian, economic and scientific problems won him high place in the estimation of socialists and scientists alike. Shortly after the revolution Lenine, returning from exile in Switzerland, declared his position against the provisional government.

It was explained that the provisional government, anxious to avoid any accusation of interference with freedom of speech or of the press, had therefore hesitated to arrest Lenine, but that in recent days officials determined not to tolerate them any longer, regarding them as "more dangerous for Russia and her liberty than the Germans."

In connection with his believed pro-German activities documents declared to have been found in the record of the old department of police were regarded by Russians as significant.

The documents showed that while a socialist named Malinovsky was leader of the social democratic faction of the third douma about five years ago he was on the payroll of the emperor's police. Presumably leader of the opposition and elected in reality, according to the purported evidence, acting for the emperor as an agent, secretly paid to confuse and disrupt the opposition.

Lenine denounced by moderate liberals the world over as the evil genius of the Russian revolution, and accused by General Brusiloff as a paid German agent, appears to be the directing power behind the present outbreak, as he was openly the leader of the Maximalist rising in Petrograd on July 16th, which was suppressed after several hundred of the civil population had been massacred by machine-gun troops following his leadership. This revolt, which followed close on the collapse of the Russian armies in Galicia after the successful offensive led by Alexander Kerensky, came near putting the Bolsheviki in command of Petrograd and resulted in the resignation of George Lvoff as premier and his replacement by Kerensky.

Since then Lenine has been in hiding. Order for his arrest was issued at once, and it was reported that he was captured in Finland, near the Swedish border, a few days later, but was retaken by his friends. After that he was reported to be in hiding in Sweden, or even in Switzerland, but recently it has been said that most of the time he was in Finland and in constant telephonic connection with Trotzsky and other Maximalist leaders. At all events, he intended to put in his appearance at the democratic congress in Moscow the 5th September, and the Bolsheviki had the effrontery to ask Kerensky for a guarantee that he would not be arrested. This the premier refused to do, so Lenine remained in hiding, though it appears that any determined effort to find him would probably have been successful had Kerensky dared to use summary measures.

He was elected to the second douma after the revolution in 1905, was compelled to go into exile, a thing he had often done before, when the reaction triumphed. At the beginning of the present war he was in Cracow and was interned as an enemy alien, but was shortly released and allowed to proceed to Zimmerwald, in Switzerland, where a colony of Russian revolutionists was already established.

After the revolution the provisional government of Russia entered into an agreement with Germany by which the Russian revolutionists in Switzerland were allowed to return through Germany, in return for the release of German civilians in Russia. Lenine headed the party which returned by this route, and his social program, which he has been advocating ever since, was drawn up as he passed through. He reached Petrograd on April 16th, just after the pacifists in the council of workmen's and soldiers' deputies had forced the resignation of Miliukoff, and at once began to preach immediate peace and general confiscation. — Boston Transcript.

Safety First Hints.

Some safety hints for the wise, which are intended to guard against serious accidents and a possible loss of life, are being sent out broadcast by the electric light companies. From them may be selected the following: Do not cover an electric globe with paper or cloth. It may start a fire. Do not hang an ordinary lamp cord over a nail or metal work. Do not leave a cord connected when you are through it it. Do not touch any wire that is down on the ground, whether it is an electric, telephone, or guy wire. In an emergency, remove a wire with an instrument equipped with a wooden handle, keeping the full length of the handle between yourself and the wire.—Popular Science Monthly.

An Exploded Belief.

That stars are visible in the daytime from the bottom of a deep shaft or well has been generally believed since the days of Aristotle, but there is not the slightest foundation for the idea. Baron Humboldt, who spent a good deal of time in mines himself and questioned miners in various parts of the world, found no evidence in support of this belief, and though it has since been thoroughly "exploded" the idea flourishes just as vigorously as ever.

Crewless Raiders.

Once more the Germans have sprung a surprise on the allied forces, this time in the shape of a crewless raider that is electrically operated through a cable from a shore station. Already several of these craft have been encounteerd by British warships cruising off the Belgian coast, but at the moment of writing all such attacks have failed of result.

We learn from statements of the British Admiralty that these crewless raiders are electrically-controlled boats propelled by two gasoline engines, partially closed in, and are capable of traveling at a high rate of speed. Each raider carries a drum with between 30 and 50 miles of insulated, single-core cable, which is paid out in the wake of the vessel and through which the mechanism is controlled from shore. The fore part carries a considerable charge of high explosive, probably from 300 to 500 pounds, which is arranged to explode on impact.

The method of operating the crewless raider is to start the engines, after which the men leave the boat. A seaplane, protected by a strong fighting patrol, then accompanies the vessel at a distance of from three to five miles and signals to the shore operator of the helm. These signals need only be "starboard," "port," or "steady."

By an obviously clever grouping of the wireless idea, the high-speed gasoline craft, and the electrically controlled plan, the Germans have made use of the crewless-raider scheme in a 20th century way. They have not overcome the disadvantages of a trailing cable, to be sure; but they have overcome the problem of visibility, for the aerial observer in the seaplane which convoys the raider is at all times within visual distance. Since power to drive the craft is entirely self-contained and need not be transmitted through the cable, the Germans have been able to use a much smaller cable and thus overcome the difficulties in this direction. It is evident that they use a one-wire cable, depending on the salt water for the return current, to complete the circuit.

Just how effective the crewless raider is in practice still remains to be proved.—Collective American.

Canada's River of Mud.

What is perhaps the most wonderful river in the whole world and one which is certainly unique of its kind was discovered by a party of prospectors exploring what is known as the "Smoky river region" in northern Alberta, Canada.

Briefly, it is a river of mud—that is to say, although its course is well marked, with banks clearly defined, as in an ordinary river, its bed contains not water, but thick liquid mud of the consistency of molasses.

The mud river flows, as does a water river, but, of course, much more slowly. In fact, its progress during the time the party were observing it more nearly resembled that of a glacier. Unlike a glacier, however, there is no terminal moraine. A glacier at its foot melts and flows away, leaving an accumulation of rocks, but any heavy masses that may be in this river of mud must settle to the bottom and remain concealed by the mud itself. This mud river debouches on a plain, spreading out fanlike and forming a morass of unknown depth and extent.—London Mail.

Some Things In Iceland.

Iceland is far from being a dreary waste, for it exports large quantities of the finest grade of wool in the world, besides quantities of hides, sheepskins, feathers, oil, fish and fish products and, curiously enough, many horses. The island has several natural resources that have never been developed, among them great sulphur deposits. One of them contains not less than 250,000 tons of practically pure sulphur. There are extensive deposits of copper ore. This, while of a low grade, could be worked at a huge profit, since the water power is unlimited and always at hand wherever the copper is found. There are also large deposits of geyserite, which is equal to the best Arkansas honestone. In addition there are several sections rich in agates and chalcedony, which are widely used in making jewels for the bearings of watches and electrical instruments. None of them has ever been worked.

FOR BABY'S TENDER SKIN.

A child's skin is tender as well as beautiful and eczema may be caused by chafing of clothing, the use of poor soap, exposure to cold or sudden change of temperature. Probably no treatment for eczema has ever proven so successful as Dr. Chase's Ointment, and this applies particularly to baby eczema. This ointment is delightfully soothing, stops the itching and consequently prevents scratching. Gradually the sores are healed up, and the skin is left soft and velvety.

NINE BOILS

Kept Coming On Neck One After the Other

Anyone who has ever suffered from boils, knows how sick and miserable they make you feel.

When you think you are about cured of one, another seems ready to take its place and prolong your wretchedness. All the poulticing and lancing you may do will not cure them and stop more coming.

Boils are simply bad blood bursting out, and the bad blood must be made pure before the boils disappear.

Burdock Blood Bitters is the greatest blood purifier known. It cleanses the system and removes every particle of foul material from the blood, then never another boil comes and the cure is permanent.

Mr. Geo. Ayers, 302 Gloucester St., Ottawa, Ont., writes: "I wish to tell you what I know about your wonderful Burdock Blood Bitters. In the spring I suppose my system needed cleaning out, for I had nine boils come on my neck one after the other. I quickly got a bottle of B.B.B., and before it was half finished I felt a great change, and it certainly put an end to my boils, otherwise I might have had a lot more. I recommend B.B.B. to all I can, for I know it to be a great remedy."

Improved Presses.

Of late a printing press capable of handling four separate jobs at once and feeding stock that varies in thickness from thin tissue to fourply cardboard, has been introduced in this country. It is said to do three-color process work as well as cylinder presses, and produces solid tints that show no mottling. It will turn out from 2,500 to 3,200 impressions an hour.

BOLSHEVIKI REPLY TO THE ALLIES WAR AIMS

PUBLIC MEETINGS ARE BANNED IN GERMANY

Splendid Success of Italians Maintained At Every Point

Area of Newly Occupied Territory is Being Organized Rapidly,--Losses of the Successful Troops, Many of Whom Were Among the Last Classes Called to the Colours, Were Light---British Repulse Enemy Raids

A SUMMARY OF TO-DAY'S WAR CABLES

(Canadian Press Despatch.)

ITALIAN HEADQUARTERS IN NORTHERN ITALY, Feb. 1.—The splendid success gained by the Italian troops in two days' fighting west of the Brenta River has been maintained at all points, and the area of the newly occupied territory is being organizel rapidly without further effort by the enemy to regain his lost positions. As the Italian brigades which took part in the fighting reassembled it developed that their losses were comparatively small, the aggregate being considerably less than the number of prisoners taken from the enemy. The estimated total enemy loss, without counting the prisoners taken by the Italians, was between five and six thousand.

The troops have been stimulated by the success in the Asiago area, and the Italian triumph is taken to show the really formidable and aggressive spirit of the new forces. A considerable part of the troops engaged was of the classes last called to the colours, including some nineteen years old.

Many of the Sassare Brigade which distinguished itself are Sardinians. All prisoners speak of the remarkable fighting qualities shown by the Sardinians. The result of the action is having effect on the morale of the enemy, according to reports of prisoners. The Austrian winter campaign in the mountains had stopped entirely as it was considered the difficulties of snow and ice and interruption of the roads and transport supplies had made operations impossible. Having accepted these conditions as decisive against a winter offensive, the Austrians were taken completely by surprise, when the Italians carried out the operation which drove the enemy back from the lines marking his winter position.

RUSSIA THINKS THAT SHE HAS BEEN STABBED BY ALLIES

Bolsheviki Government Believes It is Internationally at Bay Struggling For Democracy Against a World of Enemies

A MISTAKEN BELIEF

(By J. W. T. Mason.)
(Canadian Press Despatch.)

NEW YORK, Feb. 1.—Leon Trotsky's remarkable statement to the United Press on Russia's foreign relations, shows that the Bolsheviki government believes that it is internationally at bay, struggling for its own ideals of extreme democracy against a world of enemies.

To help Russia at this time it is primarily necessary to know the Russian government's point of view. Trotsky has not supplied it. He is wrong about America's reasons for being in the war, but America has been wrong about the character of the Bolsheviki leaders. America saw the mistake first, the Bolsheviki have not realized theirs.

Trotsky's vehement denunciation of the Western democracies reveals the nervous tremors and snarling offensive of a wounded animal fighting for its life against the pack. Trotsky shows that Russia thinks it has been tabbed by its democratic allies for their own benefit. The news cannot have penetrated Russia that the Bolsheviki are winning allied opinion to their side by the highest test of all, the test of results.

Trotsky's plea that the Allies join the peace negotiations at Brest-Litovsk as proof of their sincerity, cannot be accepted. The western nations see more clearly than do the Bolsheviki that the German militarists would become dominant if their demand for a secret conference were granted. Trotsky's present power over the people of the Central Powers is due very largely to the absence of Allied statesmen from Brest-Litovsk. The isolation of the Bolsheviki has permitted the Teutonic masses to believe there is no trick for any notion's undoing concealed in Trotsky's new kind of democracy.

Russian Foreign Minister Trotsky Replies to War Aim Declarations of President Wilson and Premier Lloyd George in Sensational Interview With the United Press

SITUATION DISCUSSED

Special to The Examiner:

(By Joseph Shaplen.)
(Copyright 1918 by the United Press.)

PETROGRAD, Jan. 31 (delayed.)—Foreign Minister Leon Trotsky to-day replied to the war aim declarations of President Wilson and Premier Lloyd George through the United Press.

"Academically speaking, President Wilson's latest peace formula seeks to meet ours," declared the Foreign Minister in an interview in his office at Smolny Institute, "but if applied in reality, it practically would result similarly to the German diplomacy."

"The Central Powers also originally accepted our formula in their declaration of December 25, whereafter, in applying it practically, it resolved itself into an annexationist, imperialistic demand under cover of a democratic peace formula.

ACCEPTS IN PRINCIPLE.

"Or, in other words, President Wilson accepts in principle, the right of self determination, but refuses to go as far as the right of all subject nationalities everywhere to self determination, not excluding complete independence if desired.

"Manifestly, President Wilson addressed himself primarily to Austria-Hungary. He is willing to concede autonomy to the nationalities within the Dual Monarchy, but not their independence, hoping to divorce the Dual Monarchy from the Central Alliance.

Mr. Wilson's latest formula was actuated primarily by the important fact that America does not seek territorial aggrandizement, but is strengthening preparations for her own imperialism.

The problem of the American middle class is to obtain the weakening of both imperialistic sides in the European conflict in order to make American capitalism the hero of European capitalism. That is why the praise bestowed upon us by Mr. Wilson, when only two weeks before the American and Entente press called us German agents, has not called out from our side the enthusiastic response expected.

At any rate, we believe if Mr. Wilson and Mr. Lloyd George really sought a quick peace through their latest formula, they should have shown it by consenting to join in general peace negotiations.

Only by such participation could they have knocked out of the hands of the German government, the main weapon by which it maintains internal discipline.

REFUSAL HELPED GERMANY.

The refusal of the Entente to join in the negotiations enabled the German government to show its workmen that America, France and England desire Germany, and therefore Germany must fight to the end.

On the other hand, the participation of all the warring lands in the negotiations would have created such a peace sentiment among the peoples, that it would have made impossible a renewal of the war after the long welcomed armistice, and would have forced a negotiated, democratic peace.

Any attempt to renew the war after the negotiations would undoubtedly result in the overthrow of all the governments. That is why the Entante fought shy of our invitation to join the general peace negotiations.

They hope still to crush the Central Empires and they do not desire to sacrifice their own imperialistic ambitions.

At this point I asked:

"But isn't President Wilson's latest formula, despite the refusal to join

CONSCRIPT ALIEN LABOUR DECLARE WAR VETERANS

LONDON, Feb. 1.—At a big meeting of members of the Great War Veterans' Association, it was unanimously decided to ask the Dominion Government to pass legislation by which enemy and friendly aliens may be conscripted to work wholly in the interests of this country. Sergt. Turley, Provincial Secretary, declared that alien profiteers, peanut vendors, shoe shine men, foreign fruit dealers and others were making huge profits. Their labour, he said, should be utilized for the Empire.

SPAIN FORMS A COMPLEX PROBLEM FOR ALLIES NOW

Spaniards Are Watching Critical Progress of War With Keen Eyes, Anxious to Get In On the Winning Side

MANY GERMANS THERE

(By Robert J. Bender.)
(Special to The Toronto Star and The Peterborough Examiner.)

WASHINGTON, Feb. 1. — Spain to-day is one of the most important and complex problems facing the United States and the Allies.

Already she is feeling the teeth of America's grim war determination in answer to her embargo on the shipment of needed supplies on the ship-Pershing's army in France. Eight of her big merchant ships are idle in New York, refused bunker coal licenses, pending the outcome of negotiations now going on, the nature of which cannot yet be revealed.

Meantime, however, the United Press is able to present an authoritative insight into Spanish conditions, based on information sent here, the reliability of which cannot be questioned

The Spaniards, it is said, are watching the critical progress of the war with keen eyes. If she enters, she wants to be on the winning side.

Her army is engaged as pro-German. As in every other country the officers of the army are greatly impressed by the fetish of German military efficiency. Many of them have been trained in Germany and are thoroughly Germanphile.

It is claimed that Spain has modern rifles for two million men. It is asserted that there are seventy thousand German reserves in the country, and that when the Spanish army takes the field the burden of command will fall upon twenty-five thousand German officers "already in the country and their campaign well planned and every man in his place." In view of these conditions, this Government today is directly faced with the task, not only of holding Spain to our conceptions of neutrality, but of keeping her from joining with Germany. That she has been of great service, either actively or passively, to Germany, has been known for some time.

German submarines have been provisioning and getting wireless information along the Spanish coast for many months. Submarine crews have been changed in Spanish harbours. American agents kept track of men on one German boat in a Spanish harbour and there was a regular weekly change in the personal brought about by "spelling" U-boat crews.

All over the coast of Spain it is reported there are German wireless stations in constant touch with Germany and with submarines.

But despite her apparent leaning toward the German cause—now accenduated by her embargo on supplies to American fighting forces—Spain, it is believed, would side with the Allies if she saw in them a winner. If, however, Germany delivered the first crushing blow, American citizens in Spain say Alphonso will be forced to go in on the side of the Teutons. Hence this Government is determined to obtain a definite understanding with Spain on several points, the nature of which cannot be disclosed now, and Spanish ships are temporarily held in American ports pending adjustment.

UNION GOVERNMENT IN ONTARIO IS DEWART'S PROPOSAL

Liberal Member of the Legislature Says Hearst Government Must Carry Out That Step If It Wants To Be Consistent

PROPER TIME NOW

(Special to the Toronto Star and The Peterborough Examiner.)

HAMILTON, Ont., Feb. 1.—"It is all too apparent that it is the intention of the Hearst government to try to float back into power on the crest of the wave of a Unionist war time success in the Dominion elections," declared Hartley Dewart, addressing the Liberal Women's Association here. "Already there is a tendency to treat the Liberals who had voted with the Union Government as if they had come over to the Conservative party and to run the Provincial elections as if a war time alignment of parties in the recent election meant the disruption of the old Liberal party," added Mr. Dewart.

"Every member of the Hearst government," Mr. Dewart said, "had taken to stump in the recent Dominion elections in favour of a Union government. If they believed in their own policy they must, to be consistent, create a Union government in Ontario and avoid the turmoil and strife of a political campaign which they had so much deprecated in Dominion affairs. This was the time, at the opening of the session, for Sir Wm. Hearst to take counsel with Mr. Proudfoot and form a Union government in Ontario, in which he would have the advice and assistance of members of both sides of the House in forming the policy and directing the administration of the affairs of the province until the war is over.

If Premier Hearst did not adopt in Provincial matters the policy which, with Mr. Rowell, they had united to carry out in Dominion matters, then he must stand guilty of a charge of political inconsistency and the responsibility of expense of a Provincial election must rest upon his shoulders. Mr. Dewart felt sure that the enfranchised women of Ontario would place the responsibility where it belonged.

Mr. Dewart pledged his support to Wm. Proudfoot, the new party leader.

A PROSPEROUS YEAR.

The Dominion, as well as the Dominion Bank, has had a good year. The bank's decrease in current loans of more than three millions was due to the general prevalence of prosperity having induced extensive curtailment of borrowing. The prosperous condition of the bank's business is shown by the fact that the increase in its assets last year exceeded the combined increases of the years 1915 and 1916. The expansion of the bank's business constituted a record, bringing an increase of $16,569,000 in assets, making a grand total of $109,436,145. More noteworthy was the increase in "quick assets" of twenty million dollars, of which seven and a half million consisted of cash items and the balance in cash securities (largely Dominion and Provincial) or call loans. The large growth in assets was due to expansion of all classes of deposits and in the notes circulation, the latter being especially significant, as it amounts to $9,417,064, an increase of nearly two and a half millions, representing 157 per cent. of paid-up capital. It is amply provided for by deposits in the Central Gold Reserve. Profits for the year, less war taxes, were $1,065,062. After deducting donations to patriotic purposes, adding the sum of $55,000 to officers' pension fund, and writing off $200,000, a dividend of 12 per cent. was declared and paid.

The excellent record of the Dominion Bank for the past year reflects the highest credit upon the general management, a credit shared by that of the local branch, presided over by Mr. John Crane.

In the cold winter of 1806-7 Napoleon, from Poland, wrote to Paris, ordering fires lighted in the churches so that the people could have common warming places.

FIRE FIGHTING.

While there is a little idea of the saying, "Lock the stable after the horse is stolen," in the activity of the City Council in taking stock of our fire fighting equipment, with a view of remedying defects or supplying needs, their action is fully justified, and it is hoped that a resolute dealing with the problem of fire protection revived by recent occurrences, will be had.

And while Alderman Dobbin's proposal to purchase a "water tower" as a "special apparatus for combtting fires in the business section of the city," was not very enthusiastically received, yet it should not be cavalierly dismissed. It should be maturely and carefully considered, as well as the whole problem of fire fighting.

Of course there are several aspects to the proposal. In relation to the state in which we find our finances, the question of spending $6,000 or $7,000 in purchasing a water tower, has to be adjusted. The benefits and advantages of such an apparatus should be considered. A water tower possesses powerful points of commendation. It will no doubt give firemen better control and direction of fire streams in cases where high buildings are concerned. While its advantages may be many it cannot do impossibilities, or be regarded as a fire-fighting cure-all.

Some have ventured the opinion that in the fire calamity of Saturday a water tower might have wasted its efforts. It might have poured water on the outside of the roofs, but, it is argued that that is where water was not wanted; for it could not get through the roof to where the fire was doing the damage. The fire was eating its way northward, by way of the gigantic tinder boxes the mansard roof is capable of covering provides. Water streams applied outside the roof could do little good in checking the interior blaze till it had eaten its way upwards through the roof, and then the water could only be effective in checking the interior blaze in proportion to the size of the roof opening it had created.

Spectators of the fire who have good judgment, say that hose carried through the Bradburn building, and through the ceiling traps into the attic, in the earlier stages of the fire, could have played where the flames were raging, with an effect that could not come from any amount of water poured upon the roof from the outside.

Suggestions like these might well be taken into consideration in dealing with the subject of the merits and necessity of providing a water tower. As remarked, the proposal should not be summarily dismissed, nor dismissed at all, till mature and careful consideration has been applied to every advantage and disadvantage of incurring so large an expense, which, however, should not be a deterrent consideration when the safety of our property is involved in the provision of the best fire-fighting equipment the city can afford to procure.

It is suggested, too, that there are other things that are necessary to equip firemen for doing their best in carrying hose into parts of burning and smoke-filled buildings, where water can be applied to the best advantage. It is stated that in all our excellent 25,000-dollar fire hall equipment, there is not a single smoke helmet—something absolutely essential to firemen to equip them for the best service in fire fighting.

From lack of such equipment, it is claimed that at two recent fires, two firemen were prostrated; at the very moment when their courage and enterprise, qualified and impelled them to do the work that was needed to gain mastery of the fire they were "knocked out"—from lack of so simple and comparatively inexpensive—and indispensable—an article of equipment.

Considerations like these, and the interest involved in the way of safety of property and life, indicate the importance of the City Council giving the most serious attention to remedying what may be defective or supplying what minor details of equipment may be found lacking in order that we may have, in these possible respects the necessary complement of a perfect fire department.

In giving consideration to the subject the aldermen might, with advantage, confer with the firemen, whose knowledge, gained by experience, of what is needed, would be valuable.

In all main essentials we have a splendid equipment of fire fighting requirements—an abundant supply and a pressure of water—as much as and more than, if put to the test, water mains and service pipes will stand. We have a fine body of firemen, a well-equipped fire hall, and if there is anything in the way of details of equipment lacking, our City Fathers should decide, and, if within reasonable reach of the civic funds available, they should be provided.

The Quebec Telegraph says the new Food Controller won't let his "private interests" interfere with his work. What we want to be assured of is that he won't let our "big interests" interfere either.

GERMANY WANTS PEACE

NOW SEEKS PROFIT OF WAR IN POLAND.

The Meaning of the Congress at Brest-Litovsk Set Forth by Noted American Critic, Who Says That the Warlords Have Altered Their Ideas of World Domination for the Present.

APART from the obvious efforts that will be made by the Germans to capitalize the Congress of Brest-Litovsk for their own peace propaganda purposes, its chief value and interest for the world lies in the fact that it furnishes a good index of things as they are at the moment in the world war. It might have a further use if it enabled the allied public to avoid a great deal of unnecessary alarm, due to the succession of unduly disturbing and over-optimistic bulletins which continue to reach it from public sick of various countries.

The Congress of Brest-Litovsk is a concrete evidence of the fact that the Germans have on the present showing won the war in the East, but by the same token it discloses the fact that Germany has lost the war on the sea and in the West, and is seeking her profit in Poland, not in Belgium; in the Balkans, not in French Lorraine.

Peace made by negotiations between Germany and the Western powers now would amount to a transaction based upon the possession by Germany of Belgium and a small portion of France, and by the enemies of Germany of all Germany's colonies and the power to continue the paralysis of Germany's sea-borne commerce. Despite all contemporary confusion and excitement, the real question in the West is not whether Germany will win the war by crushing France and Britain before the United States can get up, but whether she will be able, by inflicting more heavy casualties, to persuade them to abandon their fight for a general European settlement before we can arrive on the battle line. What Germany is now after is to get peace in the West on the basis of the situation of August, 1914; this is the maximum of her hopes. With reference to France and Great Britain she expects to sacrifice certain of her colonies. She may even think of possible indemnities to Belgium. But her main objectives now are in the East and in the Balkans. Her efforts to dominate the world by crushing France and getting at Great Britain have been for the time being, at least, set aside. They are objects for "next time," not for the balance of this war.

The Congress of Brest-Litovsk will put in definite form the fruits of German victory in the East. The frontiers and the arrangements made at this congress may prove permanent, may last for a number of years, unless the allied purpose to fight until a real settlement is attained endures through the next two years. If the terms agreed upon at Brest-Litovsk stand, Germany will in all probability dominate all Central Europe and Western Asia. She will be a menace to the peace of the world, and it will be necessary for the Western nations, including the United States, to keep huge standing armies and bear the great burden of armed peace. If the arrangements made at Brest-Litovsk are abolished by subsequent allied victories in the West, we may have yet a real peace, a general settlement, and an escape from a world in arms. The integrity of France and the independence of Belgium, the safety of the British Empire—these questions were settled at the Marne, at Verdun, and by the failure of the German submarine campaign. Even Italy, defeated as she now obviously is, faces no threat of mutilation. The highest price she may have to pay is the extinction of her hope to reclaim Trieste and the Trentino and thus complete the unification of the Italian people.

The Western world knows very little about Eastern European conditions. It knows very little about Balkan conditions. It is war-weary, and the French and British publics clearly perceive now that the integrity of France and Great Britain and for that matter of Belgium, is assured. They perceive that Germany's assault upon the Western world has failed, and that, despite all the boasting and bluffing that come from Berlin, Germany is heartily sick of the conflict and wholly ready to make peace on terms that will leave Western Europe as it was before the war. The peril now is that these publics, seeing the issues which they understand settled, as they believe, settled, will be impatient to make peace before the equally vital issues raised by the Eastern situation are likewise settled satisfactorily.

The war began as a military test in the West, and it is the Western field which holds our attention, but the Western issues of the war are in reality settled, the larger issues are disposed of.

The question of Alsace-Lorraine and the Italian Irredenta, together with the question of indemnities for Belgium and France for wanton infliction are all that remain to be determined, and for any debate about the green table the nations controlling the sea and the German colonies have the advantage in power. By contrast, the fate of the East is in the balance and the advantage with the Germans. If his will prevails in Russia and in the Baltic he will remain the great world-power he has become, and we shall be still under arms and in the presence of the same peril that kept the world unrest before July, 1914. We are not of us fighting now for a restitution of a great Empire Germany can only be by fire and sword in years, a dissolution which shall give many peoples racial and national unity, and leave no nation a danger to all peace and an obstacle to all disarmament.

The nation that France is to be destroyed, Belgium to sink in chaos Britain to succumb to German might and are to be left naked to a colossal foe, is unreal nonsense. If Germany had won the Marne it might have happened; the last chance that perished under the walls of Verdun.

QUEBEC JOURNAL'S ESTIMATE OF THE NEW FOOD CONTROLLER

Mr. Thompson, the new Food Controller at Ottawa, is not going to mince matters! His first act shows him to be a man of action. He will not allow his "private interests" to interfere with his mission of food conservation. There will be no fish for one, and meat for the other, in his policy. He is a live Western business man, and will inspire the confidence and backing of all Canadians.

It was such a man that was required in this office. Canada wants a man to do things irrespective of "vested interests," if they are for the benefit of the country at large, and will help to conserve food for our boys in France and their allies.

We are sure Mr. Thompson will meet with success, because in accepting this appointment he made it clear to the government that he "wanted full power and a free hand to reorganize his department and carry out his plans without any outside influence from vested interests, or political favouritism." This is the only way to carry out his stupendous task, and make a success of it.

Unfortunately, and we have often said so before, Mr. Hanna had too many "vested interests" which interfered with his duties, and no doubt, oftentimes, clashed with his good intentions. It was not his fault, but that of an ill-advised Government who invited him to take the position with such obstacles in the way. One thing sure, Mr. Hanna never sought the job. He was too big for it in one sense, and not sufficiently free in another.

Mr. Thompson is going to make the whole of Canada realize that we are at war. This is right! If the Allies have to be fed, and the world is running short of food, every Canadian must make up his or her mind to make a sacrifice. It is the least they can do under the circumstances. It is our main duty now and until the war is over. If Mr. Thompson demonstrates to all that he is not to be interfered with, which is one of the conditions of his accepting the position, he will have the whole of Canada behind him, in compulsory food restrictions, if such is necessary, and no Canadians will be more eager to do their duty in this respect than the citizens of Quebec. — Quebec Telegraph.

Two Gods.

The following article by Chauncey Depew is particularly applicable today in view of the Kaiser's speeches the past few days:

"The God of battles is appealed to daily by the contending hosts," but there are two Gods. The poet Heinrich Heine, in a famous prophecy eighty years ago, said that Germany would resurrect from their graves the stone gods of their ancestors and the hammer of Thor would smash the weakness represented by Christian cathedrals. When the commander of the U-boat which sank the Lusitania and drowned its passengers, when the commander of the U-boat summoned to his deck the survivors of the Belgian Prince, and then submerged hilariously, leaving them in the ocean, both were praised and decorated with the iron cross, and their acts were proclaimed as proofs of God's help; when Belgium suffered unspeakable horrors, when the villages of Northern France were destroyed, their orchards cut down, their men killed, their women outraged and deported into slavery, it was claimed, that all this was done by the help of God and in partnership with Him, that God was again the stone God of the German forests. When the other day the British army captured Jerusalem, and after a lapse of six centuries brought the sacred places under Christian rule; when they sacrificed thousands of lives to win by the bayonet rather than the shell, which would desecrate hallowed temples and tombs, they restored to the world the spot where Christ died for the brotherhood of man. The Christ, whose doctrines uplifting the world for two thousand years have given to us all the blessings which we enjoy, it is that God under whose banner of the Cross we fight, under whom we are united and with whose blessings we will win."

THE ANCIENT WONDERS

ONLY TWO OF THE SEVEN NOW IN EXISTENCE.

The "Wonders" of the Early Ages Were Mostly Architectural, in Which Respect They Differ From Ours of the Present Day, Which Are Most Triumphant Inventions of the Brain of Scientists.

ATTEMPTS have been made to list the "seven wonders" of our present-day world, but without much success. There are, indeed, too many of them—the puzzle being to choose the most important.

The seven wonders of the ancient world were mostly architectural. Our wonders of to-day are inventions.

One might mention the flying machine, the dirigible balloon, the talking machine, the electric light, the moving picture, electric transportation, the telephone. These are seven, to be noted off hand; but there are so many others. One might easily enumerate seventy "wonders."

Six of the original "seven wonders of the world" were contained within territory which at the outbreak of the war was (including Egypt) under the sovereignty of Turkey. The exception was the Colossus of Rhodes, a gigantic statue of bronze that, according to tradition, straddled the harbor of that city with its legs, between which tall-masted vessels were able to pass.

As a matter of fact, it did nothing of the kind. The Colossus stood on the shore at the entrance of the harbor, the above-mentioned city being the principal seaport of the Island of Rhodes, now belonging to Greece.

"Frightfulness" is nothing new in war. Of the civilizations of past ages few structural memorials remain, because of wholesale military vandalism. Chiefly owing to destruction thus caused, there are now in existence only two of the ancient wonders, and these in a damaged condition—namely, the so-called Vocal Memnon and the Pyramids of Egypt. The remaining five were the Temple of Diana at Ephesus, the Hanging Gardens of Babylon, the Pharos at Alexandria, the Mausoleum of Queen Artemisia, and the Rhodes Colossus.

The Vocal Memnon was one of two gigantic statues, each of them nearly seventy feet high and cut out of a single block of reddish sandstone, which the Pharaoh Amemophis II. set up to flank the road approaching a superb temple that he erected on the banks of the Nile. Both were meant to be portraits of himself. In later years (sandstone being friable stuff) one of them developed a considerable crack; but it never occurred to anybody to regard the fracture as possibly connected with a very peculiar phenomenon exhibited by the image.

Every morning soon after sunrise it gave out an audible sound, which to the imaginative resembled a cry. In those days of ignorance anything that was not understood was attributed to the supernatural, and so it is not surprising that the Egyptians should have thought a god was speaking. Indeed, people flocked from all parts of the civilized world to witness the marvel. But the statue (which, with its mate, still exists) is no longer vocal. It ceased to make noises, in fact, after being repaired by Septimus Severus—the truth being that they were due to the splitting apart of the sandstone particles caused by the expanding influences of the rising sun's warmth.

The Pharos—erected by Ptolemy, Philadelphus, 300 years before the birth of Christ, on a long, narrow rock in the harbor of Alexandria, a mile off shore—was a lighthouse. Some early writers state that it was taller than the loftiest of the pyramids, and that great mirrors were used as reflectors to augment the illuminating effect of the bonfire which was kept burning at night on its top; but these details are of doubtful authenticity. The tower bore the inscription: "King Ptolemy to the gods, the saviors, for the benefit of sailors." Its architect, Sostratus, is said to have cut his own name in the stone of the structure, in huge letters, covering it with plaster, in order that it might be preserved for all time.

The Hanging Gardens of Babylon were consecrated by King Nebuchadnezzar for the delight of his royal spouse, Amytis. They were composed on or a series of nine terraces, set of sundried brick, each terrace being uplifted fifty feet above the one next beneath, so that the total height of the structure was 250 feet. Situated as it was in the midst of a perfectly flat plain, such an elevation must have lent it great impressiveness to the eye. Vast in size, it was erected by the forced labor of tens of thousands of slaves, great numbers of whom were captive Jews from Palestine.

This remarkable structure was vertical on one side, the other three sides being formed in five great steps. Up these a winding stair led to the top, on which stood the queen's pleasure palace. The terraces were overlaid with earth of a depth sufficient to support the growth of the largest trees, and the gardens thus created were adorned with all the most beautiful flowering plants of the country or obtainable from afar. Viewed from a distance, the effect was "as if a forest had leaped into the air." Each terrace offered a landscape wholly different from the others. Fountains flowed; streams coursed through artificial meadows, and fawns and other tame animals lent additional attractiveness to the scenery.

The temple of Diana at Ephesus in Asia Minor, was the shrine of a goddess who although a virgin, was supposed, according to her local cult, to have special superintendence over the reproduction of the human species. Ceremonies connected with the worship of her are said to have degenerated into orgies worse than scandalous. Not for this reason at all, but because he was anxious to make his name "immortal," as he himself confessed, a megalomaniac crank (as we should call him in these days), one Erathosthenes, set fire to the temple, and it was burned to the ground.

This happened on the night when Alexander the Great was born. When he grew up, and while in his early twenties had become a famous conqueror, he offered to rebuild the temple; but the Ephesians declined. They preferred to rebuild it for themselves, and this they did, erecting on its site a much more magnificent temple than the original one. This latter edifice in fact was the structure which gained fame as one of the "seven wonders."

In its reconstructed form, it was 425 feet in length and 220 feet in width, the columns of its superb porticoes being sixty feet high—each one of them, it is said, contributed by a then-reigning prince. The main altar was the work of Praxiteles, the most celebrated sculptor of his time. The building was of white marble, with much and elaborate decoration in gold. It contained statues and other works of art of inestimable value. Nero despoiled it of the most precious of its art treasures; but it remained for the Goths (ancestors of the Germans of to-day) to destroy the edifice itself, after the Roman empire had fallen.

The "wonder" of which, among the seven, we of to-day know least, was the mausoleum—a magnificent tomb erected in honor of Mausolus, king of Caria, by his widow. How superb it must have been may be judged from the fact that since that time all exceptionally pretentious houses for the dead are called "mausoleums." The afflicted queen did not long survive her husband; she died of sorrow in the year 350 B. C.

The pyramids of Egypt, which, together with the Vocal Memnon, represent to-day the only ones of the "seven wonders" that have been preserved, are, as everybody knows, the mighty tombs of ancient Pharaohs. They are not less a marvel now than they were thirty centuries ago, though sadly marred and some of them partly destroyed. The so-called Great Pyramid of Cheops is 450 feet high; but originally it was thirty feet higher, ascending to a point. The weathering of ages has worn off the top of it, as well as the masonry which formerly made sides smoothly slanting, whereas at present they form a series of steps.

The Colossus of Rhodes, already mentioned, was a gigantic bronze image of the sun god, Apollo. Its height was 105 feet—about the same as that of the Statue of Liberty in New York harbor. It was erected about 200 B. C., and sixty years later was overthrown by an earthquake. There its fragments lay until, a long time afterwards, they were bought for junk by a Jewish trader and carried away on the backs of camels.

It is said that few men had arms long enough to embrace the thumb of the Colossus. Through its body a spiral stair led up into its head, from which the coast of Syria and ships voyaging to Egypt could be discerned. But the notion that it bestrode the width of the harbor of Rhodes with its legs is purely and simply a legend.

Keep Your House Sweet.

An excellent deodorizer is a little pan of cloves which have been sprinkled with a few drops of spirits of lavender. Put a few bits of charcoal into the bottom of the pan. If charcoal is not convenient some bits of orange peel will do, as they soon turn into charcoal. Sprinkle the cloves liberally on these, and when wanted to perfume the house place on the stove until they begin to smoke. The fumes soon will penetrate the house, and the odor is much like that of the carnation. It will effectively cover the odors of fish, cabbage, turnips and the like.

Thought Something Missing.

Marion's grandfather was Scotch and a musician. Consequently he was delighted to entertain a gifted professional countryman, who was to appear at a theater. After dinner, when the guest had donned his kilts and was waiting for the car to take him to the theater, the children were admitted to the living room. Marion eyed the celebrity in wonder and awe, finally walking up to him, and as she touched his bare knee in amazement inquired, "Where your pants?"

The man who never forgets anything would be all right if he forgot to boast of it occasionally.

SHE WAS ALARMED ABOUT SON, SHE SAYS

Wm. Morrow Was In Bad Health All Summer—Tanlac Overcomes Troubles

"I have never been a hand to recommend a medicine, but I will have to make an exception of Tanlac, because it has accomplished so much for my son," said Mrs. Caroline Morrow, of 13 Jillson Avenue, Toronto.

"For several years," she continued, "William has been subject to frequent attacks of rheumatism, and during the past summer he suffered a great deal. He complained of his joints aching and hurting, and his knees and feet, especially, would swell and pain terribly. Sometimes his knees hurt so he could hardly bear for the linments we were using to be applied. Along with the rheumatism, he seemed to be in general bad health. He complained of being tired and never seemed to feel right. Nothing seemed to give him more than a little temporary relief, and I was beginning to feel alarmed at the way the rheumatism was affecting him.

"I never felt much interest in what I read about Tanlac, but the boy was suffering a great deal, and thinking it might help him I got him to try it. He has taken only two bottles so far, but I can see a wonderful change in him already. Tanlac has relieved him of rheumatism entirely. He never complains now at all, and all the swelling has disappeared from his knees, feet, and ankles completely. He has a fine appetite, eats heartily and never complains of that tired, drowsy feeling any more. In fact, he's like a different person, and I am so well pleased with Tanlac that I am recommending it to everyone as a good, honest medicine."

Tanlac is sold in Peterborough by W. B. Warne Drug Co., Ltd.; in Havelock by A. C. Denike; in Lakefield by Tanner Drug Co., Ltd.

SPEED OF THE GREYHOUND.

The Swiftest of All Four-footed Creatures.

Few people realize of what remarkable speed dogs are capable. Some statistics in regard to this have been gathered by M. Dusolier, a French scientist. After pointing out the marvelous endurance shown by little fox terriers who followed their masters patiently for hours while they were riding on bicycles or in carriages he says that even greater endurance is shown by certain wild animals that are akin to dogs. Thus the wolf can run between fifty and sixty miles in one night, and an Arctic fox can do quite as well, if not better.

Eskimo and Siberian dogs can travel 45 miles on the ice in five hours, and there is a case on record in which a team of Eskimo dogs traveled six and one-half miles in 28 minutes.

According to M. Dusolier, the speed of the shepherd dogs and those used on hunting ranges is from 10 to 15 yards a second. English setters and pointers run at the rate of 18 to 19 miles an hour, and they can maintain this speed for at least two hours.

Foxhounds are extraordinarily swift, as is proved by the fact that a dog of this breed once beat a thoroughbred horse, covering four miles in six and a half minutes, which was at the rate of nearly 18 yards a second.

Greyhounds are the swiftest of all four-footed creatures, and their speed is equal to that of carrier pigeons. English greyhounds, which are used for coursing, are able to cover at full gallop a space between 18 and 20 yards every second.

Start Tomorrow and Keep It Up Every Morning

Get in the habit of drinking a glass of hot water before breakfast.

We're not here long, so let's make our stay agreeable. Let us live well, eat well, digest well, work well, sleep well, and look well. What a glorious condition to attain, and yet, how very easy it is if one will only adopt the morning inside bath.

Folks who are accustomed to feel dull and heavy when they arise, splitting headache, stuffy from a cold, foul tongue, nasty breath, acid stomach, can, instead, feel as fresh as a daisy by opening the sluices of the system each morning and flushing out the whole of the internal poisonous stagnant matter.

Everyone, whether ailing, sick, or well, should, each morning, before breakfast, drink a glass of real hot water with a teaspoonful of limestone phosphate in it to wash from the stomach, liver and bowels the previous day's indigestible waste, sour bile, and poisonous toxins. The action of hot water and limestone phosphate on an empty stomach is wonderfully invigorating. It cleans out all the sour fermentations, gases, waste and acidity, and gives one a splendid appetite for breakfast.

The millions of people who are bothered with constipation, bilious spells, stomach trouble; others who have sallow skins, blood disorders and sickly complexions are urged to get a quarter pound of limestone phosphate from the drug store. This will cost very little, but is sufficient to make anyone a pronounced crank on the subject of inside bathing before breakfast.

LINK WITH CRIPPEN CASE.

Owner of Old Curio Shop Murdered by Thieves.

There is a curious link between the famous Crippen case and a recent tragedy at Paddington, Eng.

The victim was a Mr. Lewis Henry Salmon, who was found dead at the lock-up shop in Bishop's road, Paddington, where he carries on business as an antique furniture dealer.

It was from Mr. Salmon that Crippen bought the sack in which he wrapped part of his wife's body, and it is also believed that from his store was obtained the boy's suit in which Miss Le Neve was disguised when she fled with Crippen to Montreal.

There seems no doubt that robbery was the motive of the crime; but, though murder does not seem to have been intended, Mr. Salmon was left tied and gagged in such a brutal way that he died very shortly from suffocation.

Apparently the last seen of Mr. Salmon by anyone in the neighborhood was by Councilor Samuel Goldhill, who keeps a tobacconist's next door. "He went out just before four on the day of the crime, to keep an appointment, and asked me to keep an eye on his shop," Councillor Goldhill told a London Daily Chronicle representative. "During his absence a captain in the army inquired for him, and when Mr. Salmon came back about ten to five I saw them enter the shop together."

There is no evidence of Mr. Salmon having been seen by anyone after that time until the crime was discovered by two Royal Flying Corps men at 6.45, but during the week-end the police have been making inquiries about two men in civilian clothes and two Australian soldiers, who are said by various people to have been noticed about the shop. The civilians are both described as of Jewish appearance, one aged about 60 and the other about 30. The former was stated to be about 5 ft. 8 in. in height, of stout build, with a brown overcoat, grey Trilby hat, and black boots.

First-class Mechanics Irvine and Hayes, who are staying at a billet in the neighborhood whiel undergoing instruction in aerial bombing, told a Daily Chronicle representative that they entered the shop to make a purchase, but found it in darkness, and received no answer to their knocks and calls. Noticing a light from a small window in a partition which separates the shop from the office, they looked through, and saw Mr. Salmon's body lying face upwards on the floor.

The soldiers quickly gave the alarm, and Supt. Short, Chief Inspector McMillan, Divisional Inspector Savage, and other officers were soon on the scene. Mr. Salmon was dead, but it was apparent from the fact that the body was still warm that the crime had not been committed long before. It was found that he had been tied up with bootlaces seemingly taken from a pair of boots lying in the shop, while a piece of linen, which may have been part of a handkerchief, had been used for the gag.

The laces were cutting right into the flesh of the wrists, and so roughly was the gagging done that the lips and mouth were badly lacerated.

There had evidently been a struggle, for the only gas-jet in the shop was smashed, a chair had been overturned, and clothing from the stock was strewn over the floor. According to the statement of a cab attendant engaged outside the resturant next door, the light in the shop disappeared soon after the two men described above entered the shop.

Mr. Salmon was known by his friends habitually to carry about with him Treasury notes to the value of £20 to £50, for he was liable to be called away to sales at short notice, and as these and a gold watch and gold and platinum chain are missing there would seem no doubt that robbery was the motive. His tie-pin, sleeve-links, and rings, all of value, were left, and as apart from a desk in the office nothing in the premises had been touched, it is obvious the assault and robbery was an affair of minutes only.

The assailants must have known they were liable to be disturbed any moment, for the spot was crowded with people at the time, and at least a dozen taxis were standing outside while their drivers were in the restaurant.

Wonderful Surgery.

To make the artificial eye practically indistinguishable is the aim of a British army surgeon who is experimenting with a ball made of cartilage as a substitute for a metal or glass one. A sphere of such construction when put in place establishes connections with blood vessels and the surrounding tissues. When thus fixed in the cavity it is supposed to be capable of movement corresponding to that of a normal eye, and furthermore fills the space so that there is no depression, as is invariably the case when a shell is used. Although time must yet prove the practicability of the scheme, there is reason to expect that the war has brought forth another triumph in plastic surgery.—From the Popular Mechanics Magazine.

Sharing Responsibility.

In China every member of a family is responsible for order in that family and every inhabitant of a city is jointly responsible with every other citizen for its tranquility. If a younger son in a family should commit a crime, the older son is likely to be taken into custody for the offense, and perhaps punished.

SITUATION IS VAGUE

Little Fresh Information on Strike Movement in Germany is Coming Through—Newspapers Fail To Arrive

LEADERS ARRESTED

(Canadian Press Despatch.)

LONDON, Feb. 1.—Little fresh information on the strike movement in Germany had come through early today. None of the Berlin newspapers of Wednesday's date have arrived in Amsterdam, and several of them are not printing owing to the strike among their employees. The actual situation Thursday is extremely vague. The scarcity of news induces some correspondents in Holland to assume that the situation has grown worse, but they warn against attaching importance to the strike movement as far as the army is concerned. Newspaper opinion in London is conflicting. The Berne correspondent of the Daily Mail deprecates a too ready assumption that the strike will have serious effects in Germany.

(Canadian Press Despatch.)

LONDON, Feb. 1. — Latest telegrams received in Copenhagen from Berlin report the situation as unchanged. The strike has not been extended. The Berliner Tageblatt reports the police seized the Trade Union Building in Berlin and arrested Deputy Koersten and other leaders.

FUTURE USE OF WAR HUTS.

London, Eng. — The British Young Men's Christian Association has decided that its huts in France will be converted after the war into hostels for visitors to the battlefields, chiefly relatives anxious to visit the graves of their fallen kin.

The British authorities anticipate a great pilgrimage of British people to France and Belgium immediately after the war, and as far as possible steps will be taken to facilitate the natural eagerness of those at home to visit the scenes where their relatives have fallen. But with a large part of France and Belgium in ruins, particularly those districts in which lie the graveyards, there will be little accommodation for visitors. So the proposes to use its hundreds of huts as Young Men's Christian Association temporary hostels.

WAS HE REALLY STUPID?

A young foreigner was being tried in court, and the questioning by the lawyers on the opposite side began.

"Now, Laszky, what do you do?"

"Ven," asked Laszky.

"When you work, of course," said the lawyer.

"Vy, work——"

"I know," said the lawyer, "but what at?"

"At a bench."

"Oh!" groaned the lawyer. "Where do you work at a bench?"

"In a factory."

"What kind of a factory?"

"Brick."

"You make bricks?"

"No, de factory is made uv bricks."

"Now, Laszky, listen. What do you make in that factory?"

"Eight dollars a week."

"No, no! What does the factory make?"

"I dunno; a lot uv money, I think."

"Now, listen! What kind of goods does the factory produce?"

"Oh," said Laszky, "good goods."

"I know, but what kind of good goods?"

"The best."

"The best of what?"

"The best there is."

"Of what?"

"Of dose goods."

"Your honor," said the lawyer, "I give up."—Current Opinion.

Two Men Sentenced To One Year In Central Prison This Morning

Edgar Thomas and David Hardie were each sentenced to one year at the Central Prison Farm, Guelph, by Magistrate Dumble this morning.

Thomas pleaded guilty to having stolen goods valued at $120.05 from J. J. Turner & Sons, and Hardie admitted having received them. The articles taken included five rolls of bunting, three cones of thread, two rolls of tape, and two spools of thread.

Thomas was employed at the Turner factory until 24th January, when the series of thefts was first discovered, and Hardie, an ex-employee of the same company, carried on a business similar to Turners' in a shop on Water Street.

In passing sentence upon the two men, Magistrate Dumble stated that the thefts were peculiarly contemptible. Edgar Thomas has lived at the corner of Hunter and Aylmer Streets. When certain articles taken from the factory were found in his possession during the noon hour on Thursday, 24th January, he confessed to having stolen other goods, including those listed above.

Hardie's premises were searched a short time afterwards and Police-Sergeant Kidd uncovered the bundles of bunting under a pile of old coal bags in the cellar.

Both men appear to be over sixty years of age, and have hitherto borne good characters. Mr. J. A. O'Brien represented Hardie, and Mr. G. W. Hatton, Crown Attorney, suggested leniency for the prisoners.

CAPT. WARD GOING TO INDIA AND MESOPOTAMIA

Mr. and Mrs. R. W. Ward, of 467 Downie street, have received a letter from their son, Capt. E. R. G. Ward of the Royal Army Medical Corps, who has been overseas since the early months of the war. This is the first letter received from Capt. Ward since he landed in Salonika on September 8 last. The letter which is dated on board ship, December 11, says:

Dear Father and Mother,— Well here's one of my few letters since landing in Salonika. Have had a fairly good time here and managed to escape dysentry and malaria up till now —spent my last two months here in same unit (No. 6 Convalescent Depot) as Captain J. Stokes Stewart, one of the Queen's boys, who came over with me. I met him the first Sunday after arriving in Salonika. This is where Harry Jarman, son of the magistrate at Bancroft, was killed by a shell, up at the trenches from here. I have been in base area all the time here and am quite fit, so fat in fact that I can hardly see out of my eyes. However am now off again on a Cook's tour—bound further east so rumour goes. Expect to visit India and Mesopotamia before returning to England next summer.

Capt. Stewart is putting in for leave to Canada now and expects to be home (Orillia) in February, he has been east since September 15.

I have had no letters from home since coming east and often wonder what is going on in Canada. What about conscription; how is it affecting the ... ruiting, etc.?

Well, now, these letters will soon go ashore, so will have to be quick about this. You might tell Davis' folks and people in the west that I am O. K. and if I can get settled long enough in one place I shall try and get some letters going again. This will likely be late for Christmas. However, I'll send it along. Best wishes to everybody for a merry Christmas, etc. I hope you haven't sent any parcels as if I receive them at all it will be next summer possibly.

Hope father and mother are well.

Music & Drama

GALLI-CURCI'S WONDERFUL VOICE.

The greatest coloratura soprano of the present and the preceding generation, surpassing even Patti, Melba, and Sembrich, according to the New York Times, Mme. Amelita Galli-Curci won an ovation lasting twenty minutes at the opening of the second act of Meyerbeer's opera "Dinorah," with which the Chicago Opera Association began a series of performances at the Lexington Theatre in New York this week.

Galli-Curci, trilling like a bird at the Lexington last night, set 4,000 New Yorkers on their feet in response with an ovation this town has not seen the like of in a good many years, an ovation as fairly and honestly won as it was frankly given.

The voice that this shouting audience heard for the first time is one of those voices that "floats," and one that in "floating on the breath" seems to exist as a thing apart from its physical means, giving the listener the charm of constantly varied illusion and occasional miracle. At the end of its principal demonstration it wasn't a woman's voice, but a bird's swelling throat, whether the canary in his cage singing a lo freedom, or the lark that sings at heaven's gate and leaves the world hushed, still listening for more. In the limelight of the "Shadow Song" it was bottled moonshine. An extraordinary feat it was to repeat the air before the dropped curtain, when the applause would not let the opera go on. This had none of the make-believe of a girl playing with her shadow; it showed instead how real was the skill behind such singing, and how truly, unfailingly she could do it in sober earnest twice over.

"Dinorah" was sung in Italian. It is the story of a Breton maiden, a goat tender, who goes mad at the fancied loss of her lover, and wanders about singing a famous "Shadow Song" and other ditties concerning him, until the youth rescues her from drowning, her reason returns, and they live happily ever after.

Galli-Curci was born in Milan, and is only 28 years old. The reproductions of her voice on American talking machine records, at the present rate of demand, are due to pass the million mark next June.

WITH OTHER COUNCILS

At a conference between Woodstock coal dealers and a special fuel committee of the city council, the former agreed to sell coal to people resident outside the city only when an order was produced signed by City Treasurer Down, who was appointed Fuel Controller for this purpose. About fifty farmers who applied to the newly-appointed official were allowed to purchase five hundred pounds of coal each.

Ask 10 Per Cent. Raise.

Members of the Stratford police force are asking for a ten per cent. increase in salaries. The present rates per month are $65 for the first-year men, $75 for the second, third and fourth-year men, and after that $80.

London Concludes Good Deal.

Announcement was made by Chairman Philip Pocock, of the Public Utilities Commission, which was authorized to conduct a municipal coal yard some time since, that he has succeeded in purchasing 10,000 tons of anthracite coal for almost immediate delivery in London.

Oxford Reduces Objective.

Oxford County, exclusive of the city of Woodstock and the town of Ingersoll, will be asked to raise $55,000 for the Patriotic Fund this year, instead of $66,000, the amount contributed last year.

Hydro Pumping Only at Night.

The Brantford waterworks has been notified that only from 9:30 p.m. to 7:30 a.m. can hydro electric power be used at the pumping station steam power being utilized for the remainder of the time.

Brantford Buys Wood.

Brantford will secure 200 cords of stove wood from the town of Walsh, Norfolk County. The wood will be laid down at the corporation yards at a price much lower than any yet purchased. Four hundred cords of wood, ready cut, were delivered from the civic yards to private consumers recently.

MAKE YOUR COAL BURN MUCH LONGER

The following is from a pamphlet on "Saving Fuel in Heating a House," issued by the United States Bureau of Mines:

Keep the fuel bed thick, so that it will not burn through in spots and admit a large excess of cold air. If there is a bright bed of coals over the entire grate, as there should be, before a heavy charge is fired, some of the burning coal should be pushed to one side or end of the grate—the part nearest the opening where the gases leave the firepot—and the bed of live fire made thicker there. Then fire the fresh charge so as to make the bed approximately uniform in thickness and yet have a visible bright spot of live coal to ignite the combustible gases coming off the freshly fired fuel.

If the fire is low, take care not to put it out by throwing on too much fresh coal. Fire lightly and allow each firing to become ignited before fresh coal is thrown on. Use small sizes of coal if they are available.

When preparing the fire to last over night or for a similar length of time, push some the burning coal aside, and fire the fresh charges so as to leave a bright spot visible to ignite the distilled gases. The drafts should then be allowed to stand open for a short time, possibly half an hour before they are closed for the night, so that a part of the volatile matter of gases in the coal can be driven off before the air supply is greatly reduced.

in general negotiations, a step forward?

MERE SCRAPS OF PAPER.

"Inasmuch as the other warring countries refused to join in general peace negotiations, their formulas have no real value and are mere scraps of paper," replied Trotsky. "They may be reduced practically to the fact that their attitude gives the German imperialists carte blanche to satisfy their appetites at Russia's expense and then seek a compromise agreement with their other enemies.

"Mr. Lloyd George, in one of his recent speeches, practically expressed this thought by a threat against Russia.

"Therefore, we regard the German demands given us at Brest Litovsk as coming directly from Germany, but silently approved by the governments of the Entente."

"What effect would the entrance of the Entente to the negotiations at the present moment have," I asked.

"If the Allies should now announce their willingness to join in negotiations for the purpose of establishing a democratic peace, it would immediately call out a colossal response from Austria and Germany," Trotsky replied, continuing, "we are conducting our negotiations so as to enable the Entente to join at any moment."

A SEPARATE PEACE.

I then asked:

"Will Russia conclude an annexationist, imperialistic peace should the Allies fail to join in the negotiations, the European workers not respond to Russia's call for help, and the Central Empires seek to force their imperialistic demands?"

The Foreign Minister hotly replied:

"In that case we will act in accordance with the interests of revolutionary Russia."

He refused to elucidate his answer. Thereupon I asked:

"How will the attitude of the Allies regarding the latest Russian, actions against Roumania influence your policy?"

"The attitude of the Allied ambassadors at Petrograd, is not able to influence the situation," he replied, "as we are unconcerned because, with Roumania shooting up our troops and seizing our provinces, we and she are virtually in a state of war."

Despite his repeated refusal to see newspaper men since his return from Brest Litovsky, I succeeded in reaching the Foreign Minister after the passage of numerous armed guards. His office is located in a remote corner of the top floor of the gloomy, huge, yellowish, Smolyn Institute.

Trotsky was manifestly overworked and extremely nervous. He consented to the interview only after being assured of the interest of the American people in the fate of the Russian revolution and the liberty of the Russian people.

Throughout the interview he maintained his usual tone of revolutionary pride and his fond hope that the democracies and peoples of the world ultimately will come to the aid of Russia in her desperate struggle to achieve a democratic peace and reach the road of powerful development.

Burn Ashes And Save Coal

Old Scheme Is Resurrected

There have been several requests of late for the proportions comprising the mixture, and those given are probably the same as were used in Ontario a few years ago when there was a fuel famine. People scoff at the ash-fuel idea, but those who tried it declare they found considerable reduction in their coal bills.

By moistening coal ashes with a solution of oxalic acid, rock salt and water, the Board of Education of New York is heating all the public buildings with fires made from ashes and saving $50,000 a year by it according to a report made by Patrick Janes, superintendent of school supplies. Some coal, but very little, is used, and the janitors are engaged in a contest to see which can use the least coal and most ashes.

Instead of putting waste coal and ashes in the ash cans, both are now used as far as possible. The janitors are instructed to mix the solution as follows: Hot water must be used in dissolving the acid and rock salt. To every gallon of water necessary add two ounces of oxalic acid and one pound of rock salt. This is mixed to form the ashes into a thick paste.

The ashes may be treated and shoveled back into the furnace. Where pea coal is used it can be mixed with the ashes in proportion of two parts of ashes to one of coal. The ashes may be re-used by moistening again. The committee estimates that the saving should not be less than twenty-five per cent. and may be as high as 75 per cent.

The committee had made experiments in school No. 21, Manhattan. Of 300 reports sent in, more than 70 per cent. show a saving in coal.

MONTGOMERY KNOWN IN SOUTH HAMPTON

Chief Short has received word from the Chief of Police at Southampton concerning Montgomery, who passed the bogus cheques in Lindsay a few days ago.

It appears that he operated in that town some time ago, but the authorities did not prosecute him.

It is said here that Montgomery has gone to Chicago. In a letter belonging to Montgomery, the authorities learned that a friend of his in Kingston had written him, asking him to come to the Limestone City, where he could secure a position as soon as navigation opened.

CARLOADS OF CANADIAN WHEAT

WINNIPEG, Feb. 1.—There is keen competition among the grain shippers along the line of the Grand Trunk Pacific in Western Canada for the honour of handling the record single carload of wheat. This distinction was claimed a few days ago for Mr. R. A. Aykroyd, who shipped a carload of No. 1 Northern from his farm a few miles north of Wainwright, Alberta, which brought $3,571 after allowing for the deduction of freight charges.

This record did not stand long, another shipper having a carload which brought $3,903, and even this figure has now been surpassed.

Canadian Government car No. 26923, from Irma, Alberta, on the G.T.P. line, carried 2,063 bushels of No. 2 wheat, amounting in value to $4,195—a truly remarkable figure.

PUNISHMENT FACED GERMANS IF THEY MADE ALLIED MUNITIONS

Such is Walter Uhde's Testimony in New York Federal Court —Probing Bomb Plots

GERMAN WORKMEN WARNED

NEW YORK, Feb. 1. — German workmen in this country were warned they would be punished by the Imperial German Government if they did any work for firms making munitions for the Allies, was the statement in Federeal Court here by Walter Uhde. Uhde is one of the thirteen Germans who are on trial on charges of having conspired to bomb ships.

Uhde declared he heard the warning at the Brooklyn Labour Lyceum during meetings there by a German society. He said he met Franz Von Rintelin, chief of the Germans, now being tried, and the other defendants at that time. Explaining his connection with the alleged bomb plots, he declared he did not know the nature of the packages he was asked to place aboard steamships, but took them when asked, because he had been befriended by Herman Schimmel, one of the defendants, who is now a fugutive.

Voice of The People

Correspondence under this heading containing or involving attacks on individuals, or violent or extreme statements, must, to secure insertion, be signed with the writer's real name, the owner of which thus assumes the responsibility.

To the Editor of The Examiner:

Dear Sir,—I see in the columns of both the Review and the Examiner of the 24th, that Mr. Burnham, the member for West Peterborough, has made another effort in regards the exemption of farmers' sons, but this time he is asking some one else to do the work which he undertook to do, but it seems that he has lost faith in himself, and now has appealed to the County Council to go to Ottawa and speak on behalf of the exemption from military service of farmers.

Why should Mr. Burnham have to do this if Mr. Borden would fulfill his promises of his previous campaign?

In a former issue of the Review we see where Mr. Burnham stated that if he was a farmer's son all he would do would be to go to Mr. Knox and the Warden, and lay his complaints to them and let them deal with the matter, but now Mr. Burnham sees that his misrepresented scheme was no good and now urges the County Council to go to Ottawa at the expense of the County, to look after the interests of the country, which the people of West Peterborough put their trust in Mr. Burnham to do for them. But Mr. Burnham may bear the expense of the deputation on account of self interest, but we hardly think so, although we have always found it Mr. Burnham's scheme to get some other person to press things through, and he, Mr. Burnham, to take credit for the same.

Now we see in another article in the Review where Mr. Burnham states that it might be to the interests of your readers to hear of a little incident, told Mr. Burnham, by Mr. Knox, that a farmer's son ordered to report at Kingston, was given Mr. Knox's recommendation for exemption to take with him when he appeared before Mr. Cooke, the Military representative, and registrar at Kingston, and showed him Mr. Knox's recommendation. The registrar asked what the farmer's son was doing there, and told him that the recommendation of Mr. Knox showed that he ought to be home on the farm. Now if this is the case, why does Mr. Burnham ask the County Council to go to Ottawa on a fool's errand, or was there just one farmer's son who appealed to Mr. Burnham's appointed board, Mr. Knox and the Warden, or is it to pull a little money out of the ratepayers' pockets of the County, to give the members of the Council a good time and make a big man of himself. Surely it is plain enough now to the electors of West Peterborough that Mr. Burnham's misrepresented scheme was nothing but a farce, and that he has proven it no good, or he would not have taken such steps as he has.

We think it a great pity that Mr. Burnham had not proven himself to be of such little use to the people of the country, before the election, so that the ratepayers of West Peterborough could have chosen some one else who could look after the interests of their riding and the country.

Yours truly,

FARMER.

PREMIER ORDERS ENQUIRY

Scandal in Regard to Militia Department Where Women Are Employed.

OTTAWA, Ont., Jan. 31. — For some weeks tongues have been wagging vigorously in Ottawa over an alleged scandal in one of the militia departments where six hundred girls are employed. The names of certain officials have been connected with the rumours, which have assumed such a grave character that an investigation by the Dominion police has been ordered by the Prime Minister.

It was demanded by a delegation of prominent Ottawa women who also asked that matrons be provided in the branch in question. The officials involved vigorously deny the alleged scandal and have also asked for full investigation.

STAY IN SECOND CLASS

Youths As They Become 20 Not to Be Made Draft Eligibles.

OTTAWA, Jan. 21.—As the operation of the Military Service Act is further proceeded with many young men who were under 20 years of age when the first proclamation was issued, but who have since attained that age, will be affected by subsequent calls. There is no confirmation from the Military Service Council of a Winnipeg report that an amendment is contemplated by which youths, as they become 20, will be eligible for draft in the first class, thus adding, it is estimated, 60,000 a year to the eligibles for service. A young man who has reached his twentieth year since the initial call is not affected, even though the process of dealing with the first class is not completed. When the second is summoned, however, he must respond.

CANNOT BLAME FREIGHT RATES FOR HIGH PRICES

Railways Are Actually Taking a Smaller Portion of Income of Farmers, Manufacturers and Consumers Than Ever Before

Recently a friendly discussion took place in the observation car in one of the Canadian Railways in regard to the present high cost of living. A produce merchant present on being asked what caused the alarmingly big increase in the price of various articles in everyday use by the average family gave various reasons such as the higher cost of production due to the enhanced price of labour of all kinds and turning to a man connected with one of our railroads said:

"Then, as you know, Mr. ——, rates of freight have been increased, which naturally has resulted in an advance in price."

"Well, replied the railway man "that, I find, is a fairly general idea held by a large number of people, including business men like yourself."

"Not long ago," he continued, "a similar remark was made by one of our prominent business men, except that he emphasised more than you do the statement that higher freight rates were a large contributing factor to the increasing cost of living. More out of curiosity than anything else, I decided to make a little study of the matter, and confirmed what had all along been my understanding; that the rate of freight is an exceedingly small part of the cost of various articles of common household use, and further, that any increase which the railways have been able to secure, can hardly be noticed in the increased prices of the different articles of universal usage."

"Take, for instance," he said, "a pair of men's shoes. These are shipped in large quantities from Montreal which is a manufacturing point for this particular line—to Toronto. The grade of shoes which sold for $4.00 per pair in 1914 now sells for $6.50 or $7.00, an increase of 62 per cent in price. The rate of freight has been increased during the same period only 2 cents per 100 lbs., which is equivalent to only one hundreth part of one cent per pair. The increase in the retail price of one pair of shoes, viz., $2.50, would pay the total freight from Montreal to Toronto on 257 pairs of shoes.

"Another example—the retail price on a pound of bacon has increased during the past three years from 30c to 42c or 75 per cent.

During the same period the rate of freight from Toronto to Montreal has only increased 1c per 100 pounds, or one hundredth part of one per cent per pound."

"Freight rates," he continued, "are lower, proportionately, to-day than they have ever been, if a proper basis of ganging rates is adopted. Railway transportation must of necessity bear a direct relationship to the value of all products. Transportation of freight and passengers, which is all the railways have to sell, is produced in much the same manner as the articles you gentlemen market—and the cost of production varies as in all other industries. For a very long time the costs have shown an upward trend until to-day most of the roads are faced by staggering increases in expenses. Like conditions are general in all lines of endeavour with this very important distinction. You have been able to raise your prices to meet those changed conditions; we have not. The result is that freight rates proportionate to the cost of other products are on a lower level than ever before."

The foregoing conversation was called to the attention of the writer, and realizing that our present railroad situations in all its ramifications is one of great importance to the community some further study of this phase of the interesting subject has been made.

The proportion that the rate of freight bears to the retail price of various commodities of every day use in 1914 and at the present time is indicated by the following:

Proportion that rate of freight bears to total retail price:

	In 1914	In 1917
Bacon, per lb.	1/120	1/235
Sugar, per lb.	1/30	1/43
Butter, per lb.	1/128	1/170
Canned Corn, per lb.	1/81	1/51
Fresh pork, per lb.	1/72	1/127
Men's Shoes, per pair.	1/444	1/650
Men's clothes per suit	1/9000	1/12300
Rubbers per pair	1/150	1/214
Men's woolen under-wear, per suit	1/800	1/1100

Following is the increase retail price at Montreal, 1917, over 1914, and increase of freight charges from representative points in 1917 over 1914:

1 brl. sugar	$10.50	6c
100 lbs. tea	10.00	10
1 drum cheese	9.00	1c
1 tub butter	6.00	1
1 c/s canned tomatoes (2 doz.)	2.04	1
50 prs. men's shoes	125.00	2½
50 suits men ready-to-wear clothes	375.00	4
1 c/s rubber	50.00	3½
1 brl. wheat flour	5.15	3
1 crt. eggs (30 doz)	6.90	1
1 cook stove (steel)	14.00	4

These figures show that freight rate increases cannot be blamed for creating the burden of the high cost of living or even contributing thereto. Indeed you have only to contrast the extraordinary increases in prices in railroad business, to appreciate the serious restrictions that the railroads are operating under in an effort to meet the constant demands for increased wages, increased fuel prices and materials amounting to many millions of dollars.

The existing disparity between the prices of general products and freight rates, actually means that any given unit in the industrial or agricultural list will buy more transportation to-day than it would a few years ago. Recent authoritative statistics show that in 1910 a bushel of corn on the farm would buy sixty three ton miles of freight transportation, at the average rate for all freight. To-day it will buy more than 126 ton miles, or twice as much. In 1910 a bushel of wheat on the farm would buy 117 ton miles of freight transportation and now the same quantity of the same product will buy 207 ton miles.

The railroads are obviously taking relatively a very much smaller proportion of the income of farmers, manufacturers and other classes of the community than before, while they are obliged to pay very much higher prices for everything they use as compared with pre-war times. This condition is tending to cripple the transportation industry and if continued, will prevent the railroads giving the continuous and efficient rail transportation which the country demands. There is urgent need of a wider recognition of the seriousness of the situation.

CHICAGO OPERA OUT $50,000.

But Company Still Has Six Weeks —Guarantors Satisfied.

CHICAGO, Jan. 31.—The deficit of the Chicago opera this season will be in excess of $50,000, which was the total loss of te 1916-17 season. But the guarantors are apparently satisfied. The Campanini organisation still has six more weeks in which it will appear in New York and Boston, but it is not expected that this will reduce the deficit.

Max Pam, one of the guaranors, and in close touch with the opera office, to-day confirmed the fact of a deficit.

"The season is not yet closed," he said. "Until Mr. Campanini returns with his assembly we cannot knew definitely the total."

Mr. Pam declared that the opera guarantors are willing to pay any deficit.

NEW BRITISH CREDIT.

Custom Receipts Higher

The customs receipts for January, 1918, are considerably higher than the same month last year: January, 1918, $61,692; January, 1917, $59,188.43.

IN A BARBER SHOP

Business has been very sluggish in Tisso's Tonsorial Parlour. One man had come in for a haircut, it's true, but when he took off his hat before the mirror and realied with a start that he had forgotten he was absolutely bald, he went right out again.

So Angelo Comeoffo, head barber, perked up a bit when Sluiceway Cornbred walked in and sat down in Comeoffo's chair.

"Haircut and shave," he directed. "Cut from the left to the right and please take hold of my chin instead of my nose to steady yourself."

Twenty minutes later Sluiceway Cornbred was haircutted and shaved "Skittleberry oil shampoo, sir?" said Comeoffo. "The odor is guaranteed for ten days, sir."

"Sure, slap 'er on" replied Cornbred.

And Comeoffo slapped 'er on and then said "Boston singe, sir? Or a goldwater rub?"

"Both, said Cornbred impartially And Comeoffo gave him both with a contented smile, for Tisso's was run on a percentage basis. And after that he suggested "Eel's foot tonic prevents the hair from falling either way, sir."

"Yeh?" said Sluiceway Cornbred.

"Yeh," said the barber.

"Crowd some on," said Cornbred And Comeoffo crowded some on, and after that he had a peanut butter massage, an asparagus steam, an electric ticle, an onionseed oil nose rub and a barley sugar eyebrow treatment and the bill, which was $11.47 including the war tax.

"Oh, don't bother about that," said Cornbred, with a yackish smile "I'm Mr. Tisso's son-in-law and I've got this written order from him entitling me to anything in the shop Good-bye. I'd like to give you a little something for yourself but I haven't anything less than a dime."

Angelo Comeoffo put his tongue between his teeth and bit it with all his might and then in rapid succession drank two mugfuls of lather, a quart of bay rum and all that was left of the skittleberry oil shampoo.

BRAZIL BUILDING AN ARMY

Plans to Mobilize Several Hundred Thousand Men for Home Defense.

RIO JANEIRO—Plans for the mobilization of an amy of defense to be composed of seveal hundred thousand men are being put into execution with almost feverish haste, but no announcement has been made that Brazil wil send troops to Europe. It is generally believed that this fighting force is to remain in Brabil.

When Brazil declared a state of war to exist with the German Empire the Brazilian Army was composed of 18,000 men, with officers enough for 30,000. Plans were made immediately for increasing the standing army to 35,000 men by Jan. 1, with the possibility of further increasing it to 100000 within the year.

The mobilization plan provides for three lines of defense the first eventually to comprise 10,000 between 17 and 30. To assure this number, it is said in official circles that conscription will take the place of the voluntary system of enlistment, which has been in effedt until now.

The selond line is to ronsist of an army of 500,000 men between 30 and 37, with detarhments in every city and town in the repbblic. These men are to be mobilized on a war footing, ready for service at short notice, though it is not believed that they will be kept under arms, the plan apparently being to organize them as a home guard and permit them to attend to their business affairs, devoting stated periods of time to drill.

In addition to these two armies there is to be a reserve army, to be known as the national guard, comprising men between 37 and 44. The officers of this force are to be chosen from Government administrative officers, commercial men, and employers of industry.

AN EXCITING BATTLE IN THE CLOUDS

Told By a Peterborough Boy

Sometimes there comes over the front a certain deathly silence which is far more nerve rending than the crashing and roaring of heavy artillery barrage, a silence which comes at no briden moment from either side, but to all intent might be the shadow of the Almighty overhanging, paying tribute to the brave heroes who have paid the supreme sacrifice for a noble cause. It was on such an evening after a beautiful September day, the sun fading away to its well-earned rest, a slight haze stretching itself in a filmy wave across the sky, a noticeable characteristic of a French sundown. When, without previous warning, the great "silence" was broken by a sharp succession of whizz bangs of anti-aircraft shells bursting, signifying an enemy plane over our lines, to all purposes looking for information, but generally finding trouble. Dashing out of my dug-out, for the shells were bursting rather lower than usual, I immediately realized that Fritz was up to some mischief. I was out just in time to witness a German aeroplane make a great descent from the higher regions of the sky, heading towards our observation balloon, which was floating complacently at a low attitude nearby. As he neared the balloon the anti-aircraft ceased fire on account of the probability of doing injury to both observer and baloon, but the silence was at once interrupted by the rat-tat-tat of the airman's machine gun as he went flying by in a death-defying swoop. Ah! he missed it, was the general comment. At this he turned his plane back, at the same time rising to a height from where he might make another swoop. We did not even let so much as a whisper escape us, everyone so intent upon what the result of the next attempt might be. "There he goes," his machine-gun working at full speed. "Yes, he got it all right that time," as a small flame appeared in the side of the balloon the size of an ordinary candle light, gradually spreading itself into a great flame, immediately falling to the earth, which made a magnificent spectacle. While all this excitement was going on the observer, to whom great credit should be given, sticking to his post until the last, was not idle in between the airplane swoops. He had busied himself adjusting his parachute and had started to descend just before the enemy made the second attempt. The German, seeing this, was not satisfied with destroying the balloon which, giving him his due, was well performed, made our blood boil with wrath, and showed the dastardly barbarous, Hunnish methods, by turning his machine gun upon the unprotected observer, but thank God the fates had foiled him, the observer reaching the ground safely. After having destroyed the balloon, the anti-aircraft guns had nothing to fear, so immediately a barrage was set up behind the German, which made it impossible for him to return back home, only at a great risk. Finding himself in a dangerous position, he points the nose of his plane towards the ground. Immediately everyone had the exclamation on his lips, "They have got him." No, he is not down; just a strategical move to elude our anti-aircraft gunners, but not for long, as by this time our airmen had received knowledge of this daring intruded. Ah, here they come, one, two, three, four of them in battle formation, speeding swiftly to the scene of action. Upon nearing the enemy one of our planes was seen to dart away from the formation to engage the airman, meanwhile his comrades forming an outer circle, allowing the Fritz machine no escape should he shake off his pursuer. But, true to the British bull-dog style, the latter hangs right on the tail of an opponent, following him in great swoops through the sky. At this we were all help spell bound, as the Fritz performed a corkscrew dive in an effort to foil the aim of our airman. This tactic, instead of being his salvation, was his undoing. Too late! Our airmen, contemplating the manoeuvre, made a sudden swoop, and the upward one of the dive, gave Fritz his drum of machine gun bullets, which evidently found their mark. He was immediately seen to volplane to the ground, for all the world like a winged bird. Not being satisfied with being brought to earth in a fair fight, he turned his revolver on his captor, who had landed close by, but again he was foiled in his dastardly work, our airmen getting the drop on him, shooting him in the shoulder. About this time a great commotion was in progress. A crowd had gathered around the captured plane, and to all intentions was going to lynch the prisoner, which, perhaps, was no more than what he deserved for the Hunnish method we all had witnessed within the last fifteen minutes, but the prompt action of the officers around saved the nasty situation.

Peterborough Defeated Orillia For Neill-Sheppard Cup By 8 Shots

Peterborough won the Neill-Sheppard trophy from Orillia yesterday afternoon by 8 shots. Four rinks played here and four in Orillia. Peterborough was 13 shots up at home, with a score of 79 to 66, but the rinks away were 5 down.

The local games furnished a full measure of skillful curling. It was originally planned to go 16 ends, but the train from Port Hope was twenty-five minutes late, enabling the rinks to play the regular 18 ends.

Had the games finished at the 16th end Peterobrough's net margin would have been a solitary shot.

The close frendly relations that have always existed between the Orillia and Peterborough Clubs was manifested here yesterday. On every rink the contests were keen and decidedly interesting. The scores were as follows:

Ancient Feats

ARMED GUARDS PRODDED LABOURERS TO SPEED THEM UP—BY-PRODUCTS OF WAR.

How did the engineers of ancient times manage to erect such enormous structures by hand labour without the aid of machinery?

This is a long-standing puzzle, but study of the subject within recent years has thrown much light upon it.

For instance, there is no doubt that the pyramids of Egypt were built by the help of inclined planes of earth, over which the big hewn stones were dragged.

Thus the great pyramid's capstone must have been the topmost point of an artificial hill, which was removed by digging it away when the structure was at length completed.

This and other Egyptian pyramids to-day may be climbed by a series of steps; but originally, of course, their faces were smooth, with an even slant on all sides. Weathering has done its inevitable work.

On an ancient Assyrian monument appears a carving which shows just how a huge monolith was transported 3,000 years or more ago. It is an image of a winged bull and must have weighed some hundreds of tons.

The bull (intended for the adornment of a palace or other important edifice) was carved at the quarry. It is "crated" and mounted on a sled, the latter being hauled by double hawsers, to which are harnessed regiments of men.

Only a few of the men appear in a picture of it, but enough to illustrate the idea. Other men lay rollers in front of the sled, which is "boosted" ahead from the rear by levers.

To steady the image during its progress guy-ropes and forked props are employed—the stout poles that form the "crate" affording grips for both. Each guy-rope (on either side of the bull) is held by two men; likewise, each forked prop.

Further examination of the carving shows that for every half dozen or so of the labourers engaged in this arduous task there was an armed guard, who constantly persuaded them to "get a move on" by threatening them with stick or lash.

In itself this last point is interesting, for it illustrates the fact that the erection of the mighty structures of antiquity was made possible by the employment of enormous numbers of slaves.

These slaves were a by-product of war. The enslavement of the Israelites by Egyptian conquerors and the use of them as labourers for building is made familiar by the Bible.—Philadelphia "Ledger."

BRAMPTON RINK HERE TO-NIGHT FOR CAREW CUP

Tom Thauburn's Brampton rink will play W. M. Lang's rink to-night for the Carew Cup. The challengers will arrive at 5.30 o'clock, and the game will commence about eight o'clock.

The Peterborough rink is composed of James Skinner, E. G. Sturgeon, R. M. Waddell, and W. M. Lang.

The game is expected to be decidedly interesting. Thauburn is a name to conjure with in Ontario curling, and the rink is well known in the Tankard games.

Army Has Not Fired A Shot In This War

WITHIN TWO MILES OF BATTLE FRONT AND EVER GROWING.

HALF A MILLION MEN READY.

Netherlands Trains One Lot and Sends Them Home to Let Others In —Equipment Increased.

THE HAGUE, Netherlands.—Only some two days' march north of the battle arena in Flanders stands a formidable army, intact, fresh and vigorous, that has not yet fired a shot in the great war. It is the army of the Netherlands.

That army is ever growing. The work of training began feverishly back in August, 1914, and it has been carried on without a break ever since in all parts of the country. A special law was passed some two years ago, greatly widening the circle of those liable to service, with the result that all the men under arms on 1st August, 1914, now have been relieved by newly-trained men and sent home, though they can be recalled to the colours immediately should occasion arise.

To Re-examine Rejected.

That the country's military leaders have no intention to rest on their oars after the achievement is shown by a bill that has just reached Parliament providing for a re-examination of all men of the Landsturm born since 1885 who had been rejected for one reason or another. This measure is expected to yield a very substantial amount of fresh human material.

How large a mass of trained men Holland could now place in the field is easily discernible. There is first the army that was mobilised in the days of the war's outbreak, probably not far short of a quarter of a million men, and now all at home on indefinite leave. Then there is the new army, now under arms, of a like size. Moreover, there is a very considerable body of men who, prior to 1914, had finished their period of fifteen years in militia, Landwehr and Landsturm, but who are subject to call should occasion require.

Half a Million Available.

This should bring the number of trained men available to half a million men and possibly well over that number, constituting a far more formidable and probably better-trained fighting force than the Netherlands has ever before possessed in her history.

In equipment, too, the Netherlands army has made great strides in the last three years. The ammunition industry has been reorganised and enormously extended. The artillery arm, in which the country was notoriously weak, has been reinforced in so far as material was obtainable. Some guns are on order. The delivery of anti-aircraft guns is also in course of execution.

Serious efforts are being exerted to improve Holland's aerial service. A rorganisation is contemplated that is estimated to cost beween $7,200,000 and $7,800,000. The new scheme provides for fifteen airplane divisions comprising fifty-eight battle planes and 66 scouting planes. Despite Germany's own big needs, the arrival of a dozen machines from that country was reported a few days ago.

Mr. W. A. Haslam Gets Windsor District

Driver Brooks Dies In France

Well Known Peterboro' Boy Passes Away in Casualty Clearing Station

Another well-known Peterborough boy has died in France in the person of Driver J. Millard Brooks, of the Canadian Artillery. Last week his father, Mr. J. M. Brooks, 199 Dalhousie street, received official word from Ottawa that Driver Brooks had been admitted to No. 18 Canadian Casualty Clearing Station on January 21st, dangerously ill with pneumonia. To-day the sad message came from Ottawa that Driver Brooks had succumbed to his illness at the same hospital on January 26th.

WHAT HE'D OBSERVED.

Mike had just returned from a visit to New York and eager neighbours were asking him to give his impressions.

"So ye've just been down to New York, Mike," said a farmer. "What's the difference between a big town and a little one"

"Well," said Mike, "in a big town the crowd follows the fire engine to find out where the fire is, and in a little one the fire engine follows the crowd to find out where it is!"

THE WEATHER

This morning showed 17 degrees below zero, being a cold beginning for another winter month—one which is generally the coldest of the winter. It is hardly likely it will equal the record of January past. Continuous weather records have been kept in this section for 48 years, and no previous January can equal the record of the past month for continuous cold weather. The officials of the Toronto Observatory say that January of 1857 was a trifle colder, but that was before most of the present generation came on the scene. Perhaps to-morrow a detailed statement of each day's temperature for the past two months will be published. Saturday will be Candlemas Day, when Bruin makes his first spring inspection of weather conditions, to decide whether he will continue his hibernation or not. Whether he sees his shadow or does not, one sniff of the brand of weather in vogue now, will probably cause his retirement for another six weeks.—W. P.

Cold Weather Affects Watches

Have you noticed any variation in your Watch or other time pieces during this extreme cold weather?

It may be that the sensitive working parts have been chilled, and clogging has taken place, especially if it has been some time since your Watch was cleaned.

Bring in your time piece. No charge for examination.
